House Unit Votes 33% Increase in Age Pensions

Action Follows Townsend Plan's Defeat; States Must Match U. S. Funds

By Robert C. Albright.

The Ways and Means Committee of the House last night voted to increase social security pensions to the aged needy from $30 to a maximum of $40 on a "matching" basis with the States.

Action came as the committee concluded broad liberalizations in the Social Security Act and ordered a favorable report to the House on amendments carrying increased benefits for aged men and women, widows, orphans and dependent parents and children.

The needy old-age pension increase was adopted on motion of Representative Dingell (Democrat), of Michigan.

Move to Appease Aged

It provides for an increase from $15 to $20 in the Federal contribution toward old-age assistance, but only where a State puts up a similar amount. Thus, instead of the present $30 top, pensions could go to $40, where States matched funds offered by the Federal Government.

Following in the wake of crushing House rejection of the $50-a-month Townsend old-age pension plan, the move was designed to meet efforts to appease the old folks when Social Security Act amendments go before the House next week.

Social Security Board actuaries estimated the change would cost the Government only $5,000,000 annually at the start, as few States now are matching the present $15 contribution toward $30 pensions.

"Suggestion to the States"

But Chairman Doughton of the Ways and Means Committee said this estimate was indefinite and "the cost might go to $100,000,000 if the States meet our offer."

"It is merely a suggestion to the States that 'if you go up, we will, too'," said Doughton. "There is a feeling in the House we are not giving enough. We are willing to help the States to this extent."

A more liberal provision, directing the board to provide three-fourths of the initial $20 and match the remaining $20 on a 50-50 basis was discussed but laid aside.

Dingell Motion Passed

Only Thursday, the committee had adopted another liberalizing change increasing from a third to a half the Federal contribution toward dependent child aid, at an added cost of $29,000,000.

Before approving a report on the amendments yesterday, the committee approved another motion by Dingell, extending social security, public health, maternal and dependent child aids to Puerto Rico, at a cost of $150,000.

$1,285,000,000 Taxes Saved

The revised bill, which will be made the special order of House business next Tuesday, alters the social security tax structure to save employers and workers an estimated $1,285,000,000 in taxes in the next three years and increases general benefits about $1,200,000,000 in the next five years.

Salient provisions:

Freeze old-age insurance tax at 1 per cent on worker and 1 per cent on employer for next three years, at estimated saving to them of $825,000,000.

Permit States to reduce unemployment insurance taxes where adequate reserves are maintained, saving employers $200,000,000 to $250,000,000 in 1940.

Make only the first $3,000 paid to employes subject to unemploy-

Senate Wives Win; Invited to Royal Party

International Understanding Is Reached After Legislators Get Taste of 'Doghouse;' Follows Luncheon With Ambassador Lindsay

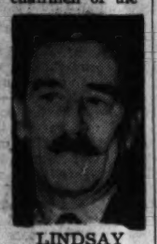
By the United Press.

The British Embassy last night bowed to relentless feminine pressure, and, as a result, more than two score United States Senators emerged from what they frankly admitted to be "doghouses" erected by their wives.

In brief, Senatorial wives who were not originally invited to the garden party which the British Embassy is giving for King George and Queen Elizabeth next week are going to go after all. The guest list also may be expanded to include more wives of House members.

Lady Lindsay, wife of Sir Ronald Lindsay, his Britannic Majesty's envoy to this country, originally decreed that only chairmen of the standing committees of the Senate and House, plus members of the Foreign Relations Committees of both chambers and the majority and minority leaders, could come to the fete, at which the visiting sovereigns will spend exactly 45 minutes.

GARNER



LINDSAY

This meant that only 47 Senators could attend the reception, accompanied by their wives. The plan definitely did not appeal to the helpmates of the 49 Senators who did not receive the coveted bids, and they promptly took steps.

In most cases, the husbands' reply went something like this:

"My dear, I have the prestige and dignity of my office to maintain. I cannot go to the embassy and ask the officials there to make an exception for me. That would look like social-climbing, and I simply will not do it."

The wives decided to take their case to Mrs. John Nance Garner, wife of the Vice President, who said she didn't think she could do anything, but would try.

Mrs. Garner whispered to her husband, who is noted for his dislike

Change Labor Act, Hopkins' Advisers Urge

Would Create 5-Man Board, 2 for Labor, 2 Business, 1 Public

Far-reaching changes in the Wagner labor relations act were recommended by the Commerce Department Business Advisory Council at conclusion of a two-day conference here yesterday.

The council, it was reported, submitted to Secretary Hopkins a three-page memorandum outlining its views as to how the act should be amended.

Hopkins, at a press conference, said he expected the council to present a report on the Wagner act containing "certain very specific recommendations." He made clear, however, that it would be kept secret.

One proposal which, it is understood, definitely was included in the council's recommendations would increase membership of the National Labor Relations Board from three to five. Two would represent business, two labor and one the public.

The council's suggestions, it is said, were based on changes proposed by its committee on industrial relations, of which Charles R. Hook, president of the American Rolling Mills Co., is chairman, and John D. Biggers, president of the Libbey-Owens-Ford Glass Co., Toledo, Ohio, is vice chairman.

Hook and Biggers were in the group of eight business leaders who

Committees To Report D.C. Budget Bills

Senators Approve Expenses; Levies Indorsed in House

Action on the District's 1940 revenue bill and supply bill yesterday coincided as sub-committees on both sides of the Capitol prepared to report the measures to their full committees.

A revised tax bill, in which a business-privilege levy had been substituted for a sales tax, was reported favorably by a House sub-committee headed by Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, while the Senate sub-committee on District appropriations finished the marking up of the supply bill.

The appropriations measure, details of which were not disclosed by Chairman Overton, will be presented to the full Senate Appropriations Committee today.

Increases Expected

While budgetary increases above the $47,000,000 voted by the House are expected, the extent will depend, it is understood, on whether or not the committee decides to boost the Federal lump-sum payment above the $5,000,000 carried in the House bill.

Should the committee agree to boost the lump sum, new schools and other municipal expansions are expected to be included in the bill.

The Nichols revenue bill was altered in only one major respect by the sub-committee. The primary exemption in the business privilege tax was raised from $2,000 to $3,000.

With four of five members present, the measure was reported unanimously, according to Chairman Nichols. The affirmative vote of Representative Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois, was a surprise, as Dirksen had stated he would oppose renewal of the gross receipts levy and demand that a personal income tax beginning at $2,500 be substituted.

Similar in other respects to the

Pine Given Records on Milk Lobby

Rep. Bates Suggests Prosecutor Turn Case of Faulkner Over to Grand Jury

By James D. Secrest.

Chairman Bates, of the House sub-committee conducting the District milk inquiry, yesterday turned over to United States Attorney Pine all records in the lobbying case involving Whiting Faulkner, Martinsburg (W. Va.) postmaster, and suggested that the evidence be presented to the grand jury.

Faulkner had denied to the sub-committee certain statements taken down by police stenographers during conferences between Faulkner and officials of the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association.

The police transcript quoted Faulkner as saying that he would produce the vote of Chairman Randolph, of the House District Committee, who in turn would swing Bates' vote, and at the same time direct the course of the milk inquiry and furnish the association confidential information obtained by J. Edward Burroughs, counsel of the sub-committee.

Asked $1,000 Fee

Faulkner asked $1,000 for his "services," which he insisted on the stand were legitimate as he was a lawyer as well as a postmaster.

Bates had stated immediately after Faulkner appeared before the subcommittee that the matter would be presented to the United States attorney's office, but he had waited until other members of the committee were present before turning over the records.

Bates, accompanied by Burroughs, held a half-hour conference with Pine. Before acting, Bates conferred with House leaders and members of the District Committee, it was learned, although Chairman Randolph stated that he would stand by Faulkner.

Bates' letter to Pine, which accompanied the transcripts of Faulkner's testimony before the sub-committee and the police recordings of his conversations with E. B. Derrick, secretary-treasurer, and other officials of the Maryland-Virginia Producers Association, said in part:

"These conversations took place in the presence of other parties and were recorded by officers of the Metropolitan Police Department.

Suggests Jury Be Told

"In view of the fact that in Mr. Faulkner's testimony before the committee he unqualifiedly denied having made these statements, which are recorded in the stenographic record, I, as chairman of the sub-committee, am submitting the matter to you for your attention for presentation to the grand jury if, in your opinion, such action is justified.

"I shall be glad to furnish you with the names of all parties who heard the conversations and of the police officers who made the records."

Pine said after the conference that the case would be expedited but declined to comment otherwise. The evidence was turned over to Police last night were warned to look out for an escaped mental patient from St. Elizabeths Hospital, described as "dangerous at times." The man was seen once in the 2100 block of Connecticut avenue northwest and scout cars were concentrated for a time in the neighborhood.

The man was said to be 51 years old, with long beard and long hair. He was dressed in khaki trousers and a white shirt with no necktie.

Navy Orders 24 Ships, 2 of 45,000 Tons

Largest Peacetime Contracts; Cost of Building Program Is $350,000,000

The largest warship-building program in peace-time history was launched yesterday, as orders were placed with shipyards for two 45,000-ton battleships and 22 other vessels costing a total of $350,000,000.

Acting Secretary Edison, describing the 160,000-ton order as "a fair-sized navy for the average smaller country," indicated that the Navy hopes by the move to regain the 5-to-3 tonnage ratio the United States once held over Japan.

"The ratio now is probably about 5 to 4, for both Great Britain and Japan were building ships during the years we were idle," he declared, "Even the construction programs we have had the last few years have not enabled us to catch up, we were so far behind."

By letting contracts ahead of normal schedule, a month before funds become available, and building duplicates of some of last year's vessels, the Navy expects to complete the 24 ships about six months ahead of normal time, Edison said. He said the decision to construct copies of last year's destroyers and submarines will save $2,000,000 without sacrificing quality in the ships.

Construction Lag Overcome

The lag in the shipbuilding program, in which many ships under construction a year or two ago were months behind schedule, has now been overcome, Edison declared. With but few exceptions progress reports show the program already under way to be "clicking" with some vessels well ahead of schedule, he said.

Already under construction are 74 vessels of 457,000 tons, so that shortly the Navy expects to have 98 craft with an aggregate tonnage of 617,000 on the ways or being fitted out.

Construction of the two huge battleships will take from 49 to 52 months, it was said. Costing $80,000,000 to $85,000,000 apiece, each vessel will mount nine 16-inch guns and "will make speeds faster than 28 knots," the Assistant Secretary declared. They will be built at the New York and Philadelphia navy yards.

Four light cruisers, an aircraft carrier, two seaplane tenders, eight destroyers and seven submarines were included in yesterday's orders. Contracts for the cruisers, of a new design, went to the Federal Shipbuilding Co. and Bethlehem Steel Co. for $12,226,000 apiece, each company building two. Speedy vessels of 6,000 tons, they will mount 6-inch guns and carry the latest high pressure propulsion, Edison said.

Carrier to Cost $31,800,000

The contract for the aircraft carrier—the Hornet—went to the Newport News Shipbuilding Co. for $31,800,0000. Funds for it and the cruisers were provided last year, while money for the others is carried in the $773,000,000 naval supply bill

England Is Told Hitler Purged 30 Army Officers

London, June 2 (U.P.).—The Yorkshire Post, published by the family of Mrs. Anthony Eden, reported today that Fuehrer Hitler has started a new purge in the German army.

Thirty officers, including five generals who held responsible positions, already have been purged, according to the newspaper.

Opposition to a policy which they feared would involve Germany in war was given as the reason for the new purge. Generals involved were said to be Gen. Loeb, who had been placed in charge of a military organization of industry under the Nazi four-year plan; Gen. Stuelpnagel, who held a high office in the air force; Gen. Quade, of the air force college; Gen. Liebmann, commandant of the War Academy, and the officer commanding the Fifth Army Corps.

Liquor Board Bans Curb-Service Beer

Curb-service sale of beer and other alcoholic beverages yesterday was prohibited by the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board.

Tappings Revive Hope For 90 in Submarine; Night Rescue Rushed

Signals Are Heard After Deadline For Exhaustion Of Air Supply

By the Associated Press.

Birkenhead, England, June 3 (Saturday).—Despite abandonment of hope by builders of the submarine Thetis, the admiralty announced today that divers reported faint tappings on the hull of the vessel in which 90 men are entrapped.

The tappings were heard at 2 a. m. (8 p. m., E. S. T. Friday), the admiralty said.

As a consequence of these faint signs of life, the admiralty directed a vast array of rescue ships to push forward their operations throughout the night in attempts to raise the stern of the craft "when slack water provides the next opportunity."

The builders of the vessel had given up for dead the men aboard her. It had been estimated that at the expiration of 36 hours under water—20 minutes before the tappings were reported heard—the air supply would be exhausted.

Await Low Tide

Low tide was not expected until 6 a. m. and this would be more than four hours beyond the 36-hour deadline.

Earlier a naval officer arriving at Liverpool Hospital with one of the four survivors of the accident had said salvage would be deferred until dawn and that hope had been abandoned by squads of workers as well as the submarine builders.

Ambulance squad workers were dismissed and pier lights were extinguished here, but the admiralty statement showed that the full rescue force was at work at the disaster scene.

"I am sorry, but there is no hope for the men remaining in the submarine," Sydney Woodward, secretary of the Cammell Laird Shipyard, said brokenly to a crowd dotted with wives and relatives of the seamen and civilian occupants of the vessel.

Four of those who were in the vessel were saved through use of the Davis "lung" apparatus. Three others were said by a lifeboat crew to have perished in an attempt to follow the four to the surface.

Admiralty's Statement

The admiralty made the following announcement 33 hours after the submarine went down at 1:40 p. m. (British summer time) Thursday, 8 miles off Lynas Point, Anglesey, Wales:

"The stern of H. M. S. Thetis did not reappear as anticipated when the tide slackened at 6 p. m. and an attempt is now being made to lift the stern with pontoons.

"The admiralty regrets to state, however, that hope of saving any further lives is now diminishing."

The submarine was found at 7:50 a. m. Friday with about 18 feet of her tail out of water, her nose

Committee To Act Monday On Arms Sale

State Department Aides to Testify Before Bloom Group

By International News Service.

Voting on parts of the Bloom bill to carry out Secretary of State Hull's proposal for neutrality legislation will be begun by the House Foreign Affairs Committee Monday, pursuant to an agreement reached behind closed doors yesterday.

With representatives of the State Department present, the committee will consider the measure paragraph by paragraph, it was revealed. A final vote was not expected until Wednesday or Thursday.

Representative Bloom (Democrat), of New York, acting chairman, reiterated a prediction the committee will approve a provision to permit sale of munitions to warring nations and report the measure favorably to the House.

It was upon the proviso for sale of munitions to belligerents that foes of the measure have centered their attacks. The existing neutrality act forbids sale of arms and ammunition to warring nations after the President proclaims a war in progress abroad.

A clash occurred at yesterday's committee meeting between Republican and Democratic members, with Representatives Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, and Fish (Republican), of New York, demanding that Secretary Hull be invited to testify.

Democrats accused Republicans of "trying to play politics" with the neutrality issue and said Tinkham and Fish sought to embarrass the Secretary. This they denied.

The flare-up ended when Bloom said Hull would not be asked to appear, because "they (the Republicans) want to ask him questions he can't answer."

Coffee Urges Court-Martial For Moseley

Representative Says General Was Guilty Of 'Insubordination'

A demand for the court-martial of Gen. George Van Horn Moseley has been presented to President Roosevelt and Secretary Woodring by Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Washington, The Post learned last night.

Moseley, retired commander of the Fourth Corps Area evidenced "insubordination" in his recent testimony before the Dies committee investigating un-American activities, Coffee charged.

The Washington Democrat asserted Moseley deserved court-martial because of his references to President Roosevelt, his Commander in Chief. Coffee added that the former Army officer was guilty of making "subversive" statements and acted in a manner "unbecoming an officer."

"Gen. Moseley indicated he thought that the President has sold the country down the river," Coffee told The Post. "I think his statements indicate insubordination."

In his testimony before the Dies committee, Moseley said "the White House" could rid the country of the Communist menace "in five minutes" by discharging Communists from the Government and giving the Army power to fight "the enemy within our gates."

That the Army has been interested in the committee hearings was indicated by comment of an Army spokesman last night, who said, "we have had observers at the hearings to make ourselves conversant with what's going on."

Secretary of War Woodring refused to say yesterday whether any action was intended against Gen. Moseley.

Head Cold, Fever Keep President From His Desk

By the Associated Press.

A head cold, sinus infection and one-half degree of fever yesterday confined President Roosevelt to his bedroom and study on orders of his physician, Rear Admiral Ross T. McIntire.

As a result, the President's semi-weekly press conference and a week-end cruise on Chesapeake Bay were canceled.

Improved weather may permit the cruise today, McIntire said. Otherwise, the President will confine himself to a Sunday afternoon trip on the Potomac River.

Zoo Wonders if Mollie Is Hatching Eggs or Bombs

Mollie and Moe Set On 2 Eggs, Undaunted By Rivals' Explosion

It's those penguins again.

A visit to the Zoo yesterday disclosed that Mollie and Moe, probably the most famous penguin couple in the country, are attempting once more to bring forth young, undismayed by the egg explosion which killed the parenthood ambitions of a rival couple, Tux and Ada, last week.

According to keepers, Mollie laid an egg on May 14 and another two days later. The incubation period is 40 days. She and Moe are taking turns on the nest, with the latter chivalrously working the night shift.

Ada laid her two eggs in mid-April, three days apart. One day last week, toward the end of the incubation period, her aplomb was jarred when one of the eggs, suddenly and without warning, blew up. Thereupon a sympathetic keeper removed the other, still intact but infertile, to save Ada further discomfort.

This is the fourth clutch for Mollie and Moe and it was Tux and Ada's second. The former couple hatched two young ones in March, 1938, but produced nothing but abortive explosions the following June and again last October.

"It's a derby, that's what it is," sighed a keeper.

Refugees Quit Cuba, Buoyed By Hope U.S. Will Harbor Them

By the Associated Press.

Havana, Cuba, June 2.—A desperate boatload of 907 German Jewish refugees sailed out of Havana harbor today, heartened somewhat by a shipboard rumor that they might yet find new homes in the Western World after being denied entry into Cuba.

Hamburg, Germany, their starting point, was the destination of the German liner St. Louis, whose departure marked another unsuccessful attempt by German Jews to settle in this hemisphere.

But to avoid collective suicide attempts, word was spread on board that the United States Government had authorized their landing in New York if continuing efforts for their entry into Cuba failed.

Kept from them was the news from Washington that Government officials there said no arrangements had been made for them to land in New York or any other United States port.

[Instead, it is anchored approximately 12 miles off Havana, the paper stated.

[The Herald reported the delay apparently was in response to appeals from powerful influences in the United States who have undertaken to straighten out the situation so that the refugees may be landed either at Havana to await immigration under the quota restrictions into the United States, or at some other port on the Atlantic Coast—Editor's note.]

Smiles spread over tear-stained faces among refugees when the rumor spread, just before sailing time, that a new appeal was being made for them.

Despite the high spirits aboard when the St. Louis sailed, relatives

U. S. Chamber Proposes 15% Corporate Tax

Alvord Also Asks Undivided Profits Levy Be Repealed

Commending Treasury tax recommendations as a "constructive approach," the United States Chamber of Commerce yesterday urged a 9-year program for immediate business tax relief plus studies toward "a stable, permanent revenue system."

Ellsworth C. Alvord, the chamber's tax spokesman, recommended immediate repeal of the remaining undivided profits tax and imposition of a flat-rate normal corporation tax of 15 per cent, with a $2,000 credit for companies earning less than $25,000.

Testifying before the House Ways and Means committee, Alvord, a former assistant secretary of the Treasury, declared healthy and permanent recovery can only be attained by transition from Government spending to private investment and Federal encouragement of private enterprise.

Hearings Limited

Following his testimony, the Ways and Means committee adopted a resolution limiting the current tax hearings to the corporate tax structure. Committee Democrats were noncommittal on his recommendations. Chairman Doughton said only they were "very interesting."

Business tax witnesses to testify today include C. H. Mylander, of the American Bankers Association; Noel Sargent, of the National Association of Manufacturers and M. L. Seidman, of the New York Board of Trade.

Action of the committee in limiting discussions to the corporate tax structure apparently barred consideration of changes in the individual income tax structure. Prosposals had been made to scale down high individual income surtaxes as a business stimulant.

Secretary Morgenthau had suggested this might be studied if Congress at the same time decided to take action to eliminate tax-exempt securities.

Alvord Disagrees

This was one of "two minor exceptions" taken by Alvord to Morgenthau's views. Alvord said he could not agree that reduction of individual surtax rates, which he called "far too high," should wait on taxation of public security issues. Alvord's other reservation from Morgenthau's statement was aimed at his listing of "a more equitable distribution of national income" as a tax policy objective. Alvord said his reservation was "based on the fact that we do not understand the statement."

The 15 per cent flat corporate tax levy proposed by Alvord compares with the 18 per cent flat rate recently discussed in conversations between Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee, Chairman Doughton and the Treasury.

Alvord challenged "assumptions" that a rate above 15 per cent would produce increased revenue, warning that increases above what he called "a point of maximum productivity" would diminish business volume and the total profits subject to tax.

"The only way, in which more revenue can be realized from corporations is by stimulating increased business activity," he testified.

$7,000,000,000 Base

"Given an industrial production of about 105 and a corporate tax basis of $7,000,000,000, a 15 per cent rate would produce over a billion dollars, approximately the amount that will be collected for the current calendar year at present rates."

He said this contemplates "only a moderate expansion of business volume over present estimates."

Albord declared there is "no legitimate excuse for retaining the 2½ per cent undistributed profits tax" and denied repeal would encourage tax avoidance. He declared the law already carries adequate safeguards against "incorporated pocketbooks."

Other tax changes proposed by Alvord for "immediate action" included a three-year carry-over of net business losses, simplification of the individual capital gain provitions as ordinary gains and losses, tinction" between assets held 18 and 24 months, treatment of "long term" capital gains and losses of corporationsas ordinary gains and losses, annual declaration of capital stock value, permission for affiliated groups to file consolidated returns, exemption from tax of all intercorporate dividends and exclusion of corporate dividends from individual normal tax.

Alvord said the committee should study a long-range program for later action, looking to a reasonably permanent revenue system, the basic principles of which would remain in force for at least ten years.

For the long range program, Alvord suggested elimination of "unnecessarily complicated policies and refinements," reduction of individual surtaxes so they will not discourage private initiative, reduction of the capital gains tax, an effective earned income credit, revision of estate tax laws, repeal of the capital stock and excess profits taxes and removal of excise tax inequities.

Favor Adequate Defense

First on the chamber's recovery goal list, Alvord named "maintenance of a democratic form of Government" and listed adequate national defense, reduction of unemployment to the 1929 level, a balanced budget and an $80,000,000,000 to $100,000,000,000 national income as other objectives.

But he said "we are very far from the fulfillment of our objectives." Urging promotion of private investment, he observed: "While public expenditures have more than doubled in the last decade, private investment has dwindled even more rapidly. In fact, new private investment seems almost to have disappeared."

McLeod Demands FCC Resign for Radio Order

Charging the Federal Communications Commission is attempting to censor the air waves, Representative McLeod (Republican), of Michigan, yesterday demanded that the entire membership of the FCC resign.

McLeod's militant demand came as he attacked a recent commission order which, he said, required radio broadcasters to delete matter from their scripts that might prove offensive in international programs.

Contract for 24 New Naval Vessels

Contracts for construction of 24 naval vessels, costing approximately $350,000,000, were signed yesterday by Assistant Secretary of Navy Charles Edison (seated). Rear Admiral W. B. Woodson (center), judge advocate general, and Warren Lane, assistant judge advocate (left) signed by President Roosevelt last week.

Orders for destroyers were split evenly between Navy and private yards, the Bath Iron Works getting two of the 1,630-ton craft at $4,813,000 each, and the Federal Shipbuilding Co. two at $4,895,000 apiece. The Boston and Charleston Navy yards each were allocated two of the ships.

The Portsmouth, N. H., Navy yard received orders for three submarines, two of them similar to the sunken Squalus, while the Mare Island Navy yard was given one and the Electric Boat Co. three of the others. The two seaplane tenders, 1,650 tons each, were allocated to the Puget Sound Navy Yard.

Edison said a contract for a small submarine will be awarded in the next few days and an order for a repair ship before the end of the month. This will leave orders for only two vessels of the 1940 program—two cruisers of new design—still to be placed, and these will be let in September, it was indicated.

Edison expressed gratification at the speed shown, saying that normally it was December before most contracts are let. He revealed that some builders already have ordered materials in expectation of the awards, to expedite construction.

Propelling machinery for six submarines also was ordered, the Fairbanks, Morse Co. receiving contracts for three sets, costing $2,824,575, and the General Motors Co. three for $2,606,001.

As these awards were being announced, President Roosevelt signed a bill authorizing $54,000,000 worth of construction at naval shore stations. Much of the money will be spent to expand ship repair facilities, including an $8,485,000 graving dock at Pearl Harbor, Hawaii. Another major item is a $6,500,000 supply base at Oakland, Calif.

In another development, the Maritime Commission called for bids on cargo vessels of a new "C-1" design. They will be 413 feet long, capable of 14-knot speeds, and will have gun platforms and other special national defense features built into them.

Labor Act Change Urged by Council

had dinner at the White House Thursday night. The group, it was learned, suggested to the President these five main changes in the Wagner act:

Reorganization of the Labor Board and enlargement of its membership to five.

Amendments which would permit employers to discuss collective bargaining questions with employes—something which the act now prohibits as "coercive."

Provisions permitting the Labor Board to act as mediator in employer-employe disputes.

Extension to employers of the right to petition the Labor Board to settle jurisdictional disputes between rival labor organizations as to which should have the right to represent their workers in collective bargaining negotiations.

Provisions outlining specifically the rules of evidence the Labor Board would be required to follow in hearings on complaints.

Would Separate Functions

Authoritative reports were that these proposals had formed the basis of the council's recommendations to Hopkins. Whether other changes were suggested was not clear, but it was learned that the committee on industrial relations had favored provisions making labor unions financially liable for failure to carry out collective bargaining agreements.

Another proposal which had strong support in the council, it was learned, would separate the administrative and judicial functions of the labor board. This suggestion would have to do with proposed reorganization of the board.

Draper's Proposal

Other developments relating to business were:

Ernest G. Draper, member of the Federal Reserve Board and former Assistant Secretary of Commerce, proposed to the Senate Banking Committee that a corporation be created within the Reserve System to extend "additional credit facilities to small business on a much more liberal and flexible basis." He said Chairman Marriner S. Eccles would explain the plan to the committee in detail Monday.

Jerome Frank, chairman of the Securities and Exchange Commission, recommended to the committee that it approve the Meac bill for insurance by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation of loans to small business. Eventually, he said, he believes a system of regional capital credit banks would have to be created to take care of needs of small business for capital funds, but insurance of bank loans would be a "step in the right direction."

Hopkins told newspapermen he favored the Mead bill in principle. He was inclined to be sympathetic to a plan for capital credit banks presented to the Monopoly committee by Assistant Secretary of State Berle, but he did not indorse the suggestion.

More White House Conferences

He revealed also plans for future White House conferences with business leaders and probably with farm and labor groups. The same group that had dinner at the White House Thursday night may be called back, he intimated.

Future discussions, if present plans go through, Hopkins said, will embrace Government fiscal policies, use of credit to promote business recovery, aid to small business and the whole relationship of the Government to great groups of industries.

Discussion at the Whit House meeting Thursday night, Hopkins declared, ran the whole gamut of economic problems. The businessmen did considerable talking to the President on the Wagner act. Other matters discussed included promotion of foreign trade, particularly with Latin America; taxes, and use of idle funds in business expansion.

"The whole importance of this, as well as of future conferences," he declared, "is to bring about a reasonable meeting of minds between those in charge of Government and businessmen.

"I am interested in removing discussion of these great fundamental questions from the realm of partisan politics. Neither should the discussion be left to those to whom these problems are simple. They are not simple and they do not lend themselves to ready solutions."

"Make System Function Better"

The central thought in his discussions with business, Hopkins declared, is "what will make our economic system function better." Naturally, he said, the crux of the problem is to put men to work and to find ways to induce idle money to take risks.

The conference between the President and the business leaders, Hopkins emphasized, was in a spirit of complete friendliness. There were no "political speeches," he declared.

He revealed the President had showed no disposition to favor changing the Wagner act. At the same time, he said, an effort will be made to bring about a meeting of minds within the Administration on this question. When this is done, the Administration will have a "point of view" on suggestions by business leaders for changes.

So far as changes proposed by the council are concerned, he pointed out he did not "have to accept them." He said he felt the group that called at the White House did not necessarily have "any more wisdom about what ought to be done than a group of labor people, or of farmers, or of the unemployed for that matter."

New Members Elected

Hopkins laid stress on ability of the Administration to effect changes through administrative procedure without resorting to legislation. The inference drawn was that substantial opportunities lay in this direction for working out with business leaders or other groups solutions to particular problems.

The following new members were elected to membership on the council: Richard C. Patterson, jr., who resigned recently as Assistant Secretary of Commerce, reportedly because of the transfer to the State Department of the foreign trade reporting section of the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce, and Harvey C. Couch, Southwestern business leader and former member of the RFC.

Strike-Bound Arlington Brick Plant to Close

With 24 State troopers on hand, the strike-bound West Brick Co., in Arlington, Va., will discontinue operations today, L. Perry West, president, announced last night. All men, West said, would be paid off before the plant is closed.

He added that representatives of the strikers, who walked out Monday, failed to keep an appointment Wednesday for a conference. The plant, he said, has an insufficient force to continue work.

West declared the plant has had no previous labor trouble in its 35 years of existence. Some employes, he said, have worked there 20 years with no complaint until this week.

Two colored men were arrested last night and charged with five counts of assault and destroying private property after several West trucks were halted in Washington, their drivers beaten and ignition wires torn from the engines. They said they were striking employes of the West plant.

Murphy Backs Laws Against Labor Spies

Favors Legislation Curbing Company Police in Strikes

By the Associated Press.

Legislation to restrict activities of industrial police and forbid use of labor spies and strikebreakers won hearty indorsement yesterday from Attorney General Murphy.

In testimony before a Senate Labor Committee, Murphy expressed opinion some such legislation was "greatly needed" to insure industrial peace.

Senators LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, and Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, members of the subcommittee, are authors of the bill.

Byrl A. Whitney, director of the educational and research bureau of the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, asserted the bill should be enacted to safeguard civil liberties.

Murphy sounded a note of caution about a proposal in the bill to make available to employers the identification records of the Department of Justice so they could determine whether an applicant for a guard's job had a criminal record.

Records Confidential

"It has been our policy to keep these identification records confidential and to change this policy might be detrimental to the best interests of law enforcement," he said.

Murphy indorsed particularly a section of the bill which would prohibit armed private police from leaving property of the employer in carrying out their duties. He said testimony obtained by the Civil Liberties Committee concerning activities of some such police in the "little steel" strike of 1937 had demonstrated need for such legislation.

The bill also would forbid private police to use tear gas. LaFollette asked Murphy if he believed use of offensive gas had not touched off a riot in a picket line at the Newton Steel Co. plant at Monroe, Mich., in the "little steel" strike.

The Attorney General, Governor of Michigan at time of the strike, said he thought it had aggravated the situation.

Attacks Girdler

Whitney read a statement in which he attacked Tom Girdler, chairman of the board of Republic Steel Corporation, and William F. Long, general manager of the Associated Industries of Cleveland. He said:

"The records of your Civil Liberties Committee show that Mr. Girdler's corporation, Republic Steel, has a uniformed police force of nearly 400 men, whom it has equipped not only with revolvers, rifles and shotguns but also with more tear gas and sickening gas and gas equipment than has been purchased by any other corporation, or by any law-enforcement body, local, State or Federal, in this Nation."

ment insurance taxes, at annual saving to employers of $65,000,000.

Refund cash to employers late in paying their 1936-38 unemployment insurance contributions, saving them $15,000,000 annually.

Payment Advanced

Besides liberalizing old-age insurance benefits, the bill provides supplementary benefits for aged wives and for widows, children and aged, dependent parents; advances date for beginning payments to January 1, 1940.

An estimated 1,100,000 additional persons (seamen, bank employes and employed persons over 65), brought under old-age insurance coverage, and 200,000 more (mainly bank employes), brought under unemployment insurance; exempt about 300,000 others by redefining "agricultural labor."

Increase Federal grants to States for vocational rehabilitation by $1,000,000 a year.

Created a Federal old-age survivor trust fund to safeguard insurance benefit funds, with the secretaries of Labor and Treasury and the chairman of the Social Security Board designated trustees.

Benefits Altered

Adjustments made in the contributary old age insurance systems would increase benefits paid to single and married persons retiring in the early years of the program, but reduce benefits of single persons with high earnings in the later years. The committee said the annual cost as a result will be greater in the early years and less in the later, "but the annual cost over 40 years should be about the same under the present system."

Pointing out that increased taxes may have to be levied later to finance the program, the report said "it is possible that the annual cost of the benefits may begin to exceed the annual tax collections about 1955 or even somewhat sooner."

Early Passage Of Health Bill Held Doubtful

Senator Murray Says Hearings Won't End Before Adjournment

Hope for enactment of the Wagner health bill at this session of Congress dwindled yesterday when Senator Murray, Chairman of the Labor and Education sub-committee conducting hearings on it, said action can hardly be completed by July 15, the tentative date for adjournment.

The Montana Democrat's statement came shortly before hearings on the measure, which provides annual federal expenditures of $80,000,000, were recessed for ten days.

"If we are to have a July 15 adjournment," said Murray, "there hardly will be time to complete hearings on this legislation, draft and adopt the necessary amendments and get the bill passed by that time."

Dr. Parran Testifies

Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the U. S. Public Health Service, told the subcommittee that the health bill "would socialize more of the costs of medical care but not socialize medicine itself."

Reminded of existence of Congressional sentiment to balance the budget, Dr. Parran countered with the assertion that it would actually be economical to increase public health expenditures.

"It is cheaper," he said, "to keep a woman from dying in childbirth than it is to take care of an orphaned child in an institution. It is cheaper to help in the building of tuberculosis sanitaria than it is to support the widows and orphans of those who die from tuberculosis."

Facilities Lacking, He Says

Dr. Parran argued that 500 counties throughout the Nation lack hospital facilities. One of the "planks" in the national health program is construction of hospitals and diagnostic centers, where needed, under grants in aid to the States by the Federal Government.

Chairman Arthur J. Altmeyer, of the Social Security Board, also indorsed the Wagner bill, while advocating certain changes in the proposed administrative setup.

Other Federal officials who urged passage of the measure yesterday were Miss Katherine F. Lenroot and Dr. Martha M. Eliot, chief and assistant chief, respectively, of the Children's Bureau.

Drs. Leslie R. Burdette, president, and M. Luther Dicus, third vice president, of the American Optometric Association, said their organization "is in complete accord with the underlying principles and objectives" of the bill, desiring only that optometrists will not be discriminated against if the measure becomes law.

WPA Project Reported Done On Forgeries

Application Falsely Signed for Nashville Park, Says Witness

Private profit from publicly constructed lakes and execution of a project on the basis of a forged application were charged yesterday before the House committee investigating the WPA.

The allegation of forgery was made by T. H. Reavis, general accounting office investigator loaned to the committee. An application for a Nashville park project undertaken by the WPA carried the forged signatures of two Nashville park commission officials, Reavis testified. Nevertheless, the $329,000 project was carried out, he said.

WPA-constructed lakes in Tennessee will result in private profit to owners of neighboring lands, Harry S. Barger, committee investigator, asserted. One such lake, Marrowbone, has cost the Government more than $117,000 and the State more than $26,000, said Barger.

Club Owns Property

He asserted that when the project was completed, land deeded to the State along the shore would be covered with water—so that private land would be contiguous to the lake. Some of this property is owned by a club of which Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Rawlings are the proprietors, he said, adding that they said they expected to sell the land. He said Mr. and Mrs. Rawlings had intended to build the lake themselves a few years ago but found it too costly.

A letter addressed to Aubrey Williams, former deputy administrator of WPA, was introduced in the record from former Senator Berry, of Tennessee, head of Pressmen's Home, near which a WPA lake was constructed.

Berry said in the letter, dated in April, 1938, that "the attitude of the Works Progress Administration is perfectly amazing. You, in substance, say the WPA has built the dam; spent the Federal Government's money; the dam is impractical, unsound and unsafe, therefore, the responsibility is upon the sponsors. If this is not an illustration of waste, incapacity and utter ignorance in the conduct of the WPA, then I am more mistaken than I have ever been in anything in my life."

Orphans' Home Brought Up

Barger testified that trustees of the Vine Street Orphans' Home at Chattanooga had deeded the property to the city in order to circumvent the law providing that WPA funds can only be spent for projects on publicly owned property. It was understood, said the witness, that on completion of the project the property would be returned to the trustees of the home, which is a private institution. The project cost WPA $213,000 and the sponsors $103,000, said Barger.

Reavis complained to the committee he had difficulties with Col. H. S. Berry, Tennessee WPA administrator, in making his investigations of WPA projects.

Meanwhile, the WPA announced that employment rolls had decreased 15,438 since May 17, to a total of 2,606,885.

Ralph Hetzel, jr., C. I. O. unemployment director, presented a written plea to the committee on behalf of a bill introduced by Representative Casey (Democrat), Massachusetts, providing for 3,000,000 WPA jobs for the coming fiscal year. A minimum grant of $2,250,000,000 would be required, said Hetzel.

WPA Deputy Says Men Seek Other Jobs

Stories about Works Progress Administration employes leaning on shovels and making a career of their joblessness are the bunk, Deputy WPA Administrator Howard O. Hunter said last night in a radio address.

Actual truth of the matter, he said, is that more than 100,000 WPA workers leave the agency's rolls each month, "the minute they get a chance to get back into private industry."

Articles of incorporation for the club were filed by H. Mooney, Detroit real estate man. Mooney is president of the club and Mrs. Mooney vice president and secretary.

A Senate committee yesterday approved payment of mileage for trips home for a limited number of secretaries of members of Congress.

Reporting a bill to revise mileage tables provided for officers and men of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps, Coast Guard, Coast and Geodetic Survey and Public Health Service, the Senate Military Committee tacked on an amendment to grant similar travel allowances for Congressional secretaries. Two employes of each Senator and one of each House member would be compensated for a trip home and back between sessions.

The allowance would be 8 cents a mile, as compared to the 20 cents a mile allowed members of Congress. Under the mileage table revision contemplated, routes would be determined via the shortest passage available, whether rail, bus or air, and should cut travel payments to Government personnel. The existing table is based on rail routes only.

The House passed and sent to the White House a bill creating the post of Under Secretary of Commerce after engaging in lengthy debate of the Administration's policies affecting business.

Representative Wadsworth (Republican), New York, opposed the bill on the grounds that the position is unnecessary as Edward J. Noble, who is slated to fill it, could be appointed Assistant Secretary of Commerce to succeed Richard C. Patterson, recently resigned.

Purchase by the Tennessee Valley Authority of properties of the Tennessee Electric Power Co. was opposed vigorously by John D. Battle, executive secretary of the National Coal Association before the House Military Affairs Committee.

He contended that a proposal by Senator Norris (Independent), Nebraska, to authorize the TVA to issue $100,000,000 in bonds to make the purchase would be tantamount to giving the agency "a blank check for $100,000,000 to buy whatever and wherever it pleases."

Representative Scrugham (Democrat), of Nevada, introduced a bill designed to lower rates on power generated at Boulder Dam. He said the decrease could be effected by lowering from 4 to 3 per cent the interest rate on money borrowed from the Federal Government for construction of the dam.

Faulkner's Testimony at Milk Inquiry

Denies Most of Statements Read From Stenographic Report

Following are pertinent excerpts from the testimony of Whiting Faulkner, Martinsburg (W. Va.) postmaster, before the House sub-committee conducting the milk inquiry on May 24, a copy of which was presented to United States Attorney David A. Pine yesterday:

(The questions were asked by J. Edward Burroughs, committee counsel, and the answers were given by Faulkner, except where otherwise identified.)

Q. Mr. Faulkner, you heard Derrick's testimony. You have met him before, have you not?

A. On several occasions; yes, sir.

Q. And at the time that you met with him did you offer to sell your services to the association for the sum of $1,000?

A. I did not offer to sell my services. I offered to occupy the usual relationship of attorney and client at that time.

Q. And what were you going to do for the association as an attorney?

A. To use my influence in every legitimate way possible to see that they got a favorable report, since I felt that they were perfectly right and I had one of the largest producers, Mr. Van Metre, as a personal friend of mine.

Would Talk to Members

Q. And what sort of legitimate service did you think you could perform for them?

A. I felt that I could talk to the various members of the committee and endeavor to show them the rightness of the Virginia association's viewpoint.

Q. Would you tell us, please, sir, the names of the members of the committee with whom you are personally acquainted.

A. I do not think, Mr. Burroughs, that I am personally acquainted with any member of the committee other than Congressman Randolph. I never reached any stage in the proceedings where it was necessary for me to contact the other members.

Q. Did you think that your services in speaking to strangers were worth $1,000 to the association?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. In an open hearing of this kind?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And that was the only thing you had in mind?

A. That was the only thing I had in mind.

Q. You did not expect to appear at the council table and represent them?

A. I told them I would or would not if they desired.

Q. As a matter of fact you told them you would not appear as counsel at the table because your effectiveness would be killed?

A. I told them I would do what they wished.

Q. Didn't you tell them you would not appear as counsel and if you did your effectivenes would be killed.

A. I told them whichever they felt I could do them more good, but not appear as of record.

Q. Will the reporter please read the question again. (Reporter reads). Did you tell them that, or not? A. No, sir.

Q. Did you hope to supply them with any advanced information coming out of my office? A. No, sir; I did not.

Q. You did not? A. No, sir.

Denies Advance Data

Q. Did you not tell Mr. Derrick that you had gotten Miss Castleman's appointment and you were in a position to ge atdvanced information as to what was going to happen, statements of all witnesses from her two or three days before they came out?

A. I told Mr. Derrick I had recommended Miss Castleman for the appointment, but I never made any statement that I could get any testimony in advance; nor have I ever received any statements from her or from anyone in your offices.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Derrick that you could or had gotten the statement in the evening mail, or 10:30 at Martinsburg of the same day that he had made a statement in my office?

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Derrick that Miss Castleman had typed up a question and answer statement which had been given to me and taken down in shorthand by her in my office and which she was nearly two-thirds through tying and that you would get it as soon as she had completed it?

Denies Conversation

A. No, sir.

Q. Did you tell Mr. Derrick you had received 'phone calls from her the evening before to the effect that she was pretty nearly dead from typing, was two-thirds through and she would have it up to you next day?

A. No, sir.

Q. I will ask you if this conversation did not take place at that time: "Derrick: Well, I understand you have been doing some good work. What have you got so far?"

"Mr. Faulkner: Well, I have got right much, but I don't see any reason why I should divulge that unless I know what you are going to do. Well, I have got your statement."

"Derrick: My statement?"

"Mr. Faulkner: I have got these statements, your statement, Embassy Fairfax man's. I told you they were going to make it at 10 this morning. I should have it by 5 this afternoon. There was a very important statement made at 2, not a statement but evidence taken. It was question and answer form and I got a call from the girl last night. She phoned me collect, that she was very sorry, she was almost dead from working but that she had finished two-thirds of the statement and would finish the rest this morning. The other crowd comes in this morning and I'll have this. It was another one of the Embassy Fairfax employes. They want to put in the bootlegging from the West information along these lines, last night I got from them." I will ask you if you did not make that statement to Mr. Derrick?

Denies That Statement

A. I do not recall just those words.

Q. Did you make that statement?

A. I say I could not recall those exact words.

Q. Do you deny making that statement?

A. I deny making that exact statement.

Q. Now, did this take place, Mr. Faulkner? (Burroughs reads.) "Derrick. Well, it looks like you are in a position to deliver. What are your plans? Did you have any further contact with Embassy since you have been in town?

"Faulkner. No, they called Randolph again yesterday and Mr. Moler and wanted to know what he was going to give them. He said I have made all the promises, I have found out and he will let me know tonight. I have never at any time tried to contact Embassy. A man named Ward called Moler. I was present. What they are anxious to have us get is some information, as the hearings start Tuesday."

Did you make that statement?

A. Not the first part of it. I never made any statement in regard to Mr. Randolph.

Calls Record Unfavorable

Q. You never made any statement in regard to Mr. Randolph?

A. No, sir.

Q. At any of these conferences?

A. No, sir; except I would try to influence him as well as others and this particular question came up and he said, "What guarantee would you have you could influence Randolph?" I said "none, because Mr. Randolph has an independent mind and cannot be influenced, unless a case is right."

Q. Unless what?

A. Unless the case was right. I said our only chance was to get all evidence over to Mr. Randolph.

Q. Didn't you think Mr. Randolph would get the evidence from the record?

A. I did not think it was being put on very favorably to him.

Q. How did you expect to influence Mr. Bates' vote?

A. I did not expect to influence his vote other than any other member's vote other than in a legitimate manner, other than by bringing the correctness of the case to them.

Q. Let me ask you if you made this statement (reading): "Like I told you the other time, in the event you don't want me or Mr. Moler, he will go ahead and help them and I won't be in it at all, and he will be their counsel of record and they want him to have Saturday, Sunday and Monday and confer with them."

Reading Stenographer's Report

Did you mak that statement?

A. No, sir. I cannot deny I conferred, that I told him unquestionably that notwithstanding the fact that he employed me or not that there would be no employment by either Mr. Moler or myself on the Embassy-Fairfax staff.

Q. Now, Mr. Faulkner, lest there be some misunderstanding, I am reading from a stenographic report of everything that you and Mr. Derrick said at this meeting.

Did you make this statement reading):

"He tells me that there is no question that they are going to beat it"—that is Embassy—"The stuff he gets from Miss Castleman."

Did you tell him that?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not mention her name at that time?

A. No, sir.

Mr. Barbour. May I inquire the date of this?

Mr. Burroughs. April 28.

Mr. Barbour. Before the hearing started?

Mr. Burroughs. Yes, sir.

Admits Only a Part

Mr. Burroughs (continuing with questioning): Let me know if you made this statement, Mr. Faulkner, to Mr. Barbour: "Finally the situation—speaking of the conference with Mr. Derrick—drifted along and drifted along until just before the hearings started. Mr. Derrick told me that he thought that you all were sufficiently well prepared and didn't need my services, which, as I told him, was satisfactory to me. We had then prepared the evidence so that they were going to start this week with the bootlegging act and will stay on that all this week. We then switched to that.

"Mr. Barbour. Now, who is 'we?'

"Mr. Faulkner. Mr. Randolph and myself and Mr. Moler, switched that with the result that they have brought out the first, I'd say the first three days of the investigation have been more or less each detrimental to your interests and the interests of your association; certainly from the publicity standpoint you all come off the loser and the Embassy-Fairfax crowd comes off the winner."

Did you make that statement?

A. I did not. As a matter of fact, Mr. Burroughs, after I brought Mr. Derrick and Mr. Van Metre to Mr. Randolph's office I at no time conferred with or discussed with Mr. Randolph either the merits or demerits of the milk controversy.

Q. And then you did not make that statement in Mr. Barbour's office?

A. No, sir. I made part of it.

Q. What part of it did you make?

A. I made the statement that hte hearing had gotten off very well for them.

Q. Did you make this statement (reading):

"Mr. Derrick. What information, for instance, for Mr. Barbour, do you think you could get in advance, still, that would help us so that we might know all phases . . .

"Mr. Faulkner: I'm in a position to get in advance, two or three days in advance, everything that comes out of Burroughs' office.

"Mr. Derrick. Through Miss Castleman?

"Mr. Faulkner. That's correct."

Did that not take place.

A. No, sir.

Q. (Reading)

"Mr. Derrick. Does Burroughs give you any——

"Mr. Barbour. Who is Miss Castleman?

"Mr. Derrick. She's secretary to the committee.

"Mr. Faulkner. I got her her job.

"Mr. Derrick. Will Mr. Randolph be in a position to give you any——

"Mr. Faulkner. Mr. Randolph can and will, he told me that he will do it."

Is that correct?

A. No, sir.

Q. You did not make that statement?

A. I did not make that statement.

Q. (Reading)

"Mr. Derrick. Have you asked him to give you some of the leads so far?

Felt They Would Lose

"Mr. Faulkner. That's right. He's given me the leads so far. I really feel that the situation you're in today, that you're going to finally end up unless you do something, with, uh, certainly through the House; now I don't know what'll happen in the Senate. So far as the House is concerned, you are going to lose before the District of Columbia Committee, as the situoation now stands. Unless you take some drastic measures you are going to lose."

Is that correct?

A. I told him substantially that that was my opinion, that unless he took some measure he would lose.

Q. This is the statement that is made here. May I ask if this took place, Mr. Faulkner? (reading).

"Mr. Derrick. How does Randolph feel about it now?

"Mr. Faulkner. Well, he feels that he'll go along any way we want him to go. That's the situation. As I say, he's got it on both sides and he can go either way and without being crazy. So he's willing to do whatever we recommend. He told me that this afternoon. He also told me yesterday that he would guarantee that as he voted so would Bates vote."

Did you make any such statement as this?

Had Producers' Support

A. I certainly did not. I made a statement to the effect that in the Congressman's district there were producers to suport your position, the Maryland and Virginia Milk Producers Association and other independents. That is the only statement I made.

Q. And that is the only statement you made in connection with it?

A. Yes, sir.

Q. And you deny the statement I have just read you?

A. Absolutely.

Q. May I ask if you made these statements, Mr. Faulkner (reading):

"Mr. Barbour. You see we're not in a position to control that, that's the method in what goes on first and the order in which it goes on is absolutely under the control of Burroughs.

"Mr. Faulkner. I know, but we can get at Burroughs. That's the point I'm making. We had Burroughs. I was so sure you would avail yourself of this opportunity that we had Burroughs to the point where he was going to start with the bootlegging activities and then we got him to switch afterward."

Is that correct?

A. No, sir. I did not know you and never have known you.

Q. Did you ever make that statement?

A. No, sir.

Denies Knowing Burroughs

Q. (Continues reading.)

"Mr. Barbour. Why did you do that?

"Mr. Faulkner. Why? To let you see we did control the situation. Now, we can do the same thing. We'll have Burroughs under control by the first of the week."

Did you make that statement?

A. No, sir. I never heard of it before. I did not even know of you.

Q. You are still of the same opinion?

A. Yes, sir—no, sir. I never made the statement.

Q. I will ask you if this did not take place and if you did not make this statement (reading):

"Mr. Derrick. Here is the thing that I know about law. Now, you two fellows are lawyers. What I know about law would be written on a postage stamp. We are liable to get ourselves in jail on this thing.

"Mr. Faulkner. You have a right to lobby; nothing but a plain lobbying proposition. You have a right to employ—it don't have to be counsel. Anybody can try to influence members of the Legislature so long as they do not bribe them. Whatever legitimate influence may be used is not bribery."

Did you make that statement or not?

A. I made a statement similar to that. Yes.

Representative Bates (left), chairman of the House sub-committee conducting the District milk investigation, yesterday turned over all records of the case to District Attorney Pine (right). Row Ends Hearing

Meanwhile, the milk hearing broke up in a row between Sefton Darr, attorney for the Embassy-Fairfax Dairy, and Derrick, of the producers association, following a day of testimony by producers from the Washington milkshed.

An intimation that the sub-committee might consider recommending the establishment of a milk commission, such as operates in Virginia and other States, came from Burroughs during the cross-examination of one of the producers.

Burroughs asked the producer, W. Lawson King, of Gaithersburg, Md., whether he did not believe that a commission set up to regulate the milk supply and the price of milk might not benefit producers and consumers of milk.

The commission, Burroughs suggested, might be composed of a representative of the distributers, a representative of the producers, and a representative of the consumers.

John S. Barbour, counsel of the Maryland-Virginia Association, interrupted that a similar commission now operates in Virginia.

Information Demanded

Darr and Derrick clashed when the Embassy-Fairfax lawyer demanded a monthly breakdown of the base and surplus milk allocations to the 21 directors of the Maryland-Virginia asosciation. Derrick, who had furnished the report, figured on a annual basis, retorted angrily that he in turn wanted similar information relative to the Embassy-Fairfax independent producers.

While Representative Vreeland (Republican), of New Jersey, acting chairman, sought to straighten out the tangle, Darr shot back that if the association wished to put his client to such expense he wanted a similar breakdown on the 1,100 producers in the organization.

Burroughs complained against encumbering the record as Derrick remarked that he would like to get at the bottom of things.

Hearing Recessed

As the hearing was recessed until next week, Derrick said:

"If we are going to have a mud-slinging campaign, it's o. k. with me."

"You started it," Darr shot back.

The producers who testified were evenly divided in their allegiance to the association. One producer, King, made a plea that the inquiry be halted as the publicity was hurting the sale of milk in Washington. J. J. Ramey, of Vienna, Va., an independent, said he would like to see the inquiry continued for the salvation of the farmers.

King, who is one of the large producers on this market, said he did not consider the District regulations too strict nor the 14-cent retail price too high. Asked about his expenses, King said that he was "ashamed to say" that he paid his employes on the farm between $9 and $11 a week and furnished them houses, gardens and all the milk they needed.

The farm hands work 16 hours a day, he said. He could not pay them more, he explained, without losing on the business.

Gordon Willis, another director of the Maryland-Virginia Association, said he would want the high District health regulations maintained for the sake of the milk consumed by his family if for no other reason.

He testified that he earned 3 to 4 per cent on a $45,000 investment, but Darr brought out that he also manages a co-operative purchasing association as well. Darr also pointed out that King, another director, "sells a very fine automobile as a sideline."

Ramey, who operates two farms, complained that he could make only a bare living by hard work. He had quit the co-operative association, he said, 13 years ago after three years' membership.

Nazis Expect Yugoslavs to Stand by Axis

Hungary, However, Reports Clashes of Germans, Slovenes

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, June 2.—Informed Nazis expressed conviction tonight, after Regent Prince Paul of Yugoslavia had been shown a cross-section of Germany's military might, that his country would remain helpful to Berlin in the Balkans.

Britain and France, they asserted, would not be able to woo Yugoslavia into what Nazis charge is the plan of London and Paris to "encircle" the Rome-Berlin axis partners.

In the Nazi view, Prince Paul, head of Yugoslavia's regency during the minority of 15-year-old King Peter, intends to maintain Belgrade's neutrality.

Hitler Pledges Frontier

This was the meaning, they said, of his response to the toast at an elaborate state dinner Thursday night in which Reichsfuehrer Hitler pledged respect "for all time" for Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany.

The regent, here for a five-day state visit, replied with an expression of gratification that Germany "intends to recognize Yugoslavia's freedom and independence."

A neutral Yugoslavia aloof from the British-French front and delivering 50 per cent or more of her raw materials to Germany and another large percentage to Italy, it was said, is all that Germany wants.

Bulgaria Reported Happy

The Fuehrer's references at the state banquet to Yugoslavia's "Freedom and Independence" and the permanence of the two nations' common frontier were cited as proof that Nazidom desires no more than that.

Newspapers reported tonight that Bulgaria was particularly happy over Hitler's boundary assurances to Yugoslavia and there were indications that Germany would attempt further to consolidate her position in Bulgaria in the near future.

(At Nagykanizsa, Hungary, meanwhile, acts of violence involving Slovenes and Germans in northern Yugoslavia were described in reports filtering into Hungary through heavy censorship.)

Clashes on Border

(They told of the wrecking of homes of Nazi Germans by Slovene Nationalists and said clashes had occurred in many localities along Yugoslavia's frontier with Germany, an area within the pre-war Austro-Hungarian empire.)

Trade negotiations between Germany and Yugaslavia are going on simultaneously with the regent's visit. Germany already gets half of Yugoslavia's exports. Nazis hope an even greater share of her raw materials may result from a treaty.

Dr. Klein Named To Mental Health Commission

Dr. Elmer Klein yesterday was appointed by the District Court to the Commission on Mental Health, to succeed Dr. Loren B. T. Johnson, who resigned.

Dr. Bernard S. French, whose term has expired, was reappointed. Both will serve for four years, beginning June 10.

The commission was established a year ago to provide for the handling of insanity proceedings by experts.

Dr. French studied at Catholic University and Johns Hopkins University. He is a member of the lunacy board of St. Elizabeths Hospital.

Dr. Klein, a practicing psychiatrist, attended Indiana University and studied later in Vienna. He served on the staff of the Phipps clinic at Johns Hopkins. Later he served on the staff of the Life Adjustment Center sponsored by the Washington Mental Hygiene Association.

5 Camden Deaths Checked in East Mass-Murder Ring

Philadelphia, June 2 (AP).—The East's mass-murder ring investigation turned to New Jersey and New York today as detectives disclosed they were checking five deaths in Camden, N. J., and arranging for the return of a woman arrested in Brooklyn.

Police Capt. James Kelly said a number of letters, both signed and anonymous, had directed attention to the New Jersey deaths. He declined to elaborate on this phase of the investigation, however, other than to say the information had been turned over to Camden detectives.

The name of the Brooklyn woman was not disclosed, but detectives said she was held there on a perfunctory charge. They added she was wanted here on a more serious offense.

Unwed Mother Admits Taking Baby to Replace Son Who Died

Mrs. Margaret McCrohan, 30 (top), of Philadelphia, holds 5-month-old son, Gerald, returned to her after police found him in the possession of Beatrice Wood, 21 (lower left). Frederick Bauers, 23 (lower right), friend of Miss Wood, was questioned by police

Philadelphia Girl, 21, Wanted to Show Child To Father of Hers

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 2.—A blond, 31-year-old girl arrested on a charge of kidnaping 5-months-old Gerald McCrohan from his carriage was quoted by Detective George Myers today as saying she took the child to replace her own who died.

The officer said the girl was unwed. Booked as Beatrice Wood, she told this story of the abduction after her arrest this morning with a man that Myers found with the missing boy:

A son was born to her last March. He died, but she kept the news from its father.

When he demanded to see the boy, she stole baby Gerald from his carriage while his mother shopped in a butcher store, went to the father and told him the child was theirs.

The girl poured out her story in a police station. She was arrested with a man booked as Frederick Bauers, 23. Myers said he followed the girl from a drugstore where the officer had been inquiring about recent purchases of baby food.

Another detective found Bauers sitting in a park about two miles from the scene of the kidnaping yesterday. The baby was in the man's arms.

"That's my baby—thank God he's safe!" Mrs. Margaret McCrohan gasped when she saw the child. Then she fainted.

Gerald's father and grandmother also identified the infant.

The child's mother, who is 30, had promised the kidnaper there would be no prosecution if the baby were returned.

Taken on a Busy Corner

The appeal was made shortly after Mrs. McCrohan and her husband, John, 32, a paint company employe, attended mass where special prayers were said for the safety of the child.

Gerald was taken from his carriage on a busy street corner yesterday while his mother shopped in a store across the street from a police station.

Mrs. McCrohan was hurrying through her shopping, anxious to get the baby home for feeding, when Marjorie ran into the store crying: "Mommie, the baby isn't in his coach any more. A lady took him."

Litigant Gave Friend a Loan, Manton Admits

Former Judge Says He Helped Him Negotiate For $250,000

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—Former United States Circuit Judge Martin T. Manton's cross examination ended late today shortly after he testified he had helped a friend get a $250,000 loan from Lord & Thomas, advertising agency, during litigation involving one of the firm's clients.

The defense rested its case a little later.

United States Attorney John T. Cahill, prosecuting the former jurist on a charge that he conspired to sell judicial decisions, referred to the Lord & Thomas loan after an extensive interrogation of Manton's various financial transactions.

The loan, Manton said, was made in 1932 to James S. Sullivan, an officer in a Manton real estate company, the Forest Hills Terrace Corporation.

At the time there was pending before the United States Circuit Court an appeal of a case brought against the American Tobacco Co.'s president, George Washington Hill, over distribution of bonuses of $10,000,000.

Cahill elicited the fact that Manton approached Louis Levy, member of the law firm representing the tobacco company, and asked if he knew where Sullivan could borrow $25,000.

James M. Noonan, chief of counsel for Manton, objected to the line of questioning, but Federal Judge W. Calvin Chestnut permitted Cahill to proceed and to bring out the fact that Sullivan obtained a loan ten times greater than originally mentioned.

In the following month, he further brought out, a decision in favor of the American Tobacco Co. was handed down in Circuit Court.

Manton said most of the money went to his corporations.

After members of the Circuit Court of Appeals, his former associates, testified in his behalf, Manton was recalled for redirect examination and submitted explanations of the series of loans in which he or his corporations had been involved.

U.S.A. BEER MAKES BIG HIT WITH MORE INTERNATIONAL EXPERTS

YOU'VE GOT A GREAT BEER DOWN THERE IN MARYLAND...THAT GUNTHER'S IN MY OPINION EQUALS THE BEST EUROPEAN BREWS!
WERNER BRELOH

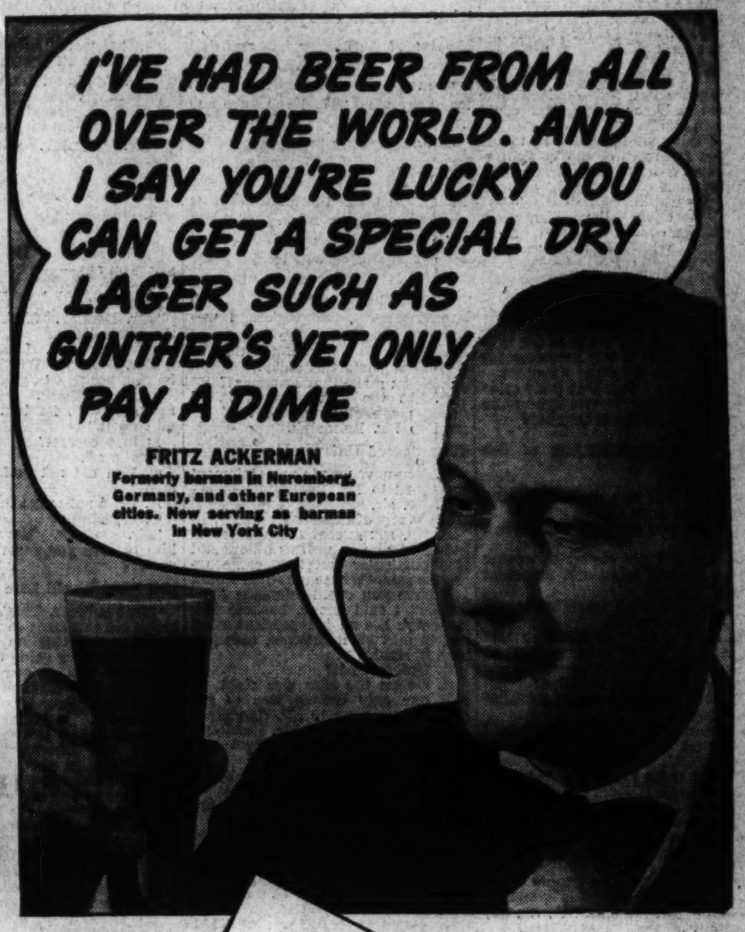
AMERICA CAN WELL BE PROUD OF GUNTHER'S MARYLAND BEER... IN MY JUDGMENT NO COSTLIER IMPORTED BEER FROM EUROPE IS ANY BETTER
FRED HERCHER
Now connected in the United States, formerly well known as a barman in Baden-Baden, Germany



I'VE HAD BEER FROM ALL OVER THE WORLD. AND I SAY YOU'RE LUCKY YOU CAN GET A SPECIAL DRY LAGER SUCH AS GUNTHER'S YET ONLY PAY A DIME
FRITZ ACKERMAN
Formerly barman in Nuremberg, Germany, and other European cities. Now serving as barman in New York City

Experts amazed at high standards set by beers made in U.S.A. Agree there are several fine domestic beers that are equal in every way to famous European brands . . . and for their own personal use choose Gunther's . . . the beer that's so popular in Maryland and Washington

ONCE upon a time Europe was in a class by itself when it came to making beer. But who makes the best beer today? Many international experts agree that the U. S. A. has definitely forged ahead of many famous European imported beers! And one of the beers most highly praised is Gunther's Special Dry Lager . . . This local beer is, in the opinion of these experts, equal to costly beers made abroad in every way. It is dry. It's not heavy. It hasn't a trace of soda-pop sweetness. It gives you all the taste and body that real beer drinkers the world over seek in a real glass of lager. Gunther's Dry Lager . . . the beer the experts are talking about, only costs you a dime.

How Can Gunther's Do It?

How can Gunther's offer such high quality beer at the price of regular beers? There are three big reasons: 1. Gunther's makes hundreds of thousands of BARRELS of beer (the equivalent of over 90 MILLION bottles) . . . This big volume means big savings on ingredient and brewing costs. 2. Most all of Gunther's is sold to folks right here in Maryland and D. C. . . . this means that no long-haul shipping charges are added to the cost of Gunther's. 3. Most of it is delivered direct from the brewery to your dealer in our own trucks . . . another enormous saving, because breweries from other states have to pay as much as 30 to 50¢ per case to the wholesalers who handle their beer.

Put all these big savings together and you can see why folks around here can have Gunther's quality at a dime, whereas if you lived in New York, Milwaukee, St. Louis, etc., you would have to pay at least 15¢ per bottle for it.

Dr. Smith Dies; Was Rector of St. Thomas'

Native of England Had Served Church Here 34 Years; Retired in 1936

The Rev. C. Ernest Smith, for 34 years rector of St. Thomas' Episcopal Church, where President Roosevelt worships, died yesterday afternoon at his home, 5018 Forty-second street northwest. He was 84 and had retired from the ministry in 1936.

Born in England, Dr. Smith studied theology at St. Augustine's College, Canterbury, and stood first in his class in the Oxford and Cambridge examinations for Holy Orders. He received his bachelor of arts degree with honors at the University of Durham, and held an honorary M. A. from St. John's College, Annapolis, and D. D. from St. John's College and the University of the South, and D. C. L. from the University of Bishops College, Quebec.

Dr. Smith entered the pastorate at Harbor Grace, Newfoundland, and was successively rector of Heart's Content parish, Newfoundland; St. Paul's parish, Aquasco, Md., and the Church of St. Michael and All Angels, Baltimore, before coming to St. Thomas' in 1902.

While in Washington he was deputy to the four Episcopal general conventions between 1915 and 1927. He increased the membership of St. Thomas' from less than 200 to nearly 1,000 during his ministry, and paid off the church's $75,000 debt, replacing it by a $150,000 endowment fund.

Dr. Smith was also instrumental in installing one of the finest pipe organs in the city at St. Thomas', as well as a series of stained glass windows depicting the history of the church, designed by Sir Henry Halliday and said to be the best in this section of the country.

President Roosevelt first met Dr. Smith in 1914, and in that year was a vestryman of the church. Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, is also a communicant of the church.

The boy was hauled out uninjured but Joyce Ann suffered a possible skull fracture from being banged against the concreted banks. Norma Jean's body was recovered but Shirley still was missing.

and friends feared the worst when the passengers learn their true destination.

Some expressed fears there might be attempts to force Capt. Gustav Shroeder, of the St. Louis, to head for another port.

Others spoke of the possibility of mass suicides, the fear of which led Capt. Shroeder to delay his departure until President Laredo Bru ordered him to sail or be towed from Cuban waters by a gunboat.

In Germany, relatives here said, the refugees must start life over again from scratch. At best, they said, this meant work as laborers; for some possibly concentration camps.

The departure of the St. Louis was preceded by pathetic scenes both aboard and on the waterfront where kinsmen among the 10,000 spectators attempted to make shouted contact with those aboard.

Vandenberg Urged To Initiate Civil Service Reforms

William C. Deming, retired publisher of Cheyenne, Wyo., and former president of the United States Civil Service Commission, Thursday issued a statement calling upon Senator Vandenberg to suggest reforms for the civil service and implying that Vandenberg may be the next President of the United States.

Stopping here "to visit friends," Deming said: "President Franklin D. Roosevelt and Congress have made considerable progress in extending the classified service, especially to first, second and third class postmasters. I have always favored such a reform—with a proper test as to fitness—regardless of which party might temporarily benefit therefrom.

"In this connection I hope Senator Vandenberg will go a step further in suggesting reform for the future. If he should become President—and it may happen—he says he would retire at the end of one term.

"I think he should declare he would not appoint the chairman of the National Committee to become Postmaster General, a policy followed so long by both parties. The implication that the Postoffice Department is a fertile field for partisan patronage is bad and in the main unfair to the postal service," he stated.

Wise Vacation Plans Include Careful Dry Cleaning

so all your clothes may be in readiness for carefree days ahead

Fascinating travel folders, the latest road maps and what-to-see-and-where guides play a large share in the fun you have on vacation. But half that fun is spoiled if you do not have the right clothes for every occasion. Even worse, if you own the right clothes, but do not have them in readiness when packing time comes.

So—we suggest, a preliminary tour of your own clothes closet. Then your decision what to take—quickly followed by a call to DIstrict 5300—Dry Cleaning.

And do remember that our dry cleaning includes all the little services—the removal of buttons and buckles that might be damaged in cleaning and their replacement afterward; the mending of a tiny rip; the replacement—where possible—of a missing button; thorough hand-spotting for removing the stubborn dirt; pressing that retains the original correct lines of your garments. All the little "extras" that do so much toward making your clothes look fresher, newer, ready for come-what-may.

Incidentally, Winter garments you have not yet stored, will be much safer if dry cleaned before being put away.

Church of the Week

Rev. Enoch Thompson Tomorrow to Mark 36th Year of Service to Nativity Parish

Launched Mission While Still Curate At St. Paul's Church

Reaching another milestone in his busy career, the Rev. Enoch M. Thompson tomorrow will celebrate the completion of four decades of service in the Christian ministry, 36 years of which have been devoted to the Nativity and Resurrection parish here.

Members of the parish, recently admitted to full union with the Episcopal Diocese of Washington, and comprising the Nativity Church and the Resurrection Chapel, will pray tomorrow that their pastor may be spared many more years to continue the task he began.

Building of the Church of the Nativity

Rev. Mr. Thompson

Fresh out of General Theological Seminary in the the late '90's, the cleric, following his ordination as deacon at St. Mark's, Capitol Hill—then the Pro-Cathedral of Washington under Bishop Satterlee — became assistant at St. Paul's, Washington Circle, where Dr. Alfred Harding, later the second Bishop of Washington, was rector.

Visualizing the possibilities of the southeastern field, the ambitious minister launched the Nativity Mission during his curateship at St. Paul's, and later at the Church of the Ascension. The mission functioned from 1903 until 1908 in a private home and in a storeroom on the site of the present Eastern High School.

Samuel L. Phillips, who left a large legacy for the building of mission chapels in the diocese, cooperated in the securing of the Nativity Church's present site at Massachusetts avenue and A street southeast. Shortly afterward work was begun on Resurrection Chapel, at Fifteenth and G streets northeast.

Mattern

Bishop Harding dedicated the new Nativity Chapel in 1909, not long after his consecration as prelate, and donated its pews. The pipe organ was realized from the "birthday fund" when the new sanctuary and North Chapel were built in 1931. Walter Allen donated the chimes.

Bishop Freeman's recent confirmation of a class of 52 members brought the communicant list to over 900 for the parish, the vestry of which includes Y. D. Harbaugh, senior warden; Herman S. Matterson, junior warden; Thomas Whinery, treasurer; Robert Pohlmann, register; P. Earle Saunders, Harry Grimes, Daniel Hild, J. Melvin Mitchell and Bernard Weaver. Gibbons and the Rev. Mr. Thompson were recently seated as delegates to the diocesan convention.

Pohlmann

Active workers in the Girls' Friendly Society of the parish are Mrs. Rose E. Frye, Mrs. L. T. Paul, Mrs. L. E. Gilchrist and Mrs. Eva Brill. Miss Bertie May Pote is organist and leader of the choir, which was organized by W. B. Trott, S. P. Minnick, Mrs. C. J. Wood and daughter, Mary Louise Wood.

Doing "iron man" duty, the Rev. Mr. Thompson conducts children's services at Resurrection Chapel at 9:15 a. m. each Sunday; church school at 9:45 a. m. and worship at 11 a. m. at Nativity; Holy Communion will be observed at 11 a. m. tomorrow at the latter place.

Constituted as a parish by the convention of 1937, Nativity was later organized by the congregation under the Maryland vestry act, which gave it legal status as an incorporated body.

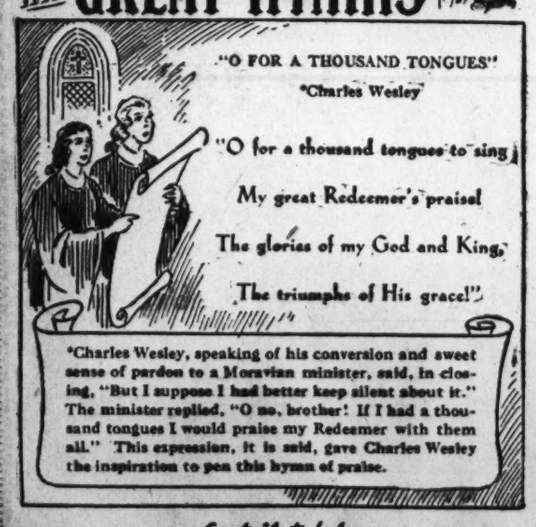
Little Stories about GREAT HYMNS



"O FOR A THOUSAND TONGUES"
"Charles Wesley"
"O for a thousand tongues to sing
My great Redeemer's praise!
The glories of my God and King,
The triumphs of His grace!"

*Charles Wesley, speaking of his conversion and sweet sense of pardon to a Moravian minister, said, in closing, "But I suppose I had better keep silent about it." The minister replied, "O no, brother! If I had a thousand tongues I would praise my Redeemer with them all." This expression, it is said, gave Charles Wesley the inspiration to pen this hymn of praise.

Police Seize 5 of 6 Bandits, 1 Near Death

Last of Group Who Tried to Make 'Sissy' Of Dillinger Hunted

One of six bandits who started out to "make Dillinger look like a sissy" was close to sharing the famous outlaw's end last night, while four of his companions were under police guard after drawing police, taxi drivers and citizens to their trail in a spectacular manhunt through Anacostia early yesterday.

Police spread a dragnet for a sixth who threatened pursuers with a gun and escaped in the woods near Nichols avenue southeast.

Near death at Casualty Hospital was Murdock Oliver Royal, 24, of the first block of E street northwest. He was shot in the legs and back by Police Officers C. F. Fox and D. F. Gould after forcing their scout car off the road and over a 10-foot embankment on Nichols avenue when they attempted to halt his fleeing auto.

3 Captured Asleep

A second man, captured by a posse of policemen and Anacostia residents, was in Gallinger Hospital with a broken nose and head cuts. He told police he was beaten up by his companions.

Three others were captured while they slept in a rooming house in the 400 block of Sixth street northwest. Police went to the house when they found the address in the second man's pocket, with a newspaper clipping telling of a holdup in which four men left a Washington cab driver tied up in Alexandria, and borrowed his cab because they had "a rat to kill."

Capture of the quintet ended a hair-raising six-hour police thriller. It started when Walter T. Trittipoe, 24, of 2106 First street northwest, picked up four men at Thirteenth and H streets northwest, about 9 p. m. Thursday. On the way to Alexandria, they forced him at gun point to stop, beat him, took $18 and threw him on the floor of the cab.

70-Mile-an-Hour Chase

They drove out Livingston road southeast and in Maryland bound and gagged Trittipoe and threw him behind a signboard. Two guards, Trittipoe said, talked about the places they were going to rob, and boasted they would "make Dillinger look like a sissy."

While Trittipoe was lying under guard, three bandits walked into the liquor store of Samuel Ackerman, in the 1800 block of Hamlin street northeast, took $25 and beat up his father-in-law, Joseph Mestesky, 56, of 649 Quincy place northwest. Westesky went to Casualty.

The two holdups were linked shortly after midnight when Trittipoe's guards took his shoes and left. He called police. Five minutes after a lookout was broadcast for the stolen cab, Gould and Fox, in a scout car, spotted it on Nichols avenue, and after a 70-mile-an-hour chase were forced off the road.

Chased by Detectives

Uninjured, they forced the cab to halt with pistol fire, and brought down the fleeing driver. While five escaped into the woods, the officers picked up Royal and sped toward Casualty, through a dragnet of police cars.

Detective Sergeants Howard Ogle and Robert Bryant, in a cruiser, picked up the speeding cab and trailed it with drawn guns to Casualty. As the cab swung into the hospital, the detectives blocked the entrance, covered the occupants of the cab, only to see two uniformed men.

Later they questioned the second fugitive and followed the trail to the Sixth street rooming house. Officers said that in the room where the three were arrested Trittipoe's shoes were found.

Sub-committee Would Bar Aliens to 1944

Approves Measure To Stop Entries Till Employment Improves

A drastic anti-alien bill that would prohibit immigration to the United States for at least five years was reported favorably by a Senate immigration sub-committee yesterday.

The full committee will consider the bill next week, at the same time it takes up the Wagner-Rogers bill for admission of 20,000 German and Czech refugee children outside quota limitations.

Although it had been expected that the refugee bill would be acted upon by the Immigration Committee yesterday, members decided to defer its consideration until the anti-alien bill could be digested. The refugee measure was recommended by a sub-committee several weeks ago.

The anti-alien bill, based partly on proposals of Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, provides that American borders be completely closed to immigrants—save for some "hardship cases"—for at least five years and as long thereafter as the Nation has 5,000,000 unemployed.

The bill would force all aliens under 50 years of age to apply for naturalization papers within a year on penalty of deportation.

It would establish an "Alien Registration Board" to supervise compulsory registration of all aliens at postoffices and would further demand that they give notice every time they change address. As a "double check" on registration of aliens, the bill provides they also must register in the 1940 census and declare intention to become citizens. Natives of Canada and Latin America, classified as "non-immigrants," would be exempt from the compulsory registration provisions.

Asked if he thought the Immigration Committee would support such a drastic bill, abolishing all present quotas, a member of the committee replied, "Remember that the committee is largely composed of native Americans going back several generations."

Farmer Acquitted Of Killing Son, 10

Vienna, Ga., June 2 (AP).—"None of you love your children more than I do . . . now let me go home to my wife and baby."

Thus did Albert Lee Christmas, 37-year-old farmer, sum up his plea to a jury last night that he was innocent of the State's charge he killed his bright 10-year-old son, Albert, jr., to collect $2,700 insurance. After deliberating six hours, shortly before midnight, the jury acquitted Christmas and he went home.

Adm. Byrd Urges Antarctic Mission to Guard U. S. Rights

By the Associated Press.

Rear Admiral Richard E. Byrd, conqueror of two poles, told a House Appropriations sub-committee yesterday that a Government expedition should be sent to the Antarctic continent early next fall "to protect this Nation's rights."

President Roosevelt asked Congress last week to appropriate $340,000 for an expedition, to be made under supervision of Dr. Ernest H. Gruening, director of the Interior Department's territorial division.

After hearing Byrd, the sub-committee approved the President's request. Chairman Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, said it would be rushed to the House in a separate measure as soon as possible "because they are in a hurry for it."

Byrd was accompanied to the hearing by Dr. Gruening and Richard E. Black, a member of Byrd's 1933-35 expedition. Although the admiral testified at a closed session, informed sources said he told Woodrum that the United States should act quickly to protect its mineral rights in the Antarctic.

He suggested also that the continent some day might prove to be of strategic naval importance, particularly in connection with operation of commercial and naval aircraft in the southern Pacific.

Although scientists have not yet determined what natural resources lie beneath the vast ice cap that covers most of the Antarctic regions, Byrd said that if this Nation wished to share in any future development of the area, steps should be taken immediately to make formal claim to Marie Byrd Land.

Germany recently laid claim to many thousand square miles of territory east of the Weddell Sea area and since 1928 there has been a marked revival of international interest in the entire continent.

British Troops Battle Arabs Who Annihilated Road Patrol

Seven Slain by Band of Marauders; Time Bomb Kills Six in Jerusalem's Jaffa Market; Police Details Reinforced

By the Associated Press.

Jerusalem, June 2.—British troops were reported tonight to be fighting a major engagement in the Kalkaliya hills with an Arab band.

The Arab band in the day killed four British soldiers and three Jewish policemen who were on a road patrol.

In addition, six Arabs, including a native policeman, were killed by a time bomb in a market place near the Jaffa Gate. Twenty Arabs were wounded so severely they were taken to hospitals.

Tension in Jerusalem grew hourly as police and military authorities strove to retain order by swift punitive measures and with ceaseless patrols in all sections.

The Arab band annihilated the road patrol of four Britons and three Jews 35 miles northwest of Jerusalem and seized a machine gun and other arms.

After the blast at Jerusalem's Jaffa Gate Arabs stoned Jewish traffic in the Arab-Jewish quarter, and then authorities suspended three Arab urban bus lines. Seven Jewish bus lines already had been suspended.

Guards about all public buildings were doubled and the public services were watched carefully.

The Jerusalem Community Council issued a manifesto to Jews proclaiming regret and horror over the death of innocent persons in Jerusalem and demanding restraint of all Jews in their battle against the new British policy for an independent Palestine state with the Jews in a minority.

Warner Baxter Revives Best Screen Role

'The Cisco Kid' Is Back at the Capitol; Variety on Stage

"THE RETURN OF THE CISCO KID." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of a screen play by Milton Sperling, based on the character created by O. Henry, with Warner Baxter, Lynn Bari, Cesar Romero, Henry Wall, Kane Richmond, C. Fraxedas, Harry Strang, Arthur Aylesworth, Paul Burns, Victor Killian, Ruth Gillette and Ward Bond. Directed by Herbert I. Leeds. Reviewed Friday afternoon, at the Capitol Theater.

That boldest, baddest hombre of "Ole Meh-he-ho," the Cisco Kid, is the central figure of a "good neighbor"-minded program at the Capitol. Warner Baxter plays his Academy Award role in "The Return of the Cisco Kid," a passive and not very alert film, and the South American countries come brilliantly to the screen in an excellently photographed short subject.

The difficulty of the sequel to the two films of five years ago, is that one fails to care whether the Kid really has come back or not. This listlessness is relieved only occasionally by some humorous portrayals from Henry Hull, as a Civil War colonel 40 years after Gettysburg, and Cesar Romero, as a lazy and shiftless cohort of the Kid.

It seems that, like Frankenstein, the Kid did not die. When he was shot down by C. Henry Gordon's troops, he was merely playing possum and no sooner are the captain and his men beyond the horizon, than he is thinking of a beautiful young American girl who, he learns, is in these parts with her colonel-grandfather to claim a ranch for which they have paid an option.

Enter Bad Hombre

But the boss of the town "he no good man," and the Kid is forced back into his more dishonest ways to save the girl's ranch. Of course, the girl has no romantic thoughts about the Kid, for her heart belongs to a childhood pal whom she has just seen after a lapse of ten years. So, in the end, Cisco's efforts are all on someone else's behalf and with his two cronies he trots back to Clementina, or whatever her name was.

After a brave beginning, the adventure slows down to a canter, to be relieved, as we have said, by Hull and Romero and some neat camera maneuvers by Photographer Charles Clarke. Sly character that he is, Hull has a merry time with the impecunious colonel whose medicine is of incalculable aid in keeping him mentally alive. Romero you would never recognize from the usual natty smoothies he etches, but as the lazy lout with the roving eyes, he reveals unsuspected versatility. The Arizona border setting becomes a beautiful backdrop for the imaginative cameraman.

An Excellent Short

The short we liked so much is the latest of the Magic Carpet series. Announced by Lowell Thomas, it concerns South America, and is called "Good Neighbors." Yesterday's first house was patently spellbound by the magnificent aerial views above the snow-capped Andes. The harbor at Rio and the volcanic peaks so strikingly revealed are the most winning of all possible good neighbor gestures.

The Capitol's stage show is called "World's Fair Flashes" and opens with a brightly costumed line-up of the Rhythm Rockets. The Gaudesmith brothers present their amazingly intelligent French poodles—a breed for which we have never before had so much respect. Alphonse Berg rolls off some natty feminine costumes from mere material, with the inspiration of three alluring models. Frank Gaby, a genial gent with a dummy, has the top spot, but suffers from a lack of material.

Best of the variety bill was Jimmy and Mildred Mulcay. As harmonica players these two were effortless and cleverly effective.

The international goodwill atmosphere is brought to a crashing climax by Phil Lampkin's "Overture of British Melodies."

RICHARD L. COE.

Metropolitan

"Man of Conquest," Republic's rousing picturization of the tumultuous life of Sam Houston, yesterday resumed its downtown run at the Warner Brothers Metropolitan Theater, with apparently no diminution of public interest in its exciting revelations.

Sam Houston was a complex character, who lived sometimes among his own people and sometimes as an adopted brave of the Cherokee Indians. Throughout all of the contradictory episodes that punctuated his life, however, he was always the stalwart champion of freedom. "Man of Conquest" reaches its climacteric sequences in Houston's fight for the conquest of Texas, which he plans, first, to set up as an independent State. It is Andrew Jackson who deflects him from this purpose and persuades him to bring Texas into the Union.

Leading up to the sensationally spectacular defeat of Santa Anna at San Jacinto, following the debacle at the Alamo, are depicted phases of Houston's life that do not always reflect credit upon one of the illustrious figures of history. Mr. Houston, engaged in the debauchery of a four-month drunk, is not a pretty sight. But that is merely an incident, interrupting only momentarily the depiction of the man as a powerful fighter, free thinker and ardent patriot.

Richard Dix has perhaps the best role of his career in the title part. He plays it with complete command and no jarring notes. Next in effectiveness is Edward Ellis, in the character of Andrew Jackson, and next to him comes George Hayes, as testy a backwoodsman as you would care to see. Gail Patrick and John Fontaine lend the play its romantic interest, and C. Henry Gordon, Ralph Morgan, Robert Armstrong, Victor Jory and a host of others contribute admirable support.

The usual short-reel subjects complete the excellent bill.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

'Only Angels Have Wings', Earle, Is Film Play of Diverse Appeal

Grant and Arthur Are Perfectly Teamed; Stage Revue Pays Tribute to Royalty

"ONLY ANGELS HAVE WINGS." Columbia picturization of a story, written and directed by Howard Hawks and adapted to the screen by Jules Furthman, costarring Cary Grant and Jean Arthur, with Richard Barthelmess, Thomas Mitchell, Rita Hayworth, Allyn Joslyn, Sig Rumann, Victor Kilian, Noah Beery, jr., Melissa Sierra, John Carroll, Donald Barry and Maciste. Previewed Monday, May 29, at the Earle Theater.

There are so many elements of appeal in "Only Angels Have Wings" that it should engage the interest of every type of theater-goer. There are adventure, comedy, romance, thrills and tragedy woven into the unique design of the story which Howard Hawks wrote, produced and directed for Columbia Pictures.

BELL

The scene of the play is the small tropical banana port of Barranca, in South America, where "Dutchy" is postmaster, hotel-keeper, restaurateur, bar man and proprietor of a flying field adjacent to his hostelry. All manner of rickety crates take off and come down at this antiquated and ill-equipped contribution to the art of aviation. The boss man of the field is a hard-boiled woman-hater, embittered by an earlier experience with a girl who found it impossible to adjust her personal selfishness to the life of an aviator.

Wide Range of Characters

So there comes to Barranca one foggy night a show girl, bound north from Valparaiso, for "shore leave" of only a few hours before her boat sails again. This Bonnie Lee develops an infinite capacity for getting in everybody's hair, but proves, finally, to be the pivotal character around which an engrossing plot revolves. There is double love interest in the story of "Only Angels Have Wings"—Geoff Carter, airport manager, and Bonnie fight their way to a peculiar sort of belligerent love and when Bat MacPherson, a renegade flier, comes to the field as a supply man, his wife proves to have been the girl with whom Carter originally was in love. Further complications are projected by the fact that Kid Dabb, Carter's right-hand man, is the brother of the lad MacPherson abandoned to crash alone. A fine clash of characters and personalities might be expected from all this. That expectation is completely fulfilled.

Chief interest to many, however, will lie in the flying sequences and the grim business of keeping that little flying field in operation in the face of heavy weather, violent storms and depleted manpower. This portion of the film has been handled with such skill as Howard Hawks alone seems to possess in the screen visualization of action that goes into the air. There is never a moment during the long length of the picture—it consumes a full two hours—when interest of the tensest sort is permitted to subside. There are casualties, catastrophies and tragic death scattered through the progress of events, but the film is in no sense depressing. Excitement is its keynote.

Is Superlatively Acted

"Only Angels Have Wings" is acted with consummate skill. Cary Grant and the husky-voiced Jean Arthur, in the costellar roles, are perfect foils each for the other in asperity, crisp speech and, at times, tumultuous action. Thomas Mitchell, in the role of Kid Dabb, the grounded flier, who finally comes to disaster in an emergency flight in a blinding storm and wants to be alone when he dies, proves again that he is one of the most reliable character actors on the screen.

Richard Barthelmess, as the renegade, makes a splendid "comeback" and enacts a difficult role without flaw. Rita Hayworth, as his wife, is almost equally effective. Sig Rumann, in the role of "Dutchy," Allyn Josly, Noah Beery, jr., and Victor Kilian are among others who do much for the picture's success.

An Atmospheric Revue

Production Manager Harry Anger's "Command Performance" stage revue, in compliment to the King and Queen, is brief, but atmospheric and spectacular. A flag-draped medallion of the King dissolves into many appropriate scenes both in this country and England as an introductory. This gives way to the "Command Performance" at the Palladium, in London, which is opened by the Virginians and the Roxyettes. Rollo and Verna Pickert, two exceptional dancers, contribute two routines of merit—one on stilts—the Virginians sing "Three Little Fishes" and "Glory Road" and that crazy dog act, Hector and His Pals, provides its usual interval of comedy. The revue closes with a handsome throne room scene in which the Roxettes execute their "Changing of the Guard," with the Virginians singing rousing British anthems.

Bert Granoff, singing with the orchestra and still in fine voice, and the Paramount News complete a bill that assays high in entertainment value.

Call Hardys True Zealand Family

The Hardy Family, consisting of the Judge, Mother Hardy, Andy, Marian and Aunt Milly, have an offer to appear at the New Zealand exhibit at the San Francisco Fair as the typical "Down Under" family.

The offer was tendered by Frank Langstone, minister of lands, commissioner of state forests and minister of the tourist and publicity department of New Zealand, during his visit to the "Andy Hardy Gets Spring Fever" set.

"The Hardys," declared the government official, "are typical of our average New Zealand family. In fact, I daresay this American screen family, portrayed by Lewis Stone, Mickey Rooney, Fay Holden, Cecelia Parker and Sara Holden, typifies the families of the world."

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 2.

MARIAN ANDERSON: Eddie Cantor will be one of your co-entertainers at the White House reception for the King and Queen . . . Lou Nova: When you fought Max Baer, additional lights were installed at the ringside—because there was a television test, made directly to the studio . . . Sally Rand: License Commissioner Paul Moss will take jurisdiction over the nudity at the World's Fair . . . Libby Holman: Your bridegroom, Ralph Holmes, got a new job. He was signed to appear in Lew Brown's new show, "Yokel Boy."

NICHOLAS MURRAY BUTLER: Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings, who was awarded a Pultizer Prize, was visited by an interviewer for a swanky magazine a few days ago . . . "Mrs. Rawlings," asked the interviewer, "now that you've won the Pulitzer Prize, don't you plan to tour the country and become the darling of the book shops?" . . . "Hell, no," she replied. "I'm just going back to Cross Creek, Fla.—where they don't give a damn."

DICK MERRILL: The World's Fair "June Bride" has called off her marriage until November. Although her trousseau had been supplied by the smart shops, as agreed, the bride decided upon the postponement because the promised honeymoon to California couldn't be arranged . . . Vincent Sheean: Your new book, "Not Peace, But a Sword," will be August's Book-of-the-Month . . . George Bernard Shaw: Max Baer has offers from two summer theaters—the playhouses at Ivoryton and at Bucks County—to appear in your play, "Cashel Byron's Profession."

RAYMOND MASSEY: Mrs. Roark Bradford, whose husband wrote "Green Pastures" and "John Henry," no longer is considered a Yankee by Roark's kinfolk in New Orleans . . . She won her palms by learning the catechism of the South . . . When Bradford asked her: "What was the greatest army ever assembled on one battlefield since the world began?" she dutifully answered: "The Army of Northern Virginia, by God, sir."

BROADWAY ASSOCIATION: Two other Broadway cafes bit the dust—Bert Frohman's, the most elegant cafe on West Fifty-second street, and N. T. G.'s Midnight Sun on Broadway. The plan is for the latter cafe to reopen in three weeks . . . Bill Robinson: The man who damaged your car at the World's Fair grounds was not Grover Whalen's son—but a uniformed cop . . . King George VI: Do you know that a New York night club owner once danced with your wife? He's Felix Ferry, proprietor of Monte Carlo. He danced with her at the British Embassy in Paris, while you were the Duke of York. Lady Mendl introduced them.

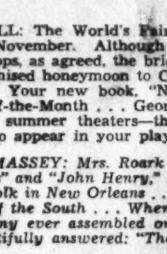
BURGESS MEREDITH: Orson Welles expects to net $50,000 from his vaudeville tour, and to earn $100,000 more in Hollywood this summer. He'll use all this money to revive his ill-fated "The Five Kings" . . . Thomas Mann: Eduard Benes confided that he would make the most important pronouncement of his career at the League of American Writers' meeting at Carnegie Hall . . . Paul Green: After Konrad Bercovici visited you in his trailer, at Chapel Hill, N. C., he was offered $800 for that trailer, and refused to sell. Five minutes later the trailer was destroyed, when Bercovici ran the car into a tree.

HERBERT BAYARD SWOPE: Within the next few weeks, there'll be "horse-racing" operating on Broadway. A new electric sign, to be placed atop the Strand Building, will have a four-horse race, twice a minute. The "horses" will circle the sign-track for 40 seconds . . . The operators of the sign can adjust it only to fix the first race. From then on, however, and all night long, each of the four "horses" will be a 2½-to-1 shot.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 2.—Stars come and go, but Garbo goes on forever. There was more excitement when she stepped into the still gallery at Metro the other day than there was the first time she appeared there. And I'll be darned if she doesn't look younger.



HOPPER

Her hair's just about the same. Asked if she was going to have a new style, she said, "That's Metro's worry, not mine."

A lot of smart clothes were sent out from one of the shops for her but she said, "No, my hair wouldn't do them justice. I'll wear my own clothes."

Her eye was quick to notice that beside a huge pipe put through the wall to carry cold air, a tiny vine had grown through, too. She said, "No matter how important man seems to be, nature creeps in and shows she can get there, too."

The electrician was Swedish and begged for an autograph. Garbo said, "When I first arrived, I said I wouldn't give autographs. So if I give you one, it would make me a liar."

Before the sitting was over, Lubitsch strolled in. Garbo said, "I came to make portraits. When I finish I will do a story conference with you."

She demands nothing—therefore, gets everything.

Which is so unlike one of our newer beauties, who complains about the pose, lighting, and most everything is wrong. But she'll learn. By that time maybe the public will, too.

Understand Jimmy Roosevelt's salary has been upped many thousands a year since his job in Europe with "Wuthering Heights."

Linda Darnell got a letter the other day which sent her in stitches. A fan wrote for her photo but added, "If I have to pay a quarter for it, I don't want it. 'Cause you're not famous yet."

No, but she will be soon. That child is a combination of Janet Gaynor, Dolores Del Rio and Merle Oberon and takes direction like a veteran.

Greg Ratoff told me when he made her test that he thought to himself: "There's another thousand dollars wasted." But when he saw it next day, he yelled, "That's the girl I've been dreaming about." When you have experienced people like Ann Southern, Alan Dinehart and Sidney Blackmere raving about a newcomer you've got something.

Few people have been welcomed back to the screen by the public and critics as has Dick Barthelmess, in "Only Angels Have Wings." And don't think the producers haven't been checking his ovation. He's had an offer from every company in town.

Alice Brady goes to Springfield, Ill., for opening of "Young Mr. Lincoln." Says she'd go anywhere for Mr. Zanuck. He's the only one who gives her parts for which she's suited. Others will when they see "Lincoln"—she's superb.

When Mrs. Harriman came to town the Goldwyns wanted her as guest for a dinner—she turned it down. You see, her husband is on the board of Union Pacific and she's a great friend of Joel McCrea, with whom she dined!

Young Eric Von Stroheim shaves his head every summer, just like his dad. He's a male attendant at Twentieth Century-Fox.

The Ritz Boys Score Laughs In 'Gorilla'

Mystery Comedy, Now At Columbia, Their Most Amusing Vehicle

"THE GORILLA." Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the play by Ralph Spence, adapted to the screen by Rian James and Sid Silvers, starring the Ritz Brothers, with Lionel Atwill, Patsy Kelly, Anita Louise, Bela Lugosi, Edward Conlon, Edward Norris, Wally Vernon and Art Miles. Directed by Allan Dwan. Reviewed Friday afternoon, at the Columbia Theater.

A gorilla with a murder complex, plus an old Victorian manse full of secret passages, plus people who disappear every time the lights are turned out. It adds up to fever and chills. But toss in the Ritz Brothers and the arithmetic changes. The worse the catastrophe, the bigger the laugh.

So "The Gorilla," currently decorating the Columbia screen, is a goulash of shivers and giggles. It should be a mop-up at the neighborhood theaters. It has more excitement than a Western and all the laughs usually lacking in the "hoss operas." It'll amuse the grown folks and give the kids the time of their lives.

The picture starts in high, with a gorilla reaching his hairy arm into Patsy Kelly's boudoir, startling Mademoiselle Kelly into a spasm of hysterics and screams unprecedented in cinema history.

A Matter of Mystery

There's lots of mystery about whether the gorilla is a real gorilla or a masquerading murderer. Lionel Atwill's position, as an uncle who stands to benefit by the death of his lovely niece, Anita Louise, is also highly questionable. Bela Lugosi, as a butler who's always out of sight when terrific things happen, leers enigmatically. Joseph Calleia complicates things further by popping in and out, as a mystery man of unpleasant habits. You'll never be able to make head or tail of the plot—until the last half minute when all mysteries are unrolled like lightning.

Into the middle of this melange are catapulted the Ritz Brothers as a trio of private detectives. The Ritzes are all brave as the dickens, except when they're scared to death. They're also good for a laugh a minute, funnier than in many of the musicals they've adorned.

Gorilla Is Co-star

The gorilla ought to be co-starred with the Ritz boys. He's the most horribly satisfying gorilla you wouldn't want to meet. His eyes are tiny and wicked, he's bigger and meaner than the fabled Minotaur; he's always walking around the wrong corner. His sweetest scene is when he walks around the eaves casually gripping the beautiful and helpless Anita Louise by one frail wrist.

"The Gorilla" settings add greatly to its effectiveness. All are done in the more overpowering mid-Victorian style, with somber carved mantels, decors weighing tons, majestically depressing entrance halls.

The Paramount Pictorial gives a view of the famed Ted Peckham and some of his boys, who are pledged to take out the "lady from Duluth" for a consideration, but neither neck, swizzle nor tell offside stories. The Peckham glamour lads look about as glamorous as a dish of ham and cabbage.

Top added feature is a "Crime Does Not Pay," the best of the series—pointed, terse and enlightening, dealing with the crime of arson for insurance, as indulged in by sorely tempted businessmen.

The newsreel is still packed with the doings of England's royal pair.

MARY HARRIS.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 2 (WS).—George Raft's new string of race horses has kept him busier than the proverbial one-armed paper hanger. But thoroughbreds have to eat, so George is going back to work and forget vacation days. He will land right back at the Warner Studio, and I couldn't help but smile when I was told that Monsieur Raft is due to be assigned by Jack Warner for the lead in "Twenty Thousand Years In Sing Sing," a remake of the famous Warden Lawes novel, with Anatole Litvak directing.

LOUELLA PARSONS

My amusement is caused by George's continual battle against underworld characters and his eventual acceptance of his fate. He fought with Paramount constantly over playing bad boys and finally parted company with the studio because he didn't like his roles. But he does such a good job, that all the studios start paging him when they have a gangster part. So it seems he had better forget Romeo and stick to Mephistopheles.

You must remember how very good Eddie Albert was as the military school cadet who becomes a papa in "Brother Rat?" Well, very quietly and without any fanfare, John Monk, jr., and Fred Finkelhoff, authors of the play, have been tipping out a sequel titled "Brother Rat's Baby," which they've just sold to Warners for the same cast—Eddie, Wayne Morris, Jane Bryan and all the others. I was curious about whether the playwrights intended to reverse the procedure and make a stage play out of their movie plot. But, they tell me at the studio that the sequel will be just a movie and won't hit the footlights later on.

I really caught up with my reading in Guaymas, Mexico, where there is nothing to do but fish or take a sun bath. Out of 24 books I carried with me, I read about 15, but I missed the mystery yarn now being discussed in Hollywood, "Send Me Another Coffin," by S. G. Presnell, which Walter Wanger has bought for the movies. Speaking of Guaymas, it's an interesting town on the Gulf of California which had a great boom in 1925. Then the important American interests were withdrawn with the exception of the Southern Pacific, which runs a train there and operates a very good hotel. Located in Sonora, it is the birthplace of several of Mexico's past presidents and the home of a number of wealthy Mexicans.

Chatter in Hollywood: If Maxie Rosenbloom wasn't taking his art so seriously these days (his movie acting), Lou Nova would certainly be invited to meet him in the ring. Slapsie beat him here last year and considers the Nova victory over Max Baer a personal triumph. You can't beat that Rosenbloom brand of humor, which is always spontaneous. To-day on the Warner lot, right in the middle of a scene in the short, "Hippy Mazie," he stopped and, calling the directors said, "Say, I think I'll cut you guys just like Aristotle. This is really the story of my life."

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: The Russell Gleasons the proud parents of an 8-pound baby boy. Everybody's doing well, including the grandparents, Henry Hobart and the James Gleasons; best news in days is the definite word that Bebe Daniels and Ben Lyon sail on June 14, their ninth wedding anniversary. They have been away from us far too long; chatted with Marc Connelly at the Miriam Hopkins-Anatole Litvak party. Marc is adapting Edna Ferber's "Nobody's in Town" for Sam Goldwyn; Never knew that Roland Young could be such fun; Jessie Barthelmess, Kendall Milestone and several of our other best looking matrons kept him going at a great rate; Mrs. Eddie Robinson, with flowers in her hair, looking as if she were a native something or other, teaching Basil Rathbone the rhumba while Ouida coached from the sidelines; Deems Taylor, Louis Bromfield and a score of other famous literary lights took part in the fun and remained until the wee sma' hours.

There was a Mexican motif in the decorations—the table cloths had tiny figures in them and an orchestra played all the luring native tunes; two cunning Mexican children passed out gardenias for the ladies and red carnations for their escorts; Loretta Young, in a white dress that gave her a slim princess look, danced often with Bob Riskin, while John McClain divided his time between Irene Selznick, Ilka Chase and other beauteous married gals whose husbands were absent; Mrs. Jack Warner, much thinner since her illness, and Mrs. Charles Feldman were two of the smartest women at the dance and certainly two of the most beautiful; Margaret Sullivan and Leland Heyward, just back from England; Edgar Bergen, who is now raising bees, and Walter Huston in a happy mood and so was his son John, who wore the highest collar since the Gibson-girl era; Heather Thatcher, who leaves for England in July, was another with whom I talked; Armand Kaliz's gift to his wife on their eighth wedding anniversary today was a gold fiddle with an emerald cat, symbolic of "The Cat and the Fiddle," his current play.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Knew His Lines

Wayne Morris was so excited during his marriage ceremony to "Bubbles" Schinasi that he said "I do" twice. "But they didn't call for a retake," he said thankfully.

Blind Georgetown Law Student To Be Graduated With Honors

In Georgetown University's law school graduating class is Albert Torres Gonzales, blind student, who completed his work with the aid of a dictaphone and a Braille writer

Albert Gonzales, Sightless Since 16, to Hang Out Shingle in New Mexico as Lawyer, But Admits He Has 'Certain Secret Ambitions'

Among the students graduating with honors from Georgetown University law school on Monday will be Albert Torres Gonzales, of Los Cruces, N. Mex., who has not seen a word on any of the thousands of pages he has had to "read" to get his degree.

Blinded at the age of 16 while at a Citizens' Military Training Camp, the 25-year-old youth declared yesterday he selected a legal career because he thought it offered the greatest opportunities for him and the "least resistance." He hopes to hang out his shingle in his native State, possibly in Santa Fe.

First, however, he will go to Morristown, N. J., to obtain a guide dog from the Seeing Eye School—an aid which he has not had during his three years at Georgetown. On August 14 he will take the New Mexico bar examination, about which he is very calm and for which he will do very little cramming.

One of his classmates may go into partnership with him. If not, his younger brother will act as his secretary and office manager. Unlike many of this June's graduates, he has no fears about "getting along" but in his plans for the future there are "certain secret ambitions" which he will not reveal. Because of his admiration for former Senator T. P. Gore, one gathers they touch upon politics. Senator Gore, who was blinded at 11, is one of a half-dozen or so blind lawyers who blazed the way for Gonzales.

He has done a considerable amount of trail blazing himself, however, possibly more than any of the others. He has gone to a full three-year law school and he has called into use all the recent improvements for blind study, as well as experimented with new machinery. The dictaphone, for instance, has been one of his greatest aids, and his law library will have as many dictaphone discs as others have books.

In addition, he uses two kinds of typewriters—a Braille and a regular—has a "talking book" victrola, and many books made up for him special by groups interested in his progress. His "pocket" dictionary is four large Braille volumes. Numerous Washington friends have read books for him. He has employed professional readers, and there have always been classmates who have found him a good fellow with which to study.

Gonzales is popular at Georgetown, as well as an outstanding student. He has been particularly active in affairs of the Edward Douglas White Debating Club, and last week was awarded the prize given each year to the club's outstanding member. Associate Justice Pierce Butler presided over the dinner meeting at which his award was given and heard him deliver a speech on former Chief Justice White.

He received his bachelor's degree from the University of New Mexico, but was graduated from Roosevelt High School—while he was in Washington being treated at Walter Reed Hospital after the accident which blinded him.

8 Indicted in N.Y. For Conspiracy To Defraud FHA

New York, June 2.—The Federal grand jury in Brooklyn indicted eight persons yesterday on charges of alleged conspiracy to defraud the Federal Housing Administration from which Government agency they are accused of having obtained loans aggregating more than $150,000 under irregular circumstances.

Three mentioned in the indictment handed up to Judge Campbell, of the Federal district court in Brooklyn, were taken into custody before the close of the day and were placed under bail. These are Warren E. Fitzgerald, 38, of Jamaica, Queens, who was also indicted on two counts of forgery in addition to the conspiracy charges alleged against the others; Edward J. Breslin, 39, of New York and William J. Hentschel 30 of Elmhurst, Long Island.

The alleged conspirators were accused of contacting owners of homes and business who were seeking loans from the FHA for the repair or improvement of their properties, and aiding them in obtaining their loans through the filing of alleged irregular documents.

Million-Dollar Incomes Twelve Fewer in 1937

By the Associated Press.

Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau yesterday disclosed the number of Americans with million-dollar incomes dropped from 61 in 1936 to 49 in 1937, while total Federal income tax collections declined from $1,214,017,000 to $1,141,619,000.

He said, however, that the 6,350,148 citizens who filed returns reported net income in 1937 of $21,238,574,000 against $19,240,110,000 in the preceding 12 months. In 1936, returns were filed by 5,413,499.

One income exceeding $5,000,000 was reported, but in conformity with custom, the Treasury declined to disclose the taxpayer's identity.

The figures showed that 3,745,115 taxpayers paid an aggregate of $72,254,000 while the 49 in the million-dollar income class paid $62,058,000.

The returns disclosed a far different state of affairs than in the flush days of 1929, when 513 taxpayers had incomes in excess of $1,000,000, and 38 incomes of more than $5,000,000.

What Of The District?

The Randolph affair has taken a number of turns, but none of them seems to have been dictated by the welfare of the local community.

When the interest of Representative Randolph in a change of District paving specifications was first revealed, he declared that the chairmanship of the House District Committee is worse than a headache and announced his intention of resigning. The reason for this action was largely personal. He expressed belief that it would be unfair to himself, his family and friends, to continue trying to serve both the people of the District and his own constituents in West Virginia.

Now Mr. Randolph has decided not to resign. Again his reason seems to be personal. Presumably the chairmanship of the committee is still a "combination of a headache, a heartache and bodyache" to him, but he will endure the affliction. Of course all will understand and approve Mr. Randolph's unwillingness to step out while certain actions on his part are under fire. But in both cases the effect of his decisions upon the District seems to be a minor consideration.

The committee has asked Mr. Randolph to remain its chairman. Its resolution was doubtless prompted by a number of considerations. Representative Kennedy, who declined the chairmanship of this committee for himself, asserts that no man has worked harder or more fairly for the District than Mr. Randolph. It is well known that Mr. Randolph has taken an active interest in many local problems. For that Washington citizens are duly grateful. But can he continue to work effectively for the District if he considers the chairmanship he holds a serious imposition?

Probably few of the Congressmen who have asked Mr. Randolph to carry on would willingly accept leadership of the District Committee for themselves for any length of time. Most of them also consider service on the body handling District legislation a burden. So in giving its chairman a vote of confidence, the committee has not done much to clarify a very muddled situation.

Mr. Randolph's own correspondence reveals an appeal to the District Engineer Commissioner to work out "something favorable" for an asphalt paving company. Does the action of the committee, urging him to remain its chairman, mean a tacit indorsement of such practices? Does the committee intend to give future chairmen carte blanche to use their great influence with local officials in behalf of commercial concerns they may wish to favor? These implications in the resolution concerning Mr. Randolph demand more serious consideration than has been given.

It is all too clear that the committee is viewing the incident primarily as it affects Mr. Randolph and secondarily as it affects the welfare of this voteless community. So the latest turn of the affair, no less than Mr. Randolph's first decision, further emphasizes the need of relieving the District Committee of its onerous and undesired responsibility by creating a full-fledged municipal government in Washington.

Blackballing The C.I.O.

When the twenty-fifth session of the International Labor Conference convenes next week in Geneva, three members of the A. F. of L. will be present, but not a single C. I. O. representative. As the delegates are appointed subject to the approval of the President, this omission appears to set the seal of official approval upon the A. F. of L. as the accredited representative of organized labor in the United States.

A year ago Robert J. Watt, the A. F. of L. delegate, also represented the workers of this country. However, at that time there was still hope that the breach in labor's ranks could be closed. Since then, the C. I. O. has adopted a constitution of its own and established itself as a permanent, independent labor organization. Consequently, the question of recognition becomes a matter of real importance.

Whether one's sympathies lie with the A. F. of L. or the C. I. O. is an irrelevant consideration. It is at least certain that the United States can no longer be adequately represented at an international labor conference by members of one group only. Reports that the Department of State held up announcement of the names of the delegates because of difficulty in choosing between the A. F. of L. and the C. I. O. confirm the belief that the best solution lies in appointing representatives from both.

Since these international labor conferences are called for the purpose of full and free discussion of problems that affect labor, the delegates should be selected without prejudice and without any suggestion that official approval carries official indorsement of the views which they hold or the organizations which they represent.

The Minimum Wage

The committee for the textile industry appointed under the wage-hour act has transmitted its recommendations to Administrator Andrews. Although the jurisdiction of the committee was quite comprehensive, most of the testimony related to conditions in the cotton textile industry, because it is the most important of the several branches of the industry. Moreover, it is especially necessary to gauge the effect of proposed minimum wage rates upon the cotton textile industry since its wage level is slightly lower than that prevailing in most other divisions of the industry.

The bulky document containing the majority recommendations and the dissenting minority report indicates that the committee has given much time and thought to the difficult problem before it—that of setting a minimum wage rate for the textile industry as a whole and applicable in all parts of the country. According to the law, the committee must fix a rate that, "having due regard to economic and competitive conditions, will not substantially curtail employment in the industry." The minority members of the committee protest that the majority have given inadequate consideration to a large number of "economic" or "competitive" conditions that should have been taken into account before arriving at any conclusions about minimum wage rates.

Of outstanding significance, however, is the fact that the division within the committee follows sectional rather than class lines. All four employer representatives from the South signed the minority report, while the three Northern employer representatives supported the minimum wage recommendations of the majority. The two other signers of the minority report, representing the public, were also from the South. All the employe representatives, whether from the North or the South, approved the majority report.

Not only the votes, but the character of the arguments, indicate plainly that the major cause of disagreement is traceable to the refusal of the majority to recommend a lower minimum rate for Southern cotton mills. The minority report challenges the majority conclusion that living costs, as distinct from living standards, are not appreciably lower in the South than in the North. It asserts further that Southern manufacturers are under a competitive disadvantage because of discriminatory freight rates. And finally it maintains that the burden of the wage increases, necessitated by introduction of a 32½-cent hourly minimum rate, would be chiefly felt by the Southern sector of the industry.

Thus the first industry committee has divided on the question of establishing regional differentials—the bone of contention that for so long delayed passage of the wage-hour legislation. After reading the two conflicting reports, one is more convinced than ever of the unwisdom of setting national minimum wage rates by administrative decree.

Experience with the working of local minimum wage laws, applicable to limited groups of women workers, shows how essential it is to adjust wage rates to differences in local conditions and to make allowances for the ability to pay of the employing units. When the law calls for the establishment of minimum wage rates, applicable to weak, strong and average industrial concerns scattered over many States, the final recommendations, no matter how carefully framed, are certain to bring loud protests from some sections of the country.

Sequel To Debt Week

Republicans in and out of Congress recently raised an impressive cry against reckless spending during their celebration of National Debt Week. They were fortunate that this week was over—just over—before 55 G. O. P. Representatives lined up in favor of the Townsend plan, which puts all other spending schemes in the shade.

It must have been an embarrassing moment for the strategists at G. O. P. headquarters when the Townsend votes were counted. This utterly irresponsible and hopelessly extravagant proposal drew its chief strength from Republican members of the House. It is true that 40 Democrats, 1 Farmer-Laborite and 1 Progressive voted with the 55 Republicans. Likewise, it is true that 107 Republicans voted against the scheme. But that does not eliminate the ironic aftermath to the oratory of National Debt Week.

A great deal of satisfaction may be found in the large vote by which the measure was rejected. The ratio of all members opposed to those favoring was more than 3 to 1. That showing would have been even more favorable if 16 of the 20 Congressmen from California had not cast their votes for a somewhat too sun-kissed product of the Golden State.

But the G. O. P. has little reason to share this satisfaction. Instead of being a powerful buttress against spending, as any opposition party should be in a time like the present, it has displayed more faith than those it condemns for believing in pots of gold at the end of the rainbow. Nor is the vote on the Townsend bill the only occasion on which this tendency has been manifested.

Votes on the farm bill and several other measures suggest that much of the Republican dislike for loose spending and huge national debts is pure talk. Unless the G. O. P. can make a more effective Congressional record than it has to its credit now on this issue of spending, it is going to give the 1940 platform makers the jitters before their task begins.

The Promised Land

Even a world that has become callous to cruelty will be shocked by the tragic plight of the homeless wanderers on board the Hamburg-Amerika liner St., Louis, which arrived recently at Havana.

Driven out of Germany, the 917 Jewish refugee passengers aboard, mostly women and children, must now contemplate the grim possibility of having to return to the Reich. More than a few may decide that death is preferable to that fate.

Clearly there should be some place where these victims of twentieth century persecution can find at least a temporary haven. And it may be that Cuba, which has been very generous in its attitude toward refugees in the past, will find some way of admitting at least part of the shipload.

It must be recognized, however, that the responsibility for the plight of the refugees on board the St. Louis rests with the German government and with the shipping company which undertook to transport these unfortunates to Havana.

Were the Hitler regime more generous in its treatment of the unwanted element of the population they would not be forced to flee as they frequently are, with little more than the clothes on their backs. As it is, the victims of Nazi persecution, after being beaten and hounded, are then robbed. They are not permitted to leave the Reich with more than a pitiful remnant of their possessions.

In this instance, the shipping line also has something to explain. There is evidence that it was duly notified, before the sailing of the St. Louis, of the action taken by the Cuban government in canceling visas issued to the refugees. It chose to disregard this warning, apparently in the belief that the humanitarian sentiments of another nation would enable the passengers to be landed.

It is not the first time this sort of tragedy has happened. Repeatedly the Third Reich has permitted and even encouraged refugees to leave the country with little thought or care as to whether any foreign land was prepared to receive them. The tragic plight of the shipload at Havana is further manifestation of an inhuman indifference to human suffering.

It Continues To Live

The name of Czecho-Slovakia has been obliterated from the map of Europe. But that democratic republic is not dead. It continues to live in the minds and the hearts, in the inextinguishable memories and the undying hopes, of its freedom-loving people.

That is why the Czecho-Slovak Pavilion, dedicated Wednesday at the New York World's Fair, cannot be regarded simply as a sentimental tribute to a small nation which, for 20 years and under extraordinarily difficult circumstances, made democracy work. Rather, it is a concrete manifestation of a strong people's indestructible will to work out their own destiny.

In dedicating the pavilion, Dr. Eduard Benes spoke heartening words to his countrymen. "The time," he said, "seems dark for us and for the fate of all small nations in Europe. But thanks to this great land of freedom, we Czechs, Slovaks and Carpatho-Russians can still show to the world how an humble yet free and democratic people can work—and why that people will never die." And the last president of free Czecho-Slovakia also expressed the belief that "freedom in Europe will be re-established for all nations and states perhaps sooner than is generally expected."

Dr. Benes may be over-optimistic regarding the moment of Czecho-Slovakia's rebirth. But he is not at all impractical in clinging to the belief that the fate of his nation was not finally sealed last March, when the republic which Dr. Masaryk and he had founded was destroyed overnight. The flag which now flies—at half-mast—over Flushing Meadows is a symbol of the continuing identity of an ideal which force can never permanently crush.

"Primitive demands in modern man are in sharp conflict with illy defined yearnings arising from the dissatisfaction of the higher and comparatively recently acquired critical and ethical tastes," says a sociologist. Translation: We don't know what the hell we want.

Einstein says gravity is the same as electricity. If the power companies find this out, they'll soon be charging us so much per cwt. for holding our houses down within walking distance of the sidewalk.

And it would seem that Uncle Sam thinks there is a taxpayer born every 30 seconds.

Idle Dollars

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Apropos of Mr. Walter Lippmann's interesting article on "From the Wrong End Indeed," may I comment on one phase of his thesis?

That "purchasing power" is dependent upon "production power" is an obvious economic fact. However, there is a third step in the cycle, which, for want of a better term, I would call "spending quota." If wages, dividends and other forms of profit are not normally returned to the channels of trade, the economic cycle is not complete and stagnation results. No amount of business expansion, efficient management or low cost of production will be completely effective unless the public spends a certain proportion of their earnings.

Of course, people will continue to buy the necessities of life, according to each individual's income and standard of living, and this will always keep a certain number of wheels turning, but are not the American people contracting their normal expenditures, due partly to decreased income, but also to the fear and uncertainty of the business future, the specter of unemployed millions and the unsettled state of world conditions?

As evidence of this contention, the Federal Reserve Bulletin reports that, in spite of the nine depression years, the savings deposits have increased nearly one and one-half billion dollars, while the deposits in all other banks have decreased about two and one-half billion dollars. Does not this indicate a marked decline in the "spending quota" of the American people? If only half of the idle billions of dollars were poured back into the channels of trade, it would undoubtedly create a tremendous stimulus to business and prosperity.

The problem then is how to induce the normal spending. This, in the opinion of the writer, can be accomplished by two methods—first by the education of the public to the importance of normal spending through the press, radio, etc. The slogan, "Spend Your Way to Prosperity" would have a different meaning, for the people, instead of the Government, would have the privilege of selecting their expenditures; secondly, by the imposition of a tax on savings accounts. What cannot be done by persuasion may be effected by taxation. No doubt the public would resent these methods, for the people are jealous of their right to do as they please with their money, but the burden would, at least, fall on those best able to bear it. If these corrective measures fail, then the only recourse left is regimentation of savings, which would mean some form of dictatorship.

As the writer recognizes the force of the saying, "It is not so much what you say as who says it," perhaps Mr. Lippmann or some other one of your distinguished columnists will enlighten us on this phase of the economic problem facing the country today. J. P. OSBORNE.

The Germans In Spain

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: This is in regard to the editorial appearing in The Post of June 1 under the title, "Now It Can Be Told," which includes this paragraph:

"And so, while much was made of the assistance rendered the Republicans by Russia, there was a closing of eyes and stopping of ears to what was happening on Franco's side. It is this element which is now confronted with the Nazi boast that 'there was no major engagement of the war in whose execution the (German) legion did not participate in a decisive manner.'"

There is neither time nor inclination to comment on the grammar, let alone the reasoning involved in the above paragraph, and no more than mention need be made of the fact that throughout most of the Spanish civil war the press of this country was almost completely biased in favor of the loyalists, soft pedaled the assistance rendered by the Soviet Union, and made much of the German and Italian aid to Franco.

It is somewhat surprising, however, that a member of the journalistic profession here could be much impressed by any Nazi boast, when he is certainly convinced by this time that German press releases, coming from Dr. Goebbel's organization, are not quite trustworthy!

Transportation And Subsidies

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In a Post editorial on May 28, summarizing the Wheeler-Truman omnibus transportataion bill, it was stated that motor transportation was subsidized. That assertion is misleading and unfair to the 3,500,000 workers employed in the trucking industry.

It is true that the highways are constructed and maintained at the expense of taxpayers. But who are these taxpayers who foot the bill? They are those who use the highways. Our roads are built and maintained with money collected by the Federal, State and local governments in the form of gasoline taxes and registration fees.

The question, then, is whether the users of the highways pay enough in special motor vehicle taxes to cover the cost. Here's the answer. In 1937, the last year of complete record, motor vehicle owners paid $1,585,000,000 in special highway taxes. That sum more than covered highway costs. As a matter of fact, $198,000,000, or about 16 per cent of the total, was left over and diverted to non-highway uses. Obviously, then, those who use the highways not only bear the full cost of the latter, but contribute a substantial amount of their special taxes to the general fund.

Another question is whether trucks pay their fair share of highway taxes. As stated above, the total special highway taxes for 1937 equaled $1,585,000,000. Of that amount $417,500,000 was contributed by the trucks. In other words, trucks, constituting only 14 per cent of all motor vehicles, pay 27 per cent of the highway tax bill.

It seems that highway users should be commended rather than subjected to repeated erroneous charges of subsidy. They have built on a pay-as-you-go basis the greatest highway system in the world, a system which is essential to the national defense and which benefits every citizen of the land, whether or not he operates a motor vehicle. We call these facts to your attention in the interest of fair play and trust you will make them available to your readers.

The editorial also implied that trucks enjoy an unfair advantage over the railroads in the matter of regulation. The Interstate Commerce Commission, however, in its last annual report to Congress, stated that the regulation provided for trucks by the motor carrier act, if anything, was more comprehensive than railroad regulation. If the rails are to have their demand for "equality of regulation" fulfilled, Congress, it would seem, would have to tighten railroad regulation.

More Than One Opinion

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There has been no poll of American Jews in relation to Palestine, and, therefore, it is not possible to set down numerically the pros and the antis and the undecided. But Mr. Pegler is right when he speaks of "certain prominent Jews who call themselves leaders."

It is legitimate, certainly, for these persons to voice their own views or the purposes of group that they know are in agreement with them. When, however, they purport to speak for all American Jews—as they have done repeatedly in the past and as they do now more pontifically than ever—they are presumptuous. They do not and cannot know the attitude of all American Jews, and when they announce this assumed attitude it is by the simple expedient of omitting all Jews who do not agree with them.

Palestine as a national and cultural center is one issue; Palestine as a refuge for the oppressed is another. Innumerable American Jews who reject the first concept have been and are now deterred from speaking their minds because they fear to hamper a humanitarian project. In a burning building any possible fire-escape must be used. But this emergency psychology should not be mistaken for a Weltanschauung.

Pending the time of an adequate exposition of the American Jew (and it has certainly not yet been written!), I, for one, welcome Mr. Pegler's plain speaking.

FLORENCE KIPER FRANK.

On Meeting Distortions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is difficult adequately to characterize your editorial of this morning, "More Heat Than Light." In my modest opinion it is the perfect editorial which one cannot hope to see but occasionally.

But who is going to present to your readers a denial of the statements made by Gen. Moseley regarding the close association between Jew and Communist?

These "facts," so simple to disprove, both with regard to Jewish influence in Russia and the prevalence of Jewish influence among "Communists" in the United States, have again and again been presented for the benefit of all who want the truth, doubtless, in your own publication.

At this time, when racial and religious antagonism is apparently again temporarily rising in this country, the least that can be done by those who believe in liberty and freedom is to present the facts. Perhaps this should be done on every occasion when distortions are given wide publicity.

Better Place

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: With Jay Franklin arguing in his radio debate with Mark Sullivan on the evening of May 31, 1939, for re-electing President Franklin D. Roosevelt as a kind of high priest of the New Deal made over into a kind of religion, the MRA meeting on Sunday night, June 4, 1939, is timely. It presents the real question for consideration. Shall the real religion be supplanted by a host of nationalistic dogmas and dream phantasies?

The MRA teams from Scandinavian countries, from Great Britain and Canada are news headliners at home. MRA has been on the front pages of European newspapers for over a year. Labor, industrial leaders and reigning sovereigns such as Queen Wilhelmina of the Netherlands and King Leopold of the Belgians are giving the idea their support.

It seems to this layman that the announcement of the forthcoming meeting on Sunday night in Constitution Hall merited better than page 6 position in your valuable paper on Monday, May 29, 1939.

The Post Impressionist

Of Islands

IN SOCIOLOGY CLASS we were told that island life brings about a distinct philosophy, and we were astonished and somewhat pleased to find that scientists thought we were apt to be independent, self-reliant, individualistic and hardy. They didn't mention our egocentricity. We may sometimes say we don't think Connaicut is the most beautiful and interesting island on earth, but we don't mean it. All islanders are the same. There was the Nantucket schoolboy who replied, "Somewhere northwest off-island," when his teacher asked him to locate Alaska. If she was a native, she probably gave him A.

No doubt the sociologists were speaking of more remote islands than ours, which is a narrow strip of land cut out by the last glacier in the mouth of Narragansett Bay and three miles to the mainland on either side by hourly ferry. Sometimes those three miles were pretty rough going, however. We've been able to learn to stand up in streetcars with some degree of equanimity because we acquired our sealegs as children on the icy deck of a ferry in the middle of a good old northeaster, with hail driving horizontally across the deck at 60 miles an hour. We stood at one end of the boat and when it pitched we slid shrieking down to the other, around a stanchion just in time to slide back again as the ferry rose over the next wave.

Running for the ferry was always good sport; in fact, more sporting than running for a train, for instance, because the worst that can happen in the latter case is a nasty somersault in the gravel. There's always the possibility of falling overboard when you jump for a ferry. No fatalities have been reported from that cause. The nearest was the case of the man who couldn't swim but who was fished out from among the paddle-wheels one January evening and steamed home, literally and figuratively, crouched against the boilers in the engine room.

But even more humiliation than that sometimes attends running for a boat. A ferry, of course, has two bows, and there is a time when it is in the slip when it is impossible to tell which way it's going. I remember galloping breathlessly down the dock a hot summer day crying out hysterically to the captain to hold the boat and scattering pedestrians, children and dogs right and left in my haste. I screamed at the purser that I would pay him when I came back, dashed through the gate, leaped across 3 feet of churning open water and landed safely on deck among the staring passengers and open-mouthed deckhands to find the boat was just pulling in. The whole thing was done to a "T" in a Donald Duck cartoon recently, and I testify to its complete accuracy.

The ferry company employs high school and college girls in the summer as pursers. When that was my job there was, for a while, a uniformed charity worker who used to follow me up the line of cars, collecting, if he could, the change I returned to the patrons, tipping his hat and occasionally his ill-fitting wig, with a thousand "Thank-you-God-bless-you's." One memorable day among the limousines, motorcycles and trucks full of live chickens, we came upon an open touring car, a slightly dilapidated but cheerful sight with the mother and father in front with the baby and six or so assorted brothers and sisters in the rear. I punched the ticket and moved on. My friend tipped his hat and asked the man the usual question, "Would you like to help the Army?" "No, thanks," said the father laconically, "Got one of my own."

Toward the end of the day the job required riding back and forth on the ferry and pursering both terminals. I was interested to discover by the regulations that as purser I was in charge of Lifeboat No. 3 and was expected to man Hose No. 2 in case of fire. Occasionally I would go up in the pilot house with the captain and take a few lessons in steering the ferry. All you have to do is keep the flagpole, which sticks out in front of all well-equipped pilot houses, sighted on the point where you wish to land and then remember to turn the wheel the way you don't want to go. It's very confusing at first, and the wake when I was at the wheel looked like a rampant sea serpent. The boat was called The Beavert' after Connaicut's seaward point of land which resembles a beaver's tail.

There is also the Beavertail Lighthouse. In clear weather it and the lighthouse on Block Island 15 miles out wink companionably at each other. The story is often told that years ago the Block Islanders would tie up their lighthousekeeper, put out the light and then run around a haystack with a lantern to lure ships onto their rocky coast. Once an approaching ship moving to port of the haystack went aground between it and the darkened lighthouse. The natives rescued the crew, appropriated the cargo, fired the ship and sent it back out to sea. Only after they had done this did they realize that one person was left on board—a mad woman whose screams can still be heard occasionally off shore. The ghost lights of the burning vessel sometimes flicker at night.

There are four or five outstanding family names on Block Island, with the result that if you talk about Mary Brown, for example, she'll be confused with three or four other Mary Brown's. You must call her by her husband's name, too, thus: Mary Charles Brown or Mary John Brown. There is a rhythmic scrap of conversation overheard between some Mary Charles and Mary John which has been current around Narragansett Bay for a long time. It goes like this: "He was settin' there 'parently jest as well as ever, when all to a sudden his head drapped right down into a hot sasser o' tea . . . must a had a fit er sethin'."

It seems somehow wonderful that people who had braved 3,000 miles of uncharted ocean to reach the wilds of America should have chosen to cut themselves off even further by settling on the then fairly inaccessible islands. But man love islands. It just be they said to themselves, "This island will be the site of my castle and the whole Bay will be my moat."

The Pope's Peace Task

By the Associated Press.

He Reports With Hope

Vatican City, June 2.—Pope Pius XII today called upon the world to solve its problems not by the sword but by the "noble reign of law" and reason.

In an address to his cardinals on the occasion of his sixty-third Saint's Day, which is generally observed in Latin countries in place of birthdays and on which the cardinals had come to pay the Holy Father homage, the pontiff said that the sympathetic response of European governments to his efforts on behalf of "the peace which is so much desired by the people" left the way open for his continued work to avoid war.

The pontiff disclosed his fear early this month that international quarrels would "degenerate into bloody conflict" but he said he now had "greater hopes that pacific solutions could be found and a stable peace reached."

Representatives of the Holy See at that time invited the various governments to examine their disputes. They talked with statesmen of Germany, Italy, France, Great Britain and Poland.

An account of the pontiff's address to the Sacred College is summarized by a Vatican press agency as follows:

The Holy Father addressed to the Sacred College, and particularly to the venerable dean who had voiced the good wishes of the cardinals, the expression of his lively paternal thanks. His Holiness was happy on this day to be with those whom Providence had associated with him 'and the most intimate counsellors and collaborators in the many sacred cares of the supreme pastoral office.'

"He then paused to consider the difficulties of the present hour, 'an hour charged, in more than one quarter, with ferments which are setting in motion or carrying to events of whose final results it is impossible for critics' discernment to say whether they will lead to construction or to ruin.'

'In a World Of Opposition'

"Since the beginning of its existence the Church has always raised to the Lord its prayer and among men taken action for the triumph of true peace. The Pope remains faithful to this glorious mission despite the gravest difficulties, 'in a world of opposition and division, of conflict, of feeling and of interests, of exulted ideas and of proud ambitions, of fear and of daring; in the midst of a humanity which seems almost unable to make up its mind whether it should recognize and entrust the primacy of action and the decision of its own destiny to the sword or to the noble reign of law, to reason or to force.'

"Nothing can withhold the Holy Father from an activity which is both valuable and holy because, as he said, 'it could not be reconciled with the sacred duties of our apostolic ministry if external obstacles or the fear of false interpretations or misunderstanding of our intentions and purposes, all of which are directed toward what is good, were to hold us back from the exercise of that salutary office of peace which is proper to the church.' He said:

"At this point the Holy Father recalled the action taken by him recently for the preservation of world peace.

'This Spirit of Peace and Justice'

"Animated in the depths of our heart . . . by this spirit of peace and of justice at a moment which appeared particularly grave in the lives of the peoples—toward the beginning of last month—we thought it timely, after mature deliberation, to make known to some of the statesmen of the great European nations the anxieties which the situation was causing us at that moment and our fear lest the international dissensions become aggravated to the point of degenerating into bloody conflict.'

"This step met in general with the sympathy of the governments, we are glad to say, and, after it had come to public attention (through no co-operation on our part) it met with the gratitude of the people; as a result of this step we received assurances of good will and of the resolve to maintain the peace which was much desired by the people. Who could be more satisfied than we to see this beginning of relaxation of the tension in men's souls; who could long with greater desire than we that it could be consolidated more and more? Nor do we wish to pass over in silence other information, which we received at the time of the above-mentioned step, in regard to the sentiments and intentions of influential statesmen, to whom we are most grateful.

"This other information also has given us greater hope that the considerations of noble humanity, the consciousness of inevitable responsibility before God and before history, and the right judgment of the true interests of their people would add strength and weight enough to induce the governments, in their efforts to reach a stable peace which would safeguard the liberty and the honor of nations, to think and to act in a manner calculated to attenuate, reduce and conquer the obstacles, real and psychological, which stand in the way of a sincere and secure understanding. And this circumstance has left open to us the way to further manifestations of our earnest solicitudes."

The Holy Father invited all his children to have confidence in Divine Providence which rules the destinies of men; he recalled in accents of deep emotion the material response which his warm invitation to a crusade of prayer had received throughout the world and especially among "the fair legions of the young."

The New Spending Policy

AT THE RISK of seeming to have an obsession on the subject, I venture to insist that the collapse of effective resistance to public spending will have more far-reaching consequences than anything else that has happened in this Congress. The general public is still under the impression that the output of speeches against spending marks the existence of a determined opposition to the spending policy, but the fact is that even last January the effort at retrenchment in the matter of relief was no more than a symbolic gesture. During the spring Congress as a body, with only the feeblest kind of protests from scattered individuals, has offered little resistance, and much encouragement, to the continuation and even the increase of the large expenditures.

The one important exception has been the defeat of the Florida ship canal. But this was the kind of exception which proves the rule. Here the resolute and effective leadership of Senator Vandenberg was successful because there was a division of local and regional interest in regard to this very controversial project. That it was defeated by this combination of special circumstances rather than by conviction about economy in general was proved when the Senate, without a roll call, increased the agricultural appropriation for one year by close to a hundred million dollars more than Mr. Vandenberg's estimate of the cost of the Florida canal.

New Spending Policy Is Not Temporary

THE COLLAPSE of all effective resistance in Congress opened the way to the new spending program of the New Deal. It is a new spending program, different in principle and much greater in scope, than anything that has yet been attempted. For hitherto spending has always been treated as an emergency measure, as a means of providing relief and for overcoming the depression that was supposed to be coming to its end.

But the new spending policy, of which the public has had as yet only a sketchy outline, is no temporary measure. On the contrary, it is intended to be permanent, and it will embrace nothing less than public expenditure and public control of perhaps as much as half of the national savings. The Mead bill, which would provide credit to small business under Government guaranty, is only the first stage of this program; the scheme outlined by Mr. Berle, which would make the Federal Government the great investment banker for Federal, State and local government, and for all kinds of public enterprises, is a fair outline of what the New Deal now aims at.

No Effort to Balance Spending by Taxes

IT WOULD BE a mistake to underestimate the popular appeal of this new policy. The only thing that ever makes Government spending generally unpopular is that the voters have to pay the tax bill. But in this new program the Government will not use tax money wrung from the reluctant taxpayer. It will use capital that is not being invested in private enterprise. Money will flow out from Washington to small businessmen, to city and State governments, to various utilities, to great groups of voters, and since there will be no effort to balance the expenditures by taxes, the process will be politically painless.

It would be a mistake also to think that this policy is merely something concocted by a coterie of bright young men who advise the President. This policy has its roots in something much deeper than the predilections of individuals.

It has its roots in the fact that a full recovery of the normal kind would require a series of measures that almost every economic interest in the Nation is disposed to resist when applied to itself. Thus there has never been a true liquidation after the boom, especially in real estate and railroads. In the large industries there is a degree of control over the markets which has pegged many prices above a competitive market level. Industrial labor, partly by its own organized effort, partly with Government help, partly with special legislation, and partly by means of relief as it is administered, has kept hourly wage rates at a boom level, and is able, whenever recovery begins, as in the winter of 1937, to push up the rates faster than re-employment can be effected.

These conditions are obviously unfavorable to the investment of new capital. They have been aggravated by a tax structure which absorbs so large a part of the profits of enterprise and by a debt structure which provides a perfect refuge for timid capital.

Not One Factor But Combination

NO ONE OF THESE factors alone, but the combination of all of them, causes the stagnation which only Government spending can partially overcome. No doubt the New Dealers like to spend. But they are compelled to spend because they cannot liquidate the frozen mortgages of the boom, the frozen prices of big business and the frozen wage rates of labor. In 1937 they tried not to spend—in fact, for a few months they had the real budget in balance—and then the disastrous recession of 1937 convinced them that they do not dare not to spend.

It is now an open question whether the Republicans, if they come into power in 1941, will really dare to reverse this policy. It calls for the doing of some very unpopular things, not merely in the budget but in the field of business practice and labor relations. No doubt that is the reason why Mr. Vandenberg took the one-term pledge. He is close enough to the facts to know that a President who is serious about this problem would have to risk his political life every day of the week.

D.C. Housing Body Seeks to Adjust Rent, Pay Days

Rental problems of low-income families were discussed last night by directors of the Washington Housing Association at a meeting at the home of Dr. Anson Phelps Stokes, retiring president.

The board planned to ask the cooperation of real estate agents in making rent day fall on pay day, in the interest of both landlord and tenant. A committee was appointed to study the reconditioning of houses structurally sound but needing repair.

Members of the board who were present included Mrs. Anne Archbold, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, the Rev. Robert W. Brooks, Nathan Cayton, James A. Cobb, Dr. J. M. Dalla-Valle, William J. Flather jr., Mrs. C. Carroll Glover jr., Mrs. Alexander Boyd Hawes, Maj. Campbell C. Johnson, Dr. Laurence F. Schmeckebier, George N. Thompson, J. Bernard Wykoff, and Mrs. Helen Duey Hoffman. Guests included John Ihlder, Mrs. David Scull, Miss Ruth E. Stone, and Mrs. Stewart Riddell.

Mrs. Roosevelt Defends Working Wives

Boston, June 2 (AP).—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt today said she hoped "we would not be stampeded" into letting a drive against "working wives" get a "hold on us."

She told a press conference numerous attempts throughout the country to ban married women from public service jobs could be attributed to "economic conditions."

'Must' Action By Congress

By Mark Sullivan

A Neutrality Policy

THIS CAN be said: In no well-managed country would a Congress or Parliament adjourn, leaving neutrality in the shape in which America's neutrality now is.

The most important detail of our neutrality policy came to an end, by expiration of a statute, on May 1. That leaves only minor fragments of a policy on the books. In anticipation of this condition, and to revamp our policy as a whole hearings were held by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. The hearings were conducted with exceptional thoroughness. During several weeks, almost literally every person having worth-while views, was heard. The utmost diversity of opinion was brought out. Among the witnesses was the former Republican Secretary of State, Mr. Henry L. Stimson. And it is typical of the spirit of the hearings that Mr. Stimson presented a view which differs from that of other Republican leaders. In addition to the persons invited, practically all who wished to volunteer their views were given opportunity. It is perfectly safe to say that every possible view thought, or idea about neutrality is to be found in the record of those hearings.

Every possible view or argument is there. All that is needed is that, out of these ideas and out of the ideas of the responsible Senators—those on the Foreign Relations Committee, a tentative bill, or alternative bills, should be drafted. The next step is debate in Senate and House, to arrive by discussion and amendment, at a definite law. Without doubt the process would be long and contentious. But it is the only way, and the completely acceptable way, for a democratic republic to arrive at a foreign policy.

I SAID in the beginning that in no well-managed country would Congress adjourn leaving neutrality in the shape in which America's neutrality now is. Just for the purpose of proving that America can be well managed is itself a highly urgent reason why Congress should not adjourn until it passes a neutrality law. The European dictators, in justifying their own autocratic, one-man type of government, assert that all democracies are badly managed, just because they are democracies. Repeatedly Hitler makes that sneer—uses that argument to persuade his own people to keep dictatorship and to incite other peoples to imitate dictatorship.

If, now, Congress adjourns without enacting a neutrality measure, the dictators will see that as justification of their contempt for democracies. They will be the more arrogant toward us and all democracies. Specifically, they will be tempted to take advantage of our lack of a neutrality policy; to take advantage of the sprawling, wobbling ineffectiveness which lack of a definite law imposes on us.

Lack Of Neutrality Plan Aids Dictators

THIS PRESENTS another and more concrete reason why Congress should pass a neutrality law before it adjourns. Between adjournment of Congress, if it comes in July or August, and the assembling of Congress again in January, it is at least a possibility that war may break out in Europe. However, great that possibility may be, it will be made more great by lack of a neutrality law on our part. Not only will the dictators' contempt for all democracies be increased. In addition the present status of our neutrality law; a thing of incomplete shreds, happens to work to the interest of the dictatorships if war occurs.

That Congress should pass a law, some law, is almost more important than the kind of law they pass. Through debate in Congress and discussion in the country, a reasonably good law is likely to come. Give the President as much discretion, or as little, as Congress, after discussion, deems wise. Better than to keep the present condition—with minor matters covered by binding law and major matters left unprovided for—better than that would be to wipe out the fragments which are now the only law we have. That would at least give us something concrete, by leaving us with the historic rules and practices of international law. No course by Congress, however, can be as satisfactory as to enact a well-thought-out law.

IT IS FOR Congress to study the conditions, compare the various views, argue them and write the law. Among private citizens, only the most exceptional can have either the broad information or the thoroughness of thought necessary to arrive at a good law. It is safe to say that every open-minded citizen who today thinks he has a right view about neutrality would modify that view in one direction or another after making himself familiar with all the other views and the facts and reasons that support them.

All the average citizen can confidently have is the objective, which is neutrality and peace, for the immediate present and the long range. For methods, for arriving at the best law and the best execution of it, the average citizen, in this as in many matters, must rely on men. Only through men, men as men and men as symbols, can democracy function. It happens that in this field there is a man, Secretary of State Cordell Hull, in whom America can have the greatest confidence. Every school of thought in Washington respects the character, and intelligence, and sure-footed judgment of the Secretary of State. Mr. Hull has asked Congress to write a neutrality law and has suggested points he thinks should be covered. With that as a beginning, as a suggestion, Congress can proceed to formulate a law.

Germany's Intervention In Spain

AT THE LAVISH state dinner given Prince Paul of Yugoslavia in Berlin this week, Chancellor Hitler took occasion to declare that the "common borders" which Germany and Yugoslavia now share have been "established for all time." And it is understood that this pledge will soon be formally embodied in a nonaggression pact which the Third Reich hopes to conclude with its southern neighbor.

Yugoslavia's international position is extraordinarily difficult. Wedged in between the axis powers, she is menaced by both. Nor dare she look for assistance to the western democracies who, during recent weeks, have extended the mantle of their protection over such neighboring countries as Greece, Rumania, Turkey and Poland.

Hitler's nonaggression pledge may, therefore, help to reduce Yugoslav fears that, sooner or later, their country will be placed in the tragic situation in which, in turn, Austria, Czecho-Slovakia and Albania found themselves.

BUT THE hard-headed Yugoslav people will swallow Hitler's peace assurances with a grain of salt. They know what happened to those little nations. And they know that Hitler has repeatedly demonstrated that he regards even his most solemn pledges as binding only for as long as they serve his convenience.

On the very day that Prince Paul was being feted in Berlin, the Nazi press was full of stories of the preparations being made for the triumphal reception to be given to the Condor Legion which served in Spain. And for some days these same newspapers have been publishing in lavish detail the nature and extent of German intervention in Spain.

ON AUGUST 17, 1936, Baron von Neurath, the German foreign minister, issued a declaration in response to the French plea for a non-intervention accord on Spain. In that note Germany pledged herself "to prohibit, direct or indirect, exportation, re-exportation and transit to a destination in Spain, the Spanish possessions and the Spanish zone of Morocco of arms, munitions and material of war as well as aircraft, assembled or dismantled, and vessels of war."

In addition, the German government declared that it was, in its opinion, "eminently desirable that the interested governments extend the measures which they will take to the prohibition of departure from their territory of volunteers who might wish to participate in the conflict existing in the regions concerned."

THAT DECLARATION was issued just a month after the outbreak of the Spanish civil war. It followed, therefore, the actual beginning of German armed intervention in that struggle. For official German sources now reveal that the first German aid rendered Franco was in July, 1936. Twenty Junker transport planes, it is now admitted, together with their crews, were dispatched to Spanish Morocco and were instrumental in conveying Moorish troops to Spain. Indeed, within a few weeks, 15,000 such troops were brought over in that way, together with guns, munitions and other war materials.

What happened after Germany's acceptance of the non-intervention plan? The answer is that the only change in the situation so far as the Hitler regime was concerned was that the aid rendered Franco, after the Third Reich had formally promised to preserve a hands-off policy, was greater than it had been before.

In December, 1936, German newspapers now let it be known, the German force in Spain was reinforced by the dispatch of pursuit planes, a heavy anti-aircraft battery, two anti-tank formations and a number of scouting planes. And a member of the German general staff, Col. Warlimont, was appointed leader of the German fighting forces in the Iberian peninsula.

THERE WAS hardly an engagement, we are now told, in which the Condor Legion did not participate. German planes took part in the bombardment of Cartegena, Alicante, Malaga, Albacete, Madrid and other places in loyalist territory. German officers helped train Franco's troops. German soldiers and aviators participated in the capture of Bilbao and they played a decisive part, the Nazi press insists, in the capture of Teruel in February, 1938.

Yet all through this period Germany's official or unofficial intervention in the Spanish struggle was vehemently denied and the news was carefully hidden from the German people themselves.

IT MAY BE said, of course, that the original German agreement regarding nonintervention only specifically prohibited the dispatch to Spain of arms, war material and planes, that it did not actually prohibit Germans from participating in the civil war as "volunteers." But that loophole was presumably plugged up by the Nazi regime when, on February 18, 1937, it promulgated the so-called "law for the prevention of participation in the Spanish civil war." That law declared that:

German citizens are forbidden to enter Spain and the Spanish possessions, including the Spanish zone of Morocco, for the purpose of participating in the civil war.

The German press now tells how well that law was observed. The British and French governments were by no means unaware of what was going on. The activities of the axis powers in Spain did not remain a secret very long. But London and Paris permitted the nonintervention agreement to continue and to serve as a useful screen for German and Italian intervention. Weakness, irresolution and stupidity on the one side was thus matched by bold bad faith and monumental cynicism on the other.

Wallace to Yield His Wild Life Refuge to Ickes

Agriculture Secretary Wallace today will figuratively drink gall and wormwood, as he dedicates 3,800 Maryland acres which his agency has developed as the Nation's first wild life research refuge and which he must hand over in less than a month to the Interior Department.

Under terms of the President's second reorganization plan, Wallace's Biological Survey is transferred to the Interior Department, effective July 1. With it goes the Patuxent Research Refuge, on land reserved from the Beltsville, Md., agricultural research center. Agriculture officials point out that the Beltsville planners devoted a large part of their time, money and energy to bringing the wild-life experiment station to completion.

The dedication, sponsored by the National Wildlife Federation, will begin at 3 p. m. Following Wallace, Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada; Representative Robertson (Democrat), of Virginia, and Dr. Ira N. Gabrielson, chief of the Biological Survey, will speak. An Interior Department representative will be on hand.

Mooney to Offer Plan for Uniting C.I.O. and A.F.L.

New York, June 2 (AP).—Tom Mooney, California labor leader, today said he would outline a plan for unity between the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations when he speaks in Madison Square Garden Monday night.

Mooney added he probably would see William Green, A. F. of L. president, and John L. Lewis, C. I. O. president, in Washington next Tuesday.

Mooney was pardoned last January by Gov. Olson of California after serving 22 years in prison for participation in the 1916 Preparedness Day parade bombing in San Francisco.

Sheriff Demands LaGuardia Check Nudity at Fair

New York, June 2 (AP).—The delicate problem of controlling nudity in the New York World's Fair girl shows was handed over to Mayor LaGuardia today by shocked Sheriff Fitzgerald, of Queens County.

Fitzgerald broke up a "Miss Nude" contest Wednesday night and arrested two entrants competing without benefit of brassieres.

In a letter to LaGuardia, he demanded that the city take over the licensing of all World's Fair shows and clamp a censorship ban on those showing too much of the feminine form.

Q.—Are we digging deep enough?

A.—I think so. We just uncovered another one of those buildings nobody can make head or tail of.

Q.—You still think they were buildings?

A.—It is difficult to cling to the notion, but there are distinct signs of windows, et cetera.

Q.—We dug up a curious thing yesterday. It appeared to be a monster egg. Did they lay eggs that big in those days?

A.—Certain data from the New Deal period indicate they laid 'em much bigger.

Q.—Have you determined what that tall white shaft was?

A.—I can't make any sense of it. It appears to have been erected for no other purpose than to achieve height without purpose.

Q.—Almost everything we dig up bears the name Grover Whalen, doesn't it?

A.—Yes. It will be important when we dig up something that doesn't.

Q.—Who was this Whalen?

A.—He was evidently one of the great kings of that period.

Q.—But there were no American kings in that period.

A.—That's what you think!

Q.—What is your conclusion about that sunken pool and surrounding buildings we dug up last week?

A.—Everything around it bore the name of one Tut-Ank-Rose.

Q.—Are you sure the name was Rose?

A.—In letters that big, how could I be wrong?

Q.—This Rose was evidently an exotic person who loved to live lavishly. He must have been a great swimmer.

A.—He evidently had his palace here.

Q.—What makes you think so.

A.—I find constant reference to Holm.

Q—What do you suppose those things were that we found in that odd building with the inscription "General Motors?"

A.—It's hard to say, but they were evidently some quaint contrivances for traveling from place to place. I think they were called automobiles. They ran at the ridiculously slow pace of 80 miles an hour.

Q.—It bears out our theory that in 1939 people did travel on land. By the way, who was this Ford person, some manifestation of whom we encounter every time we lift a shovel?

A.—The research department thinks he must have been a traveling man, possibly a strolling player. We find evidence of him no matter where we go.

Q.—The amazing thing is that we find nothing in all our excavations that bears any relation to our habits and customs today, 2,000 years later, is it not?

(There is a hubbub from an adjacent point. One of the explorers rushes over, finds out what it's about and returns.)

A.—Well, you're all wrong in that last remark.

Q.—How so?

A.—They just dug up a midway and the mummy of a fan dancer! Civilization in that respect never changes!

Attempt to Rescue Thetis Crew

This dramatic attempt to rescue men aboard the British submarine Thetis was halted yesterday when a rising tide covered the stern of the craft. Circle shows protruding stern. Mary Haworth's Mail

Writers on Human Relationships Have Young Man Sadly Confused as to How to Choose the Right Mate

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: Judging from your articles (and those of other writers) I am convinced that a real love, leading to a happy marriage, must be considered by him who would have such in about the same light as if he were seeking a worthy investment for his excess cash. In other words, he must see that certain very practical requirements are met. If these are satisfied, then the way is clear. To deny the truth of that would be to deny logic.

However, at the risk of denying logic, may I ask how in the world a young man—with all the hope, joy and emotion that is youth, surging for expression in his breast—is going to approach love and marriage sanely, according to the above standards, without emerging a complete cynic?

He approaches the matter with a horror of being victimized by "mere physical infatuation." He denies all emotion in favor of reason. Yet in his twenties "mere physical infatuation" or emotion (be it adolescent or not) is not so easily tossed aside as those who are older and who have passed through the storm would lead us to believe. Why are we plagued with these "no-account" things at an age when, according to nature, we should choose a mate?

True, we are not animals. Unlike animals, we must think ahead. But it is no easy matter. If I am to accept the "meet-certain-tests" idea, I must believe that a man should wait until his latter thirties or early forties, at least—the age, presumably, when problems of hot-blooded youth no longer harass him to a great degree—before considering marriage with a woman he can truly love. Does a great love, then, mean practical respect, plus a fair measure of mental, spiritual and physical congeniality?

If you should accuse me of being an emotional adolescent (and I am 24 years of age, by the way) then you must accuse every man my age, whom I know, to be the same. What am I to do when I am hit by something from within, as if by an electric shock, every time a certain girl of my acquaintance enters the room? What am I to do when I yearn, literally, to see her even 10 minutes after she has departed? I know full well that she does not meet all, or even most, of the so-called requirements. I know that, failing in this, there would undoubtedly arise many problems after some years. But what of hope—of which youth has so much? What of man's ability to adjust himself to circumstances?

Most of the requirements-to-be-met, as set forth by most writers on the subject, amount roughly to similarity in background, tastes, interests, objectives, etc. . . . But I, for one, should hate to sit at a breakfast table with a mirror reflecting myself on the other side. Then, too, how is a mere man going to judge a woman's character when the minds of one sex run clockwise, so to speak, while the minds of the other sex run counter-clockwise. In the extremely happy event that you should answer this epistle, which, as you can see, represents the mind of a man torn alternately between cynicism and a "why-not-risk-it" attitude — please give me the break of replying to the spirit of the matter.

MODERN HAMLET.

Touchstone of Compatibility

DEAR MODERN HAMLET: If there is one indispensable requirement for happy marriage (for the person of sensitive intelligence), it is, I think, the ability of the two partners to speak each other's language in the subjective or intuitive realms of personality. Thus, when writers on human relationships counsel youth on the wisdom of choosing a mate whose character and personality are the product of comparable or co-equal biological inheritance and social experience, I believe it is their indirect way of saying that he should take care to choose a mate who does speak his language (in this figurative sense); who is, in brief, so constituted and so conditioned that he is native to the same spiritual (or emotional; or intellectual) environment, climate or atmosphere.

However, such basic kinship between two personalities is not necessarily, nor in every case, the product of existing or demonstrable co-equality of the kind suggested above. Personalities that are essentially compatible with one's own—that are complementary or supplementary in a deeply, genuinely satisfying way—are sometimes discovered, to the discerning eye and by the open mind, with their roots in circumstances that are altogether alien to one's erstwhile experience.

In such instances, some dissimilarity in outward seeming—what we might call a socially "protective coloration," which is the net result of the respective individuals' self-preservative efforts to adapt to their respective environments—should not be allowed to deceive the beholder's eye, nor to confuse his judgment, as to the actual nature of the person encountered. When seeking a mate, it is as illogical to reject—as fundamentally incompatible, per se—every person whose background or superficial characteristics are unlike one's own, as it would be to assume that every person of similar social history or comparable behavior-patterns is, per se, a legitimate candidate for consideration.

The touchstone, if any, of enduring compatibility in marriage will be found, during courtship, in the influence of each personality upon the other. If each person reveals an involuntary capacity for evoking in the other hitherto unsuspected potentialities for mental, spiritual and social growth—then you have both seed and soil for that "real love, leading to happy marriage," which you are now so diligently seeking to overtake and recognize. The collective potentialities and reciprocal incentives to growth which exist in the relationship, or in the twain, should (given average support) enable the couple to outgrow any superficial dissimilarities which may have existed at the outset of their acquaintanceship.

Thus, I would suggest that you—as a person of more than ordinary psychic awareness—be guided as much by your deepest intuitions as by the glittering generalities of the safe-playing graybeards, in this matter of finding a mate. Where the spirit is sensitive and searching, it is more to be trusted than the intellect—which tends more to rationalization than to straight-to-the-point analysis and valid conclusion.

And remember this: as long as you live—or, better say, as long as your mind and spirit retain the vitality which makes for growth—so long will you be seeking certitudes of one kind and another. And as long as you seek them, so long will they elude you. The best you will find at any point will be some variable. The pot of gold at the rainbow's end of such a quest is only this—the continuous growth in experience and understanding that accrue to him who never gives up the search.

Learn Shorthand at Home

HARD TO get a job when untrained, so Martha tries to make herself useful by helping at home.

But a regular pay check is what she dreams of—how much more useful she'd be to herself and others if she could earn money!

So many girls are like Martha. If they'd only use their leisure time to teach themselves a skill, such as shorthand, the "open sesame" to many profitable business careers!

The elements of Pitman shorthand are really simple to learn. Its symbols, you see, are based on the sounds of words instead of their spelling. No matter how many words an employer may use in dictation, he uses the same sounds over and over again—which means you haven't many symbols to learn.

For many of the phrases commonly used in business correspondence, such as "I thank you"—you have shortcuts, "abbreviated" symbols which you write quickly without raising pencil from paper.

By learning a few symbols each day you soon get to the "taking dictation" stage. Fun then to get together with one or two friends, take turns dictating. As your speed increases, turn on the radio, follow radio speakers.

Here Comes the June Bride

June has a way of bringing the year's biggest crop of brides—or at least of putting fancies in the minds of many a young maid and man. Here is the first of the heroines of a spring romance. Her wistful gown is nothing less than cloud. It comprises 50 yards of billowing silk net which looks airy enough to float her up the aisle. Silk lace, its pattern outlined in cotton and rayon cording, makes the bodice and skirt yoke. This same filmy lace is repeated in the provocative bow which perches aloft the very new bridal veil

The Gentler Sex

By Malvina Lindsay

Woman With a Cause

"Yes, it has been terribly warm . . . No, I don't enjoy the heat either, but there's just this much about it—it may serve to awaken some people. Yes indeed! It's just weather like this that makes people realize what the C. C. L. is doing—beg pardon? . . . No, I haven't met Mrs. Quince. How do you do? . . . By the way, Mrs. Quince, have you any relatives in Omaha, Nebraska? . . . Well, I met a Quince family there a few years ago—or maybe it was Quinceby? . . . I believe it was!

Well, anyway, these Quincebys were very lovely people. You see I was out there campaigning with the C. C. L. . . . Yes, the Citizens' Cosmetic League. I just supposed everybody knew what the C. C. L. was . . . Oh No! No! No! We haven't any connection at all with the Beauty in Everyday Life Group! Now what we're trying to do is to put municipal make-up booths on all downtown street corners—Beg pardon, what did you say, Mrs. Brash? . . .

"My daughter? . . . Oh she's just fine . . . Oh yes, she gets a little homesick. She'd really like to move back here but her husband he doesn't like Washington . . . No, not at all. No, he wants to stay in California.

"Yes, California is a very lovely State. Did you know we were just about to get municipal make-up booths in several cities there? . . . Yes, indeed! You know, Californians are very progressive. But I want to tell you that this thing's coming all over this country! Now you and I may not live to see it but—oh, how do you do, Mrs. Wimple? . . . This dress? . . . You like it? . . . I'm so glad . . . Yes it is hard to find smart summer clothes. And say—you know that's JUST the reason we particularly need these municipal make-up booths at this time! Yes! Now if you're going around downtown with a shiny nose in a cotton dress—beg pardon?

"Oh, iced tea! How lovely! I believe I'll take two of those little cakes. Oh, and I want one of those little coconut balls, too! . . . Well as I was saying, now just as long as your nose is not shiny—what did you say, Mrs. Piper? . . . Yes, these are very original little cakes. I wonder how she makes them. Say, you know we served very unusual cookies at our C. C. L. lawn pageant—what was that, Mrs. Gibber? . . .

"No, I'm not going away this summer—not for a while anyway. No, I want to stay here as long as Congress is in session. You see we'd have gotten our municipal make-up booth bill up for a hearing before now if it hadn't been for Senator Sly. You see there's a lot of politics back of this opposition to us . . . Yes, and international complications!

"Beg pardon? . . . No, I don't care for any more iced tea, but I will take another of those coconut balls . . . Oh, and I didn't get one of those marshmallow sandwiches! . . . Well you see the whole thing is that both the Nazis and Communists are fighting us . . . Yes, it's really a long story—what was that, Mrs. Strong? . . . No, I'm not going to the garden party . . . No, I think it's on account of the C. C. L. You see the British are really very much opposed to us . . . Yes, the Clivden set have had their axe out for us for years . . .

"What? . . . The Queen? Yes, I think she's charming . . . Say, did you know we were sending a committee from the C. C. L. to try to see her while she's here? . . . Yes! . . . You see we feel that once she thoroughly understands the real purpose of our movement for municipal make-up booths—beg pardon, Mrs. Gimlet? . . . Jane Clipper? . . . No, I haven't seen her for weeks . . . What? . . . Reno! . . . No! . . . Well what did he do? . . . What woman? . . . A Congressman's secretary? . . . Oh say, that reminds me! Did I ever tell you how Senator Sly worked that trick to keep our municipal make-up booth bill from coming up in Congress? . . . I did? Oh, but there's a sequel to it! Yes indeed! Now this is what happened . . ."

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, June 2.

TEN YEARS AGO the Ziegfeld Girl was the last word in feminine allurement in this country. She was wined, dined and well-married, and beautiful photographs of her, unhampered by too many clothes, adorned magazines, billboards and even cigar boxes. But with the death of Ziegfeld and his famous revues, the Ziegfeld Girl disappeared simultaneously, and now the queen of the Nation is the dress mannequin and photographic model.

It is usually believed that these tall, gorgeous creatures lead gaudy lives, spending their days before the camera and their evenings in night clubs in the company of the handsomest man in the room. Sometimes this is true, but I lured a startling exception to my apartment the other day for a visit. These girls, like cigarettes and breakfast foods, have vogues—during which they are much sought out by customers and their earning power reaches its peak. This is the pleasant state in which my specimen now finds herself. Her name is Muriel Maxwell; she stands 5 feet 11 inches in her heels; she weighs 126 pounds minus all apparel and she is remarkably beautiful. Most important of all, she has a perfect camera face and at the moment it is impossible to leaf through one of the slick women's magazines without meeting Muriel at least a half dozen times.

What interested me was that this reigning belle is not an ornament of the smart supper clubs. She prefers to spend the evening quietly with the young man of her choice, engaged in improving conversation. What is more unusual, she is a native-born New Yorker and now lives with her parents in a Riverside drive apartment with a fine view of the Hudson. Coming from a girl so gorgeous, this story may sound slightly fishy, but there is no reason for not believing it. After all, not even the most popular mannequin of the hour need not be a night-blooming girl about town.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN: The other day I saw the former prima donna, Geraldine Farrar, at the theater all dressed up in ermine over a dark dress, and looking exceptionally beautiful. Incidentally, if all hair could go gray as handsomely as Gerry's, the dye people would have a tough time of it . . . Speaking of singers, Lily Pons is back in town and was noted in Gramercy Park the other day wearing the strange gray-green coat dress designed by Valentina. Her hat was a miniature Homburg to match, with two taffeta streamers down her back . . .

Cookie Recipes From Post House Of Old Virginia

My Martha Ellyn.

The Post Food Editor

THE POST HOUSE on the Plank road between Lynchburg and Petersburg, Va., in colonial days had a hostess who was as famous for her cooking as she was for her beautiful garden that streatched away on all sides from the Post House. Primroses and pinks, and countless other old English flowers grew there in profusion. And the food was as delicious as the flowers were beautiful. The following recipes are some taken from her book.

Cream Wafers

1 pound flour, 1 teaspoonful soda dissolved in buttermilk, butter the size of a large egg. Mix with rich cream—as much as is necessary to make a fairly stiff dough. Knead well. Take small bits and roll very, very thin. Do not cut them. Pick all over the top with a fork and bake in a hot oven until brown.

Cracknuts

Mix 8 ounces sugar and 8 ounces flour. Then melt 4 ounces butter and add 2 tablespoons wine. Add 4 eggs and mix it all into a paste. Roll as thin as paper and cut into shapes. Wash the tops with the white of an egg and dust with granulated sugar. Bake in a quick oven.

Stylists Outline The Perfect 1939 Trousseau

Travel Costume, Light Wool Coat Among Items Suggested

The Post Fashion Editor.

THIS is a month of brides and this is a city of brides. More prospective honeymooners are now probably knitting their pretty brows in this capital than in any other community of its size. To lighten their task of deciding what to wear on the biggest day of their careers, we have photographed a dream gown of infinite beauty. To aid in their more arduous search of what to wear in the ensuing days and what to take on their cruises north or south, we have gathered news on the perfect 1939 trousseau from local experts.

MARSHALL ADAMS

A well-rounded trousseau may contain the following items—more or less—varying with the individual's needs and purse strings:

A travel costume, which might also be the going-away suit. It should be a suit to combat local heat as well as tropical blisterings from southern cruises. It might be a two-piece dark lightweight crepe or sheer, jacketed and depending on no fluff but rather upon its simple basic design. With it may be worn a crushable felt hat or a stitched fabric one.

Two Evening Frocks

One lightweight wool coat, neither too casual nor too formal—perhaps a lightweight, nonshedding angora, or a good quality dressmaker gabardine.

A simple afternoon frock of pastel or splashy printed crepe or a sheer, cool, hot-weather town costume, preferably navy, dark brown or black, touched up with detachable white lingerie. This may be a semi-tailored, two-piece redingote, if this style is especially becoming.

A dark chiffon or fine cotton voile cocktail frock, relieved only by bright, light costume jewelry, and topped off upon occasion by a small flowered toque or veiled turban.

Two evening gowns, one a formal decollete model of net or lace, which packs easily and is always right for ship captain dinners or important parties. This might be a clear pastel or summery print to remain distinguishable from the dinner gown, which might be of navy cotton, black sheer or a dark pique. The formal gown should have its own jacket or bolero to do double duty for informal evenings.

Sports Clothes

Sports clothes depend so entirely upon one's mode of living and preferences after marriage that we will suggest only a skirt, play suit of slacks, shirt and sweater combination; a really functional swim suit and at least one good quality spectator sports dress of the classic shirtwaist type, plus its own cardigan or shortie coat of matching spun rayon.

As far as the intimate wardrobe goes, there should be included one printed or solid toned but gayly hued housecoat. There might be one or more frothy negligees of chiffon, sprigged cotton or point d'esprit, depending upon just how much of a lounge lizard you are at heart. And of course lingerie—you might include six each of slips, nightgowns or silk pajamas and your own specific needs in hosiery, bras, girdles and step-ins. As to shoes, gloves, handbags, handkerchiefs and extras, let your conscience be your guide. The happiest honeymoon is the one minus dull cares about packing and unpacking, night basin laundering and worrying over those little wardrobe headaches.

Your Figure, Madame!

Deep Breathing Is Best Aid to Poise And Voice, Says Joy Hodges, Film Starlet

IF THE AVERAGE girl in the 'teens and twenties would work as hard at being graceful and naturally lovely as the starlets in the movies do, there wouldn't be any wallflowers.

From an interview with Joy Hodges, the screen actress, we gather that if the movie girls seem to have more glamour than the average girl, it is only because they work harder at it.

There are several reasons why Joy Hodges would stand out in any crowd of girls, and they are a regal posture, a surprising amount of poise, and not a trace of self-consciousness.

Lessons in Poise

"Is all that natural," I inquired, "or do you learn it?"

"You learn it," she promptly replied.

Self-consciousness is unpardonable on the screen, and it is the thing all stars have to overcome.

Miss Hodges has taken dancing ever since she was a little girl, so when she went into the movies she walked and moved gracefully. But she did not know how to use her voice and she would either smile too much or not enough and she would make grimaces even when she didn't know she was doing it.

What helped most in overcoming both faults was the deep-breathing she practiced to lower her voice. She has one effective breathing exercise which she practices 15 minutes a day.

Lie face downward on the floor and breathe rhythmically, taking long breaths that go clear to the pit of the stomach so that each inhalation practically lifts you off the floor.

And here is another Joy Hodges tip that will prove helpful: one who is self-conscious or who

When you have an important interview, pause just before entering the room, take a deep breath, lift your chest and sail right in! That deep breath tends to dispel any nervous tension caused by anticipation of the interview.

Wall Walking Helps

Since Miss Hodges has a 23-inch waist and a 32-inch hipline, I asked what about exercise . . . "I do a horrible exercise," she told me, "a wall handstand—and then walk down the wall!"

Hmmm . . . well! You may not be up to that one, so here's a less strenuous version:

Position—Lying on back on floor, buttocks as close as possible to wall. Have the knees bent, feet placed against the wall.

Movement—"Walk" up the wall until the body is in a straight line, weight resting on the shoulders. Hold, with the abdominal muscles taut. Now walk down. Six times will be enough.

Junior League Defies Rain at Horse Show

Miss Cecil Lester Jones Occupies Center Box; Polish Ambassador Present for First Day Program

A SMALL, SLIGHTLY DAMP, BUT VERY gallant audience ploughed through the mud out at the Meadowbrook field yesterday afternoon for the opening day of the Washington Horse Show, sponsored by the Junior League. Ordinarily the event draws throngs of smartly dressed members of Capital society, and every box is filled. But because of the torrents of rain which fell between 3 and 5 yesterday, the boxes were virtually deserted and except for the Junior Lague workers and a few of their more sporting friends who huddled in the grandstand, the field was deserted.

However, Miss Cecil Lester Jones, president of the Washington League, was philosophical about the matter. "It's much better that it should rain today than over the week-end," she said. Miss Jones, wearing a blue tweed coat and a white Panama hat, occupied one of the center boxes. The show will continue today and tomorrow, though if it rains by 10 o'clock this morning, the Children's Class scheduled for today will be postponed until tomorrow.

Put off was the bareback costume class, in which the winner is to be judged by the amount of applause from the spectators. Entrants include Miss Betty Couzens, Mrs. L. W. Robert, jr., William Washburn and Fred J. Hughes, jr. Miss Couzens rode her horse Repulsion in several of the classes yesterday and Mrs. Robert, in riding habit, occupied the press box and laboriously typed out a story on the show for a friend. Mr. Robert, in a very snappy checked jacket, drifted in at the end of the afternoon to watch the proceedings.

THE POLISH AMBASSADOR, Count Jerzy Potocki, wearing a trench coat, sat alone in a box to watch part of the show. Evidently people in Poland are more sporting about bad weather, for the envoy seemed surprised that so few persons were present.

Mrs. Montgomery Blair, jr., chairman of the Horse Show committee, was present, wearing a beer jacket over her sports costume. Taking tickets under two umbrellas at the gate were Mrs. Eugene Foss, in green tweeds, and Mrs. Daniel O'Donoghue in a raincoat.

Mrs. W. Thacher Winslow, who was in charge of the Junior League salesgirls, sat in one of the booths selling cigarettes. Most of the helpers wore the regulation green smock always seen at league horseshows. Her assistants included Miss Christine Gawne, Miss Cassie Parker, Mrs. Metcalfe Walling, Miss Dorothea Sowers and Mrs. Margaret Warren.

Miss Marion Shouse, who was in charge of the waitresses at the show, disappeared into the clubhouse to dry her hair over the fire in the living room. Miss Barbara Bradley, who wore a green cardigan over her smock, decided to let hers slowly uncurl in the dampness.

BEING WELCOMED on all sides was Miss Sylvia Szechenyi, daughter of Countess Laszlo Szechenyi, who is visiting Miss Mary Wilson, a debutante of last season. Miss Szechenyi made a sort of unofficial debut in Washington at a large tea given in her honor last year by Mme. Pelenyi, wife of the Hungarian Minister. She is a sister of Mrs. Eugene B. Roberts, of Washington.

Mrs. Peyton March, who hasn't missed a league horse show for years, occupied a box with Representative and Mrs. Robert B. Chiperfield, of Illinois. She wore a gray wool jacket over her sports frock. Others in the sparsely filled boxes included H. Rozier Dulany, jr., president of the Washington Horse Show; F. Moran McConihe, secretary, and Frederick S. Lee, treasurer.

The beer and hot dog booths did a good business under the guidance of the pretty Junior Leaguers who presided, wearing frilly red aprons over their frocks. Then there was a display of sports clothes in the adjacent booth, sold by other enterprising members.

MRS. JOHN HAY Whitney had numerous entries from the Llangollen stables in yesterday's opening, but was not present. Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh, however, motored up from Springsbury Farm, her home near Berryville, Va., and had several entries in the show.

Mrs. Marshall Exnicios and Mrs. Eugene Carusi, both well-known in equestrian circles here, presented two of the trophies yesterday, and then left almost immediately afterwards, in a downpour. The tally-ho rides, always a popular feature among the younger spectators, had to be postponed because of the weather, and the usual hayride was also missing.

Among the boxholders for the Washington Horse Show, many of whom will attend today and tomorrow if the weather is pleasant, are the Cuban Ambassador, the French Ambassador, Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, Mrs. Edmund Booth, Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor, Mrs. Levi Cooke, Mr. and Mrs. Walter Edge, J. M. Elizalde, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Parsons Erwin, Mr. and Mrs. David Gaillard, Capt. and Mrs. John Gibbons, Mrs. G. W. Hill, Mr. and Mrs. James Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Houghton, Mrs. R. M. Kauffmann, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Legg, Mrs. Joseph Leiter, Dr. and Mrs. James Alexander Lyon, Gen. and Mrs. Peyton March, Mrs. Edward B. McLean, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon, Mr. and Mrs. Keith Merrill, Mr. and Mrs. George Hewitt Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Myers, Mr. and Mrs. Frank B. Noyes, Theodore Noyes, Mrs. B. W. Parker, Mr. and Mrs. David A. Reid, Mrs. Herbert J. Slocum, Dr. Hans Thomsen, Capt. and Mrs. Chester Wells, Mrs. Price Whitaker, Mrs. Charles Stanley White, and Mrs. John R. Williams.

MRS. EXNICIOS is vice chairman of the horse show, and other members of the committee, in addition to those already mentioned, include Miss Louise Alexander, Mrs. Charles G. Cooper, Mrs. Thomas Knowles, Miss Juliet Dulany, who was present yesterday; Mrs. Philip Gore, Mrs. Laurence Green, Mrs. Beaudric L. Howell—she, too, braved the showers; Mrs. F. Eberhart Haynes, Mrs. B. Lowndes Jackson, jr., Mrs. Louis Jeffries, Mrs. William B. Kerkam, jr., Mrs. Atherton Macondray, Miss Elizabeth Sladen, Mrs. Ernest Swift and Mrs. George Walker.

Envoy to Fete Auto Delegates

The French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint-Quentin, will entertain at dinner this evening in honor of the French delegates to the general assembly of the International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs. The association closed its two-day meetings with a dinner at the Shoreham last night. The Ambassador will also give a luncheon today.

Vicomte de Rohan, who will head the group of guests, is president of the association and president of the Automobile Club de France, oldest club of its sort in the world. He and Comte Liedekerke-Beaufort, another member of the delegation, were schoolmates of the French Ambassador. M. Pierre Marchal, M. Henry Ainsworth and M. Lenormand are other members of the French group.

Others who will be present at the dinner include Corcoran Thom, William A. Several European Women's Safety Organizations May Develop From Wa shington Meeting

Wives of Delegates To Auto Club Meeting Entertained

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Women's safety organizations may be started in several countries of Europe as a result of the luncheon at which wives of delegates to the general assembly of the Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs were entertained yesterday at the Sulgrave Club by the Women's Safety Committee of the American Automobile Association.

Mrs. George C. Thorpe, chairman of the committee, which was formed five years ago, recounted its achievements in the field of safety. During its first year, she said, it was responsible for the passage of a bill which took 3,000 reckless drivers from the streets of Washington. The second year, it worked for the passage of a bill providing that playgrounds be kept open in the summer to afford a safe place to play, and during the next two years it concentrated its efforts on securing a $90,000 appropriation for a new school building on a site away from railroad tracks and heavy traffic which present a serious hazard to the pupils where the old school stands.

The committee is now advocating driving courses in high schools and colleges, she said, to reduce the number of accidents at the hands of young drivers.

Women of Holland To Hear of Work

Mrs. David Birnbaum, of London, who is a native of Holland although now living in England, and who was formerly a journalist, expects to write of the work done here in an effort to arouse interest among women of the Netherlands in forming a similar committee.

Other guests at the luncheon also discussed the possibility of such an organization in their own countries. There are many women drivers in European and South American countries, just as there are here, the women said, and their percentage of accidents is much smaller than that of men drivers. Mme. Naciscu and Mme. Nicolas Greceanu, of Rumania, were both enthusiastic over the work of the Washington committee, but the traffic problem is not so great in their country, they said. There is a much smaller number of cars and those who operate them are, on the whole, persons with judgment and a sense of responsibility.

Mme. Greceanu is a noted artist and stopped in New York to view her murals, depicting the history of Rumania, which decorate the Rumanian restaurant at the World's Fair. She painted them on a material which gives them the effect of tapestries, and they were sent over to be put up on the completion of the building.

Mrs. Thorpe, after speaking in English, which many of the guests understood, greeted them in both French and German and told of the work of the committee. She presented the guest of honor, Vicomte de Rohan, president of the international association and also of the Automobile Club of France, which is the oldest motor club in the world. He commended the accomplishments of the women's group in Washington and paid tribute to the safety record of women drivers.

Mrs. Laurence Benet Among Hostesses

Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, one of the members of the safety committee who was a hostess at the luncheon, greeted Viscomte de Rohan as a friend of long standing, she and Mr. Benet when they lived in France having known not only him but also his mother and other members of his distinguished family.

In the receiving line with Mrs. Thorpe and the honor guest were Mrs. Francis B. Sayre, wife of the Assistant Secretary of State; Miss Janet Richards and Mrs. Charles M. Hayes, of Chicago, wife of a member of the executive committee of the AAA, who is official hostess to the women of the visiting delegations. Washington I. Cleveland, of the D. C. Motor Club, made the introductions.

Diplomatic hostesses at the luncheon included Mme. Ertegun, wife of the Ambassador of Turkey; Mme. Irimescu, whose husband, the Minister of Rumania, is official delegate representing his country at the convention; Mrs. Brennan, wife of the Minister of the Irish Free State; Mme. Galbe, wife of the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation; Mme. Wennerberg, wife of the Counselor of the Swedish Legation; Mme. Forgosa, whose husband, Second Secretary of the Brazilian Embassy, is official delegate for Brazil; Mme. Chramiec, official hostess for Poland, which is represented at the convention meetings by the Polish Ambassador, Count Jerzy Potocki, and Mme. Gazuita, wife of the Counselor of the Chilean Embassy.

Among the guests from visiting delegations were Mrs. Carlos P. Anesi, of Argentina; Mme. De Meuse, of Belgium; Baroness van Harinxma and Mrs. N. A. Philipse, of the Netherlands; Mme. Valentine Argetoyanu, wife of the royal counselor of Rumania; Mme. Greceanu and Mme. Naciscu; Mrs. Ingeborg Engell and her daughter, Miss Marianne Engell, of Sweden; Mrs. Nume Mende and Mrs. L. Alberta Loyal, Credit Premier Tells His King

Leader Whose Laws Have Met Royal Veto Welcomes Majesties

By Edward T. Folliard

A Staff Correspondent.

Edmonton, Alberta, June 2.—King George and Queen Elizabeth came out of the Rockies to this westerly prairie capital today, got another whopping reception, and met the most talked-about politician in Canada, William Aberhart, premier of Alberta. Aberhart has been compared variously to Father Coughlin, Dr. Townsend and Senator Sheridan Downey of "ham and eggs" fame.

He started out as a schoolmaster, founded the Calgary Prophetic Bible Institute and four years ago was elected on a social credit platform that promised everybody in Alberta Province a minimum income of $25 a month, a sum far less than Dr. Townsend's $200 but good for plenty of votes nevertheless. Many followers of Aberhart, taking his promise literally, sold farms and other properties and contributed the proceeds to his campaign fund.

Aberhart has never been able to make good on his $25 a month pension scheme; in fact, the Alberta government has had to default on more than $4,000,000 in scrip.

Assures King of Loyalty

There were plenty of cheers for the husky, large-headed premier as he rode down Portage avenue in the procession with the King and Queen, and a few boos.

Aberhart, who recently forced the King's representative in Alberta to quit the government house and take quarters in a hotel, greeted the King with the assurance of "enduring loyalty" by the people of Alberta to the throne. The King, whose representative had refused royal assent to several bills advocated by Aberhart, returned the welcome with thanks for the "kind and affectionate" greeting.

An amusing rivalry between two bands went unnoticed by Their Majesties. While the King and Queen were visiting Lieut. Gov. J. C. Bowen, who serves as representative in the province for the Crown, the Social Credit Band and a band of Naval Reserve Pipers marched up and down in front of the building trying to outdo each other.

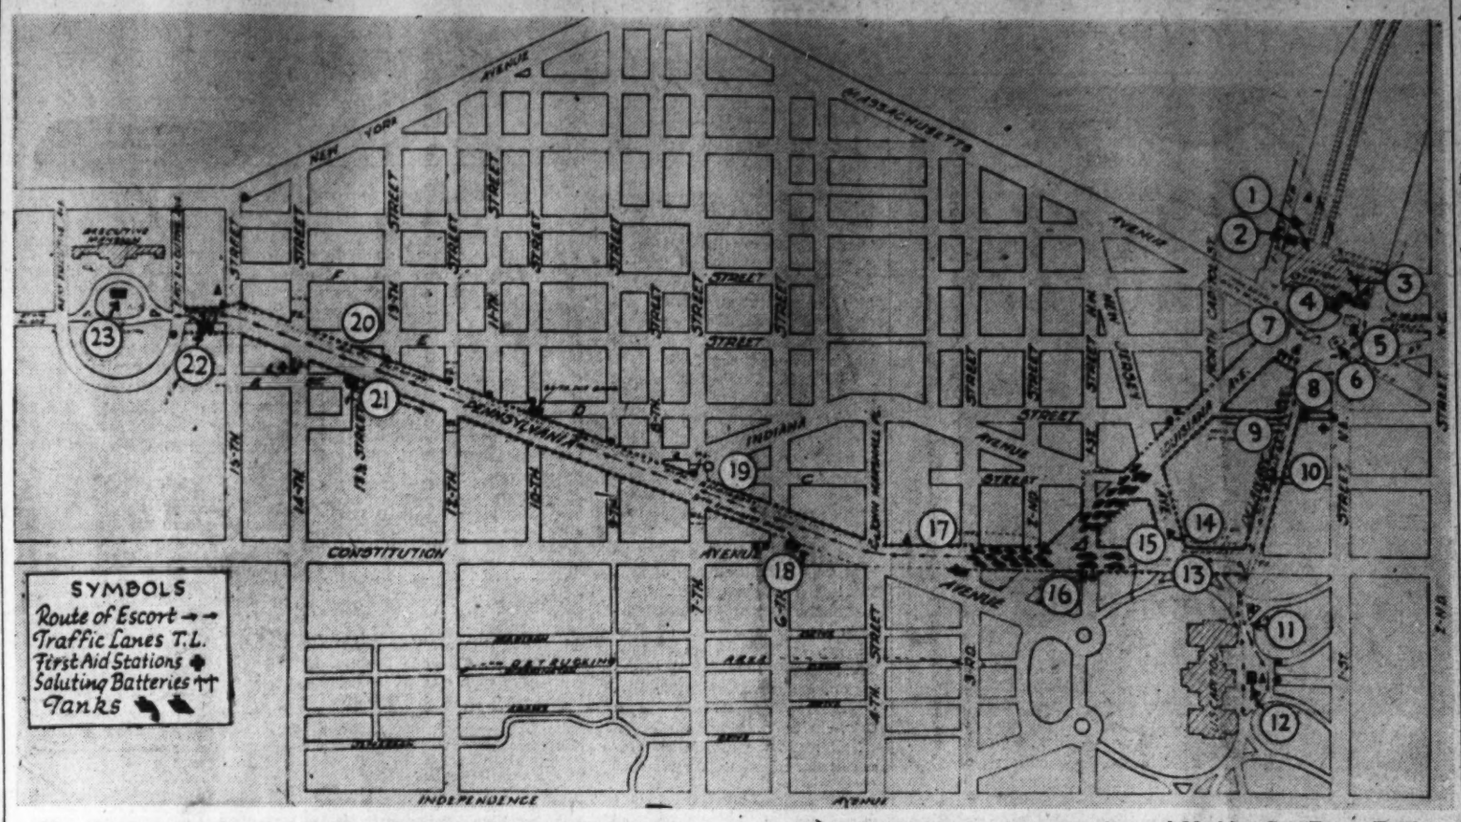
Here in Edmonton, farthest point north in Their Majesties' itinerary, the population doubled overnight to 150,000 for the welcoming ovation. Every hotel room was taken, so that thousands slept in their automobiles for the night.

There was one important change in the reception program, a change that must have left Beverly Kaye MacNutt, Aberhart's 9-year-old granddaughter, broken hearted. It had been arranged for Beverly to hand Elizabeth a bouquet at the terminal. The fact that little Beverly was brought on from Vancouver aroused the people of Edmonton and a cry went up that Dr. Aberhart was trying to "hog the show." At the eleventh hour the premier went on the air and announced that Marie Kathleen Stacey, an orphan from the Kiwanis Children's Home, would present the bouquet.

The ride to Edmonton took more than six hours, and the King decided to tramp along the tracks as the train left Jasper Park. The King hiked for 2 miles and was picked up by the train when he had had enough.

From now until they reach the White House next Thursday the King and Queen will sleep on their luxurious blue and silver palace on wheels.

Route King and Queen Will Take Through Washington



Map shows route to be taken by King George and Queen Elizabeth from Union Station to the White House when they arrive here Thursday. Their arrival is scheduled for 11 a. m. Following brief ceremonies at the Presidential reception room at Union Station, Their Britannic Majesties, President and Mrs. Roosevelt, their parties and escort will leave for the White House at 11:45 a. m. The route shown above will be closed to traffic at 9:50 a. m., with parking to be banned at 8 a. m. Key to the numbers is as follows: (1) 200 Marines, (2) Marine Drum and Bugle Corps, (3) 50 Bluejackets, (4) Marine Band, (5) Third Cavalry, (6) Sixteenth Field Artillery, (7) First Troop, Third Cavalry, and Machine Gun Troop, Tenth Cavalry; (8) Third Cavalry Band, (9) Two troops cavalry, which move east on D street at 9:40 a. m.; (10) Marines, (11) Bluejackets, (12) Navy Band, (13) Marines, (14) Tanks, which move northwest on New Jersey avenue at 9:15 a. m.; (15) Cavalry escort, (16) Cavalry and Field Artillery, which move north on I street at 9:35 a. m.; (17) Marines, (18) Fifth Engineers Band, (19) Fifth Engineers, (20) Thirty-fourth Infantry, (21) Twelfth Infantry Band, (22) Army Band, (23) Twelfth Infantry

D. C. Expects 700,000 to Line Avenue for Ovation to King

CAA Restricts Plane Flights Over City During Parade; President Eases Ban On Traffic in Mount Vernon Highway

Estimates of the crowd which will welcome British royalty to the Capital yesterday bulged toward 700,000, as officials released further details of elaborate plans for the rulers' two-day visit here.

While authorities responsible for Thursday's reception to King George and Queen Elizabeth declined to go on record with their prophesies, it is understood that preparations are now being geared to the possibility that nearly 750,000 people will line the route from Union Station to the White House.

Plans announced yesterday affect an area from the White House to Mount Vernon and deal with such details as ropes, ambulances and airplanes.

By order of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, all flights over the Potomac, Anacostia, Mount Vernon and the Memorial boulevard, except by scheduled air carriers, have been banned from 9 a. m. until 8 p. m. Friday, when the royal party will visit George Washington's estate.

Simultaneously civil aircraft were warned to avoid the central Washington area Thursday while the military air convoy salutes the British sovereign in formation flights over the parade route. Bombers from Langley Field, Va., will rendezvous at Lower Marlboro, Md., preparatory to the mass flight over the Capital, while pursuit planes meet at Upper Marlboro.

President Roosevelt personally ordered a relaxation of restrictions on automobile traffic over Mount Vernon boulevard Friday. Secret Service and Park Police plans for blockading the boulevard at noon were needlessly rigorous, the President said, setting the time for exclusion of private traffic at 1:30 p. m.

White House Secretary Stephen Early described as "baloney" any proposal for closing Arlington National Cemetery all day Friday, indicating his belief that the President also will intervene in this phase of the arrangements. The King and Queen are expected to arrive at Arlington at 3:25 p. m. Friday on their return from Mount Vernon.

Members of the co-ordinating committee yesterday urged the public to familiarize itself with the first-aid arrangements for Thursday's parade. Ambulances will be stationed a few yards off the parade route on every intersecting street to give first-aid in fainting and heat prostration cases. Several ambulances also will cruise along the parade route.

Representative Sol Bloom (Democrat), of New York, yesterday emphasized that tickets to the 3,000 seats to be placed on the Capitol steps for the Congressional reception to Their Majesties Friday are not available to the general public. Each Senator, Representative and delegate to Congress will be given five tickets Monday or Tuesday, Bloom said, and may give them to family or friends. Only women, girls and boys under 12 years of age are eligible to use the tickets, since "men can stand up like anyone else," he added.

Senate and House employes will be permitted to stand on the steps to the two Capitol wings.

Though there's nothing much anyone can do about it, chances for a rainy day when King George and Queen Elizabeth arrive here June 8 were shown yesterday to be better than equal. On the basis of Weather Bureau records extending back 68 years to 1871, it was calculated chances were 53 in 100 the British rulers would see rain their first day here.

Not only have 36 of the 68 June 8s on record been wet, but this tendency toward moisture has increased in the last decade. Only twice since 1928 has June 8 brought no rain.

The average June 8 in Washington, however, has proved more tractable in temperature, the mean maximum being 80 degrees with the mercury climbing above 90 only once. And June 8, 1932, would have been perfect, with a maximum of 73, a minimum of 49 and clear skies all day.

of social functions. He lifted his eyebrows, commented that he had enough to do trying to manage the Senate, and indicated he would let it go at that.

But Sir Ronald Lindsay, accident or not, appeared at the Capitol Thursday and had lunch with Garner and a group of Senators. Nobody made a statement at its conclusion, but today the joyous word spread throughout Senatorial homes that all Senators will be admitted to the royal presence, with their wives.

The spouses of the previously uninvited Senators can now join the throng of Government officials and socialites who have been practicing for weeks on curtseys, bowing out backward, balancing teacups gracefully, and walking with elegance and grace.

The change in plans will admit to the fete such Senatorial figures —previously unbidden to it—as Senators George W. Norris (Independent), Nebraska; Henry Cabot Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts; Robert A. Taft (Republican), Ohio, a prominent possibility for the Republican Presidential nomination; Rush D. Holt (Democrat), West Virginia; Theodore G. Bilbo (Democrat), Mississippi; Sheridan Downey (Democrat), California, and H. Styles Bridges (Republican, New Hampshire, who also has tossed his hat into the Presidential ring.

Also admitted are Senators Josh Lee (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Alexander Wiley (Republican), of Wisconsin; Francis Maloney (Democrat), of Connecticut, and Prentiss Brown (Democrat), of Michigan.

One Middle Western Senator, confessing his wife had "phoned about some invitation or another," wanted to know what sort of a party it is, when it starts and what he should wear.

By originally injuring the feelings of a majority of the Senate, the British Embassy was slighting men who hold the key to whether Congress can revise the neutrality law this year to aid Great Britain and France, some observers pointed out.

Whether that fact entered into the decision to open the garden party invitation list to the entire Senate was not known.

All that was known tonight was that peace has returned to a lot of Senatorial firesides.

Hope Revived For 90 in Thetis

buried in the mud 130 feet below the surface.

Four men rose to the surface by the Davis "lung," and others had been expected to follow soon afterward, but none came for many hours.

In a strong tide toward dusk, as salvage workers were preparing to cut a hole in the tail with acetylene torches, the vessel became completely submerged, and as the tide stilled it failed to come up again. Then hopes plummeted.

Next, as relatives of those aboard waited tensely for news, there came the story of Coxswain Robin Williams, of a Llandudno lifeboat crew, who told of the three dying while attempting to escape.

This tragic story seemed to be supported by several important developments.

The Admiralty messaged the wife of Stoker Wilfred Thomas Hole that he was believed to have perished trying to ascend.

The Admiralty's off-hand comment on the Williams story was that it knew of unconfirmed reports that at least two men from the Thetis had drowned trying to bring themselves to the surface, but that the reports were not sufficiently verified for a formal statement to be made.

Officials Mystified

Failure of the 90 entombed men to follow the fortunate four to the surface was only one of many mystifying aspects of the accident.

There was only unofficial conjecture as to the nature of the accident, which occurred when the submarine lost touch with an accompanying tug after taking the dive, a test plunge prior to delivery of the vessel to the Admiralty by the builders.

When the tail and fin of the stern of the submarine appeared at a 45-degree angle Friday morning, some reasoned that the forward section of the craft had been flooded and damaged during a demonstration of flooding of the torpedo tubes.

Unofficial accounts told of sighting of a marker buoy which disabled submarines normally send up at the first indication of trouble. If this were true there was further puzzlement, because British buoys, like those of the United States Navy, are equipped with telephone, and yet there was no indication that there had been any communication by this means.

There were reports during the afternoon, however, of communication by tapping on the submarine's sides.

In the absence of diving bell equipment such as that used successfully in the Squalus accident off Portsmouth, N. H., a week ago by the United States Navy, the British tried a variety of other salvage methods—driving forward frantically against time under searchlights.

Tapping Signals Cease

William Jones, a second member of the Llandudno lifeboat crew, said that tapping signals had ceased some time before 10 p. m. Friday.

He said also that a hawser had been attached to the submarine when the stern was above water to lift the craft up further, but that it had snapped.

Failure of the stern to reappear Friday evening lent support to a theory that a second mishap may have occurred aboard the Thetis Friday after the first disabling Thursday.

Such reasoning was based on the fact that when the four survivors daringly ascended Friday morning, they said their companions were planning to follow them immediately.

What a second accident might have been, no one could say. Even when the first four men ascended from the aft escape hatch, the fore escape hatch which was believed to be within the flooded section, thus sharply limiting egress for the full crew and the civilians aboard.

Tide Hampers Rescue

The men were believed to be weakening gradually. There was enough air to last only until about midnight tonight (6 p. m., E. S. T.).

Efforts to burn a hole by steel-cutting torches in the exposed stern of the vessel, tilting at a 45-degree angle, were checked when the battering tide put it completely under water.

It was not until 7:50 a. m. Friday that the Thetis was found. The British destroyer Brazen sighted her tail 18 feet above the surface a full 18 hours after she dived to the bottom and 15 hours after the search was started.

Naval experts were mystified by the failure to locate the craft sooner.

Another puzzling feature was the exact number of officers, seamen, technicians, builders' representatives and observers aboard. The Admiralty, after first announcing the list as between 79 and 100, changed it officially five times before announcing that 94 had been aboard when the dive was made, leaving 90 below after rescue of the first 4.

Among the first four who came out was Capt. H. P. K. Oran, who commanded the fifth submarine flotilla, for which the Thetis was intended. He escaped to help direct rescue operations from his knowledge of the submarine's position.

The other three were Lieut. H. G. Woods, Chief Stoker Arnold and F. Shaw, an employe of the builder.

As speed in the rescue operations became more vital, Rear Admiral B. C. Watson, commanding the submarines, rushed to Liverpool, where a destroyer waited to speed him to the scene to take personal charge.

The latest announcements gave the number aboard the crippled submarine as 53 crewmen, 9 naval officers, 26 employes of Cammell Laird Co., 3 employes of Vickers Armstrong, the engine builders; one pilot and two civilian caterers—a total of 94.

The four who escaped first were picked up by a warship and remained aboard it throughout the day. During the evening Shaw, the builder's employe, was brought ashore at Birkenhead.

Pale and drawn, he was assisted in landing by a sailor. He wore a thick coat and cowl-like hood. He did not smile as a friend patted him on the back while he was being helped into a car.

Inefficiency Hinted by Press

By the Associated Press.

London (Saturday), June 3.—Questions and comment hinting at inefficiency appeared in the London press today as the full implications of the Thetis submarine disaster became apparent to the British public.

The early edition of every newspaper devoted editorial space to the accident, and every one of them asked questions and predicted a full inquiry.

The Daily Mail said "at a later date there are many questions which must be answered. The nation will want to know:

"Why the Thetis crashed.

"Why she was allowed to do her tests in a bay notorious for sunken wreckage.

"Why no naval escort vessel was attached to this new-type submarine during the perils of early diving trials."

The Laborite Daily Herald commented:

"Some of the rescue vessels sent to the spot had to sail from as far as Portland and Torbay.

The Mirror asked a question which filled the minds of many civilians:

Survivor Describes Horror in Thetis

By International News Service.

Liverpool, England (Saturday), June 3.—A gripping portrayal of cool heroism in the face of almost certain death and of madness born of horror in the sunken submarine Thetis was contained early today in the first eyewitness account of the tragedy, given by a man who survived it.

Brought to Liverpool aboard a life-saving boat after he escaped from the Thetis with the aid of a Davis "lung" apparatus, Frank F. Shaw, a civilian technician, related:

"There is little, if any, hope for the other chaps down there.

"When I left the carbon gas was getting much worse.

"The men were lying sprawled out in the compartments of the ship. It seemed as if they were doomed to die. But there was no panic."

"It was awful last night. Two of the men tried to escape through the conning tower. Both were drowned.

"Another man lost his reason and went mad. He died also."

By the Associated Press.

Birkenhead, England, June 2.—"Am alive and kicking."

That laconic message was the first word Mrs. W. C. Arnold received today from her husband, a leading stoker who was among four men rescued from the ill-fated submarine Thetis.

Arnold followed this message, wirelessed from the destroyer Brazen, with another to her and "Mackie," their 11-month-old son, saying "Am OK. Will see you soon."

Drivers Ask End to World Barriers

Vicomte de Rohan, A. A. Berle Address International Motorists' Parley

A peaceful world, in which laws permit men to cross international boundaries as easily as roads permit automobiles, was proclaimed the goal of world motorists, whose representatives in the International Association of Recognized Automobile Clubs met last night at a Mayflower Hotel banquet.

Speaking on the same theme, Vicomte de Rohan, association president, and Assistant Secretary of State A. A. Berle, jr., pleaded for an end to artificial barriers between nations, keeping men of good will apart.

De Rohan, representative of a famous French family, enlisted in the World War as a private and as an officer was awarded the Croix de Guerre, expressed confidence that a day would come when economic laws would be stronger than those of man, and that the automobile, radio and airplane having shown the way toward annihilating borders, man-made barriers would be ended.

Berle Praises Group

Berle complimented the group, which consisted of delegates from 42 foreign nations and many diplomatic representatives, as one of the few modern gatherings who sat down at a peace conference with the goal of "common ground and a free passage of ideas."

Roads, said Berle, were once the symbol of conquest and empire and of a forced civilization backed by arms. Today, however, they are emblems of peace by understanding and consent, denying a "self-sufficient, autarchic civilization," but expressing the ideal of travel as an including, rather than excluding world force.

The State Department official drew cheers when he denounced bill-board bounded highways and pointed out that "a road is not a medium for advertising." He praised the projected Pan-American highway as heralding a new conception of world order, founded on a co-operative peace which would "recognize the sovereignty of each element" rather than seek to engulf it.

Thomas P. Henry, president of the American Automobile Association, presided at the banquet. Count Liedekerke, vice president of the French Automobile Club, translated de Rohan's address, which was in French.

Spain's Roads Open

Earlier in the day, delegates heard a report declaring that motoring conditions in Spain have been restored to normal and that automobile travel there presents no difficulties.

"Roads in Spain," the report said, "were conserved during the war and they are, in general, in very good condition for automobile traffic. In places where parts of the road were damaged, reconstruction work is all but completed. This applies to all bridges and roads which were bombed."

The report was a feature of sessions closing the two-day convention. Earlier in the day, the 79 delegates discussed international motor travel, stressing uniformity in traffic control and safety systems.

The delegates, guests of the American Automobile Association, will leave tomorrow for a tour of travel facilities in several eastern States.

New District Telephone Book Off the Presses

In a pastel green jacket, its back cover enlivened with an invitation to summer romance by long distance, the Chesapeake and Potomac Telephone Co.'s summer-fall directory yesterday made its bow to Washington. It is larger, also, with 712 pages of names and numbers, compared with 686 in the old, and 456 classified advertising pages, compared with 448.

The Czecho-Slovakian Legation still is listed, though there is only one George Washington compared with two in the previous edition.

E. G. Bliss, general commercial manager, said an edition of 295,000 copies would be distributed.

Capital News In Brief

Accidentally Shoots Self

While William A. Pennington, 16, of Reeds Corner, in nearby Maryland, was cleaning his rifle yesterday, it was accidentally discharged, wounding him in the hand, he told police. He required treatment at Casualty Hospital.

Anyway, He Was a Big Man

Washington police are seeking a 210-pound 6-footer who yesterday fell through the showcase window of Nachman Furniture Co., 512 Ninth street northwest. A policeman took the man to Emergency Hospital for treatment of lacerated arms and forehead, intending to arrest him later for destruction of private property. The accused man, however, walked out of the hospital before the policeman returned to take him into custody.

Car Stolen, Wrecked

John Carpel, of 914 Rhode Island avenue northeast, reported to police last night that his auto had been stolen from in front of his home.

A half hour later police found the missing auto—after it had crashed into a telephone pole at Seventh and Monroe streets northeast. Police are seeking four youths seen emerging from the machine after the mishap.

1,200 Middies Embark for 3-Month Trip

Complete Academic Course Provided During Cruise

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, June 2.—Midshipmen today enrolled in a school with three battleships for classrooms and the Atlantic Ocean for a text.

Twelve hundred midshipmen of the classes of 1940 and 1942 went aboard the New York, Texas and Arkansas for their annual three-month cruise.

In addition to learning the rigid routine of life aboard ship, the midshipmen will carry a full academic course during their three months afloat. Naval officers and civilian professors at the academy accompanied the midshipmen.

The second class does not go on cruises, but returns after furlough to help "break in" the new crop of plebes who will enroll in mid-July.

Several thousand relatives and sweethearts crowded the academy dock as the midshipmen embarked today. With seabags on shoulders, the middies marched to the dock and were taken the four miles out to the anchored battleships in tenders.

150 Middies to Tour Navy Yard in D. C.

Nearly 150 second classmen from the Naval Academy will arive here Tuesday aboard six destroyers for an all-day tour of the gun factory at the Navy Yard.

The six vessels of Destroyer Squadron 10, commanded by Capt. J. W. Bunkley, will leave Washington Thursday for Newport, R. I.

Ships in the squadron and their commanders are the Decatur, Lieut. Comdr. H. S. Covington; Fairfax, Lieut. Comdr. P. L. Mather; Babbitt, Lieut. Comdr. H. R. Parker; Simpson, Lieut. Comdr. H. W. Chandler; Claxton, Lieut. W. C. Cross, and Rober, Lieut. H. E. Hubbard.

Author of 'Ferdinand the Bull' Stumped Till He Thought of Bee

Could Imagine No Way to Get Bovine Hero Into Bull-Ring, Munro Leaf Says, Here For U. of Maryland Alumni Banquet

The author of "Ferdinand the Bull," Munro Leaf, who visited the University of Maryland, his alma mater, yesterday, told how he was stumped by the problem of getting the publicized bovine into the bull ring.

The 800-word children's story was written in 40 minutes on a rainy Sunday afternoon in 1935 and published the next year. It has sold more than 250,000 copies and has been adapted to the screen and paraphrased in song.

"For 10 minutes," Leaf said, "I couldn't figure how to get Ferdinand in the bull ring without taking him out of character. Then I thought of the bee, and after that it was simple."

Leaf, who attended the annual alumni day program, speaking at a banquet last night, was the idol of the campus. A graduate of the class of 1927, he is formerly of Washington. His parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles W. Leaf, live at 4707 Connecticut avenue.

Author of ten children's stories, besides "Ferdinand," his theory of how to make a constructive appeal to children is simple.

"You can't make virtue attractive by preaching it," he said. "So the thing to do is to poke fun at the wrong things."

Leaf said the idea for his first story, "Grammar Can Be Fun," published in 1934, came to him accidentally when he overheard a mother correcting her child for saying "ain't."

"She wasn't getting along very well," he said, "because there aren't any real good reasons why you shouldn't say 'ain't.'"

From this experience, he said, he derived the idea of writing a book for children on the common grammatical errors. Each error was personified by some comic drawing which Leaf scratched off himself.

"I'm a pretty crude artist," he said, "but the sketches are what the children want because they are like their own drawings."

During his college days, Leaf took no part in the work of the student publications. He played lacrosse and football. After graduation he studied at Harvard University and then taught English in prep schools in Boston and Philadelphia for three years. Since then he has been in the publishing business in New York City. His stories are dashed off in spare time.

Pershing Urges Support of Moral Rearmament

On the eve of sailing for Europe, Gen. Pershing released a message on the need for Moral Re-Armament, the theme of a national meeting tomorrow night in Constitution Hall.

"This Moral Re-Armament should enlist the support of all thinking people," he said. "There is a spiritual emotion which underlies all true patriotism, and good citizenship is dependent upon the high sense of moral obligation of the people. Today, confronted by conditions so threatening to world peace, we must rededicate ourselves to the faith of our forefathers if we are to be worthy of our heritage."

Trolley Jumps Track, Lands On Inspector

He Is Pinned to Auto At 15th Street and New York Avenue

Wedged between a street car which split a switch and an automobile at Fifteenth street and New York avenue northwest, Thomas E. Miller, 52, of 1704 B street southeast, was injured yesterday.

An inspector for the Capital Transit Co., Miller was standing at the southwest crosswalk of the intersection when the car jumped the tracks. The rear of the street car jammed him against the machine of Mrs. Mary R. Palmer, 36, of Clarendon, Va.

Pinned in his auto when it overturned in the 1100 block of Connecticut avenue northwest after striking a loading platform, Leslie Zender, 39, of 804 Seventeenth street northwest, was extricated by the Fire Department Rescue Squad. He was taken to Emergency Hospital with head injuries.

Nine-year-old Walter Lewis, of 1013 L street southeast, suffered fractures of both jaws yesterday when, according to police, he ran into an auto operated by Oswald M. Stewart, of 2720 Stanton road southeast, who rushed the child to Providence Hospital.

Prince Georges County authorities last night were investigating an accident which resulted in the injury of Abraham Rudy, 73, of Soldiers' Home. Struck by a truck, Rudy suffered a possible fractured spine.

Samuel D. Chambliss, 42, of 527 Underwood street northwest, suffered a fractured skull when his car skidded on the wet road yesterday afternoon and crashed into a telephone pole on the Colesville Pike near White Oak, Md. Chambliss was taken to the Montgomery County General Hospital at Sandy Spring by Free Brigham.

307 Years of History Shown In 90 Minutes at Georgetown U.

Pageant Begins in Throne Room of Charles I, and Ends in 1939 in Washington; 2,000 in Audience

Three hundred and seven years of American history related to the foundation and growth of Georgetown University were recalled last night on the stage of Central High School. More than 200 Georgetown students and alumni re-enacted 15 historic moments before almost 2,000 friends and students of the university, taking an enthusiastic audience through the centuries at the rate of more than three years per minute.

Within an hour and a half a pageant, "Sons of Georgetown," for which Mrs. Elinor Cox Karsten acted as chorus, took the celebrators of Georgetown's sesquicentennial year from the throne room of Charles I (Public Utilities Commissioner Richmond Keech), where Lord Baltimore (A. Philip Kane), received the charter for Maryland, to 1939 and the City of Washington, where all the chief characters of the university's history occupied the stage with the Georgetown U. band and joined in the rousing strains of their alma mater before a replica of Archbishop John Carroll's statue executed by Miss Gina Brennan. As the spectators caught up the strain the volume seemed sufficient to reach from Central High's hill top, to the "Hilltop" that for 150 years has been Georgetown—first an academy, and then the university.

"Morals, Learning, Piety"

The intention to instill "morals, learning and piety," as phrased last night by President George Washington (David Horowitz, of the Law School) in a speech from the Old North Porch, was exemplified in several ways. So was the continuing intention of the founders to defend religious liberty and to nurture a staunch, Catholicism.

The religious character of the enterprise was exemplified, of course, in the scene in which King Charles I signed the charter of Maryland against the protest of the Earl of Warwick (J. Loren Freund). It was denoted in the first meeting between Andrew White, S. J. (Michael M. Doyle, former judge of the Municipal Court), and King Chilomacan (Rufus Lusk) when the priest and the Indian met in 1634. It was exemplified when Leonard Calvert, first Governor of Maryland (Lawrence K. Downey), and Father White opened the first school at St. Marys with colonists and Indians as pupils.

Patriotism mingled its appeal in the scene in which John Carroll, S. J. (John D. Fitzgerald), in 1776 yielded to the appeal of Benjamin Franklin (Johns S. White), to accompany representatives of the Congress to Canada to intercede for the neutrality of Canada in the Revolutionary War. And it recurred as Commander Wederstrandt (Joseph L. Eckenrode), the second student to attend the Academy, volunteered his services in 1814 for the defense of the college when the British invaded Washington. It was this same Wederstrandt who so delighted the heart of Bishop Carroll in 1791 when in another scene, he joined William Gaston (Thomas O'Connell) and so "made the student body a plurality."

Archbishop's Death

Through successive episodes, in which background, costumes, and acting presented a very real illusion of the vanished past, historic figures and crises were developed. The death of John Carroll, archbishop then, in 1815, as "priest, prelate, and patriot" carried the inner meaning of the university to fullest expression. It was portrayed by John Darby, as Charles Carroll of Carrollton, John Grassi, S. J. (Carl H. Watson, jr., of the college), and relatives of the recumbent archbishop.

The feeling that was a prelude to the Civil War was portrayed in the life and disputes of the student body in more than one scene.

In two scenes Grover A. Whalen, jr., son of the New York World's Fair director, distinguished himself in this connection. The fighting Irish, New York's Sixty-Ninth Regiment, was shown quartered on the Georgetown campus. Later President Theodore Roosevelt (Burke Walsh) appeared. There were the World War days, the visit of Marshal Foch (George A. Christy, of the college) and a finale with the band, the cadets, the historic characters, and the audience united in a burst of vocal and musical enthusiasm.

Farrell Says Isolation Is Impossible

Former U. S. Steel President and Dr. Prochnik Speak at Georgetown U. Fete

America can and should insulate itself against a repetition of the last war, but economic isolation is impossible, according to James A. Farrell, former president of United States Steel Corporation and chairman of the National Foreign Trade Council.

Farrell and Dr. Edgar L. G. Prochnik, former Austrian Minister to the United States, were the principal speakers yesterday at the sesquicentennial celebration at Georgetown University. The latter took a pessimistic view of the balance of power system of security, which, he said, is returning to vogue in Europe.

Farrell urged that our international policies be based on understanding and consideration of the position which this country holds as a leader of world economy.

Still Leading Exporter

"This position," he said, "is best illustrated by the fact that in 1938, despite a rather sluggish year in export and import trade, we were still the leading exporter of the world, and No. 3 among the importers of the world, surpassed by the United Kingdom and Germany."

Commercial policy, he said, has become an instrument of diplomacy, emphasizing that "as long as people continue to live in fear of war, it is difficult to establish a policy of economic collaboration between governments."

Dr. Prochnik, whose address, like Farrell's, was delivered at the university's foreign service school, said that resumption of the old balance of power system in Europe did not necessarily mean war was near.

"We hope that balance of power will delay outbreak of hostilities until such time as a peaceful solution can be worked out," he asserted. "If it is not, balance of power will remain the essence of European diplomacy.

"It will initially be resorted to as a deterrent to aggression but it will ultimately result in a clash of arms, when worn-out nations can no longer bear the ever-increasing burden of armaments."

The newer system of collective security is theoretically more dependable, but the League of Nations, principal agent of this policy, has failed "because it ignored the lofty principles of its founder, President Wilson," the former Minister declared.

Essential Ignored

Intended to be an arena of free and equal nations, "it discriminated along the line of power in favor of the bigger nations and ignored through this class spirit the most essential prerequisite to a democratic world outlook."

Dr. Thomas H. Healy, dean of the Foreign Service School, predicted that "in spite of a most intensive campaign" the American people "will resolutely refuse to be used again as a pawn in the struggle for the balance of power in Europe."

"Unless many competent observers are greatly deluded, our involvement this time would be merely a repetition of 20 years ago—all losses and no profits, material or otherwise," he said.

"Until and if much more vital American interests are directly involved than is now visible, America might well follow its traditional policy of letting Europe settle its own balance of power.

"No substantial proof has been offered for the repeated allegation that vital American interests will be menaced unless we join the "stop Hitler" group. There is plenty of evidence that the cost of American intervention for this purpose would be far in excess of anything we might lose by not intervening."

The alumni extension course at the Georgetown Medical School, another phase of the sesquicentennial observance, continued yesterday with morning clinics at the university hospital and an afternoon symposium on pregnancy complications.

Construction Put Off

The Very Rev. Arthur A. O'Leary, S. J., president of Georgetown University, yesterday announced that because of insufficient funds construction of Alumni Hall has been indefinitely postponed.

"We have only a small percentage of what we really need to start building," he said. "We are not discouraged, however, nor are we giving up the drive to afford Georgetown needed recreational and athletic facilities."

Highlights of today's sesquicentennial are the 4 p. m. convocation on the campus and the alumni banquet at the Hotel Mayflower at 7:30 p. m. In event of rain, the convocation will be held in Constitution Hall.

Graduate organizations were praised last night by Otis H. Ritenour, president of the Southeastern University Alumni Association, as "the best way to continue friendships founded while in school."

He told 400 diners at the annual banquet of the senior class of Southeastern University at Wardman Park Hotel that "reaching the end of your term does not necessarily mean that the associations you have formed must now be terminated," but emphasized that greater efforts will be needed to keep in touch with former fellow students.

Ritenour presented Southeastern University plaques, on behalf of the Alumni Association, to Mrs. Helen Eiland, of the School of Law, and Landrum J. Outlaw, of the School of Accountancy, in recognition of their "outstanding efforts" in extra-curricular activities.

Prof. D. Roland Potter, of the School of Law, presented annotated copies of the Constitution to Miss Madeleine Bush, for her paper on constitutional law, and to Mrs. Eiland and James Whelan, monitors of his class during the past year.

Edwin W. Peterson, 5038 Conduit road northwest, of the School of Law, and George L. Sheppard, 1511 West Virginia avenue northeast, of the school of accountancy, were named by Dr. James A. Bell, president of the university, as the outstanding honor graduates.

Other honor graduates of the school of law were:

Alfred F. Goshorn, John Zieler, Gudrun Scheldrup, Wallace H. Robinson, Charles Haynes Alexander, Helen S. Eiland, Melvin Monroe Payne, Arthur Webster Crossley, Charles Hugh Johns, jr., Lester Hook, George Greenberg, John H. Cooper, Gladys Whalley, George M. Washington, Edwin L. Guldahl, 3 Under Par, Leads $5,000 Golf Play

Nats' Errors Help White Sox Win, 7 to 5

Snead Slips To Third In Goodall

Open Champ Beats Dutra, Hogan, Smith, Thomson With Ease; Cooper Also Unbeaten

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—Ralph Guldahl, the ambling National Open golf champion, changed his tactics today. The man who has won his two major titles by coming from behind down the stretch turned into a front-runner as he shaved three strokes from the Fresh Meadow Country Club's par for 36 holes and moved into first place in the $5,000 Goodall Round-Robin Tournament.

After 54 holes, and with 72 still to go, the Madison (N. J.) pro had a score of plus 23, representing that many winning holes in three matches with six rivals. Starting today's play in fifth place, Guldahl fired a morning-round 68, two under standard figures, to be 6 up on Olin Dutra, himself a former open champion, and 4 up on Ben Hogan.

In the afternoon, Ralph followed up with a 69 that left him 3 up on Jimmy Thomson and 5 up on Horton Smith. For his morning score he pocketed the special $50 prize for the day's low round, and with his 36-hole effort he took the lead in the race for $1,000 top money that will go to the winner on Sunday afternoon.

Tomorrow morning he will go up against Harry Cooper and Tony Penna. Cooper is the only other man in the 15-star field who has yet to lose a match. The dapper little veteran from Eastern Point, Conn., despite the fact he was scrambling all day, came up with a morning 69 that picked up 5 points against Dick Metz, runner-up in the open last year, and blond Jimmy Hines, of Great Neck, N. Y.

In the afternoon Cooper came out on top in the closest match of the entire day. With a par 70 that included four birdies and as many bogies in the first ten holes, and finished up with eight straight pars, Harry beat Sam Snead by 1 up and Paul Runyan by 2, to boost himself into second place with a plus 15 score.

Snead, who won last year's inaugural after a two-hole playoff with Gene Sarazen, slid down into third place with a plus 13 rating. The West Virginia mountaineer added 2 points to his first-round total of 11 by winning four holes from Denny Shute while losing two to Tony Penna, and against Cooper and Runyan barely managed to finish all even.

The tournament's best nine-hole score was turned in by Johnny Revolta, who never had played this course until yesterday's opening round. The one-time P. G. A. champion raced through the first nine in 32, 3 under par, against Ben Hogan and Walter Hagen. But he lost his touch on the supposedly softer back nine and went up to a 38 for 70.

Louis Signs Today for Go With Galento

Stormy Session Is Seen as Fighters, Managers Gather

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—While victorious Lou Nova and his badly damaged victim, Maxie Baer, licked their wounds from last night's savage engagement at Yankee Stadium, plans went forward today for another bristling encounter at high noon tomorrow, when Champion Joe Louis and rotund Tony Galento meet to sign the papers for their title bout June 28.

There's a strong possibility the session will end in a wild uproar, with Galento defying the New York State Boxing Commission and demanding the scrap be transferred to Philadelphia. All the principals will be searched for knives before Brig. Gen. John J. Phelan, retired, calls the meeting to order.

Joe Jacobs, Tony's manager, is going before the commision to demand that he be given a manager's and second's license in this State, so he can work in Galento's corner against Louis. The commission repeatedly has refused even to talk to Joe. This time he says they will be more sociable or there will be no Galento-Louis scrap in this State. Tony is backing his pilot right to the hilt.

After the disappointing crowd of 16,736 paying customers that watched Nova cut Baer up and force his retirement in the eleventh round last night, it will be quite all right with Promoter Mike Jacobs if the commission gets stuffy and forces him to take the big fight out of town.

"The tickets are printed and ready, but not one will go out until tomorrow' meeting is over," said Mike.

The Galento camp has wanted to hold the fight in Philadelphia all along. Tony is a great favorite there. Louis has held out for New York, but the fact that Nova and Baer each received only $22,517 for last night's engagement might have impressed the champion.

Meanwhile, there was no further word from Ray Carlen, Nova's manager, on the subject of a September scrap against the winner of the June 28 affair. He promised to make a statement tomorrow. The expectation was that he would ask for a continuance until next summer after noting the ease with which Baer laid rights on his handsome lad's chin.

A round of the boxing marts today didn't unearth a single old-line fighter or manager who thought Nova should be tossed into the ring with Louis this year. Some of them thought he did a fine, workmanlike job on Baer but all shuddered to think what Louis would do to such a target.

Earl Skinker Wins Medal In Post Golf

Wilson Player Shoots 76 in Sixth Annual Schoolboy Tourney; Match Play Today

Earl Skinker, Wilson High's young golfer, one of Columbia Club's most promising shotmakers, won medalist honors in the sixth annual District schoolboy championship yesterday at Kenwood with a 76.

Apparently not bothered by the downpour during his first 15 holes, Skinker played each nine in 3 over par, with six pars and three bogeys on each. He had only one 3-putt green, the twelfth, and did not make a putt of over 3 feet.

Match Play Today

Sixteen of the finest scholastic linksmen in the metropolitan area, left out of 55 starters of the original field of 70, will swing into match-play rounds this morning at Manor Club, play the second round this afternoon and continue the semi-finals and finals tomorrow at Washington with The Washington Post Trophy to the new champion.

Scores of 85 or better made the grade, despite the conditions that made low scoring virtually impossible. Cliff Gruver, captain of Roosevelt High's Dawes Cup champions, and Frank Clark, freckled youngsters from Blair, were the only ones of the favored players that missed qualifying.

High Rankings

Ralph Bogart, Wilson High's heavy favorite to succeed Buddy Sharkey as champion, and Scotty Ross, Rockville's undefeated captain, were well in the first flight, Bogart with an 81 and Ross with 79.

Frank Williamson, another Wilson High student, a member of the Kenwood Club, trailed the medalist by a single shot with a 77, while Bill Bush, also of Wilson, had 78, and Carroll Willett, host club caddy, and Dick Burgess, Tech High captain, 79.

Meets Patterson

Skinker meets James Patterson, Roosevelt, in the first round, while, if Bogart and Ross are successful in morning matches with Bill Cassidy, Blair, and Jack McElfish, Rockville, respectively, they will meet in the quarter-final feature. George Vass, finalist in the District junior championship last year, meets Harold Kelley, St. John's, in another first-round attraction.

The Washington Post Trophy will go to the winner's school for one year, or as long as he holds the title, while a replica will be the new champion's for permanent possession.

Move Designed to Bolster Mound Staff; Joe Refuses to Go

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 2.—In a move designed to strengthen the New York Yankees' pitching staff the club today sent Outfielder Joe Gallagher to Newark in the International League on option in exchange for lefthander Marius Russo.

Upon being informed of the deal, Gallagher immediately announced that he would not report to the Bears and left this afternoon for his home at Buffalo, N. Y.

A personal "find" of Manager Joe McCarthy, who also is a resident of Buffalo, Gallagher starred for the Yankees' Kansas City farm last season, leading the American Association in hits with 200 as well as ranking second in percentage with .343 and second in runs batted in with .119. He also hit 24 home runs.

Gallagher was something of a training camp sensation, but has been used in only 14 American League games by the Yankees and batted .244. He had two homers.

Russo also was in camp with the Yankees, but was returned before the season started to Newark, where he won 17 and lost 8 last year.

The Yankees were one under the player limit, due to the release of Wes Ferrell last Sunday. This reduced the pitching staff to eight men in addition to Spurgeon Chandler, who is being carried on the roster although a preseason injury has kept him from reporting.

Russo was expected to join the club in Cleveland tomorrow.

Yanks Blast 4 Hurlers And Beat Indians, 17-5

Champions Collect 18 Hits, Including Two Homers, to Gain Second in Row; Upset Pitchers Contribute 14 Bases on Balls

By the Associated Press.

Cleveland, June 2.—The world champion New York Yankees poured on their vaunted power today to overwhelm the Cleveland Indians, 17 to 5, for the second straight win of their series.

Altogether the Bronx bombers exploded 18 hits, including two home runs, into the laps of four Cleveland pitchers, who were upset so badly they contributed 14 bases on balls.

The blasting started with seven runs on six hits in the first inning causing Johnny Allen to be replaced by Joe Dobson.

He survived a minor two-run combination in the fourth but gave way in turn to John Broaca, a former Yank, when Tommy Henrich hit his sixth home run of the season with two on and George Selkirk clouted his tenth with one on for five more runs in the fifth.

Broaca worked two scoreless innings before three hits and three walks spelled three runs and his doom in the eighth. Paul Sullivan finished.

Meanwhile Rookie Atley Donald spaced 11 hits to gain his fifth victory without defeat. After scoring once in the first on a hit and an error, the Indians went runless until the seventh, when Jeff Heath's homer with one on spanked a three-run rally. They got their other tally on two hits and an error in the eighth.

Chas. Fenske Sets 2-Mile Mark At Milwaukee Meet

Milwaukee, Wis., June 2 (AP).—Charles (Chuck) Fenske, graduate University of Wisconsin star, bettered the existing American record for the 1,000-yard run at the Central Collegiate track and field meet tonight, running the distance in 2 minutes 9.3 seconds as compared to the official 2:09.7 mark made by Elroy Robinson, at Fresno, Calif., on May 15, 1937.

Walter Mehl, Wisconsin's big blond distance star, fought off a stirring challenge by Greg Rice, of Notre Dame, to capture the mile run championship. About 200 yards from home Mehl took command and won by 3 yards, fighting off Rice's stretch "kick." The time was 4 minutes 13.3 seconds, as against the 4:10.6 meet record.

Orville Wagner, of North Central (Ill.) College, captured the 440 yard run title in 49 seconds, finishing inches ahead of Fred Alliniece, of Prairie View (Tex.) College.

Marcum Is Swapped for Whitehead

Browns Are Hoping To Add Strength; Both 'Just Fair'

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 2.—The St. Louis Browns swapped Pitcher Johnny Marcum, even-stephen, today for Johnny Whitehead, eccentric Chicago White Sox pitcher, in another effort to lift themselves out of the American League cellar.

Neither pitcher has a notable record this season. Whitehead has gone winless, pitching some 32 innings in seven games to allow 60 hits, 31 runs, 5 bases on ball and to fan 9 batters.

Marcum has two victories to his credit, including a six-hit triumph over the Cleveland Indians, but has been beaten five times.

WHITEHEAD MARCUM

Pitching definitely has been the worst weakness of the much-shaken-up Browns. Though they've averaged 5.2 runs per game, their opponents have managed to get a 7.2 average, and the Browns are 20 games behind the league leading Yankees.

Vice President Bill De Witt, of the Browns, was optimistic about managing the eccentric Whitehead.

"We know all about him," he commented. "We know he didn't along with Manager Jimmy Dykes, has been out of shape, and has been fined and suspended. But we hope to straighten him out.

"Our starting staff is all right but we need someone to go in there for relief. Whitehead's big enough to stand plenty of work."

Three 'Gift' Runs Handed Chicagoans

Joe Haynes Chased In Eighth; Lewis And Kuhel Homer; Chisox Outhit, 11-8

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Chicago, June 2.—While the White Sox were playing baseball this afternoon, the Nats were playing a new version of hari-kari, and with a self-inflicted, 7-5, defeat put an end to their two game winning streak.

Certainly they weren't actuated by despondency, because going into the fifth inning they were enjoying a 5-2 lead. But from that point, the only runs they stirred up they created for the White Sox, and young Joe Haynes walked off the field a beaten pitcher despite the fact the Nats outhit Chicago, 11 to 8.

The White Sox packed five runs into their last four turns at bat to the extreme satisfaction of the 7,000 customers and ladies' day guests. Three of 'em were gift runs, and the other two were harvested off the relief pitching of Pete Appleton, who pitched like somebody chosen at random off the relief rolls.

Lewis Homers

Buddy Lewis hit a home run this afternoon with a man on base—his second homer on consecutive days—but one must not jump to the conclusion that Lewis was a hero for the Nats today. He wasn't, distinctly. Because with an unpardonable muff of a double play ball, he gave two runs right back to the White Sox in the next inning.

Charley Gelbert dropped a throw at second base to pave the way for the White Sox's tying run in the seventh inning, and in the eighth, young Haynes, who had been pitching si-hit ball, put the winning runs on base. Appling led off the inning with a single off Lewis' glove, and when Haynes walked Kreevich to put a second runner on base with none out, Bucky Harris yanked the 21-year-old rookie.

Harris sent in Pete Appleton, and for a time it appeared to be a happy choice, because the first thing Appleton did was to pounce on Owens' bunt and turn it into a force play at third. Then he caused Pinch Hitter Steinbacher to ground into a force out, and, with Pitcher Thornton Lee at bat, he appeared to be safely out of danger. But he walked Lee, and then pitched a single to Bejma, whose drive into leftfield scored two of his pals to break the 5-to-5 tie.

Kuhel Ties It Up

Three times, in fact, the Nats went out and procured leads against the left-handed Lee. In the first inning they hammered home a run on singles by Estalella, Wright and Gelbert, only to see the White Sox tie it up in the same inning on one swat—Joe Kuhel's homer into the right-field seats.

Joe Haynes helped to put the Nats in a 2-to-1 lead in the second inning, when he followed Ferrell's walk with a single to center, and saw Ferrell score on Case's single to center. But with two out he gave the run right back to the Sox by passing Owen and Tresh and then pitching a single to Lee.

The Nats appeared serious about winning the ball game in the fourth when they knocked Lee loose from three runs. Ferrell drew another walk, and after Haynes' sacrifice, Case singled to center to score Ferrell. The rally sagged when Case was picked off first base by Tresh's snap throw to Kuhel, but Estalella breathed new life into it with a single to left and then Lewis pumped his homer into the right-field seats to set the Nats up in a 5-3 lead.

Lee the Master

But from that point, Lee was master of the Nats. He allowed only three well-spaced singles in the last five innings as the Washington offensive subsided to a whisper.

Meanwhile, the Sox were busying themselves. Lee led off the fifth inning with a single and Bejma was safe when Lewis muffed his grounder. Haynes disposed of the next two hitters nicely enough, but the Sox got two unearned runs

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Chicago, June 2.—In the 100 years that men have been playing baseball, few have been the notable ball players they have sired. But there is evidence now that organized baseball is about to harvest its first bumper crop of ball-playing sons of ball-playing fathers. The breed is improving.

POVICH

Mr. Henry Edwards, super-press agent of the American League, who keeps a close check on such matters, advises us that a host of young men whose pappies were famous big leaguers are coming out of the colleges this year and ready to plunge into organized ball.

"The old big leaguers didn't earn enough money to send their boys to college," observed Mr. Edwards, "but men who were in the big leagues during the past 20 years, did. It's their sons who are coming along now and with college baseball as a background are going into organized ball."

It seems that among the young men on Mr. Edwards' list of prospective big leaguers are young Eddie Johnson, second eldest of the sons of Walter Johnson. Young Eddie, unlike his famous dad, is no pitcher, but he has been a pretty swell infielder for the University of Maryland these past three years. Apparently his play hasn't gone unnoticed, President Curly Byrd of the University of Maryland, has advised Mr. Edwards office that the Boston Red Sox have young Johnson under contract, after outbidding the Yankees and the Pirates.

May See Name Perpetuated in Big Leagues

Thus Walter Johnson, who was disappointed in the pitching talents of Walter jr., who is pitching for a Class D club in Georgia, may see his name perpetuated in the big leagues by 6-foot-2-inch Eddie.

Remember George Sisler? Well, two of his boys are supposedly headed for the big leagues. His oldest son, Dick, already is under contract to the Cardinals, in fact, and George Sisler, jr., is now closing a career as the best pitcher ever produced by the Colgate varsity team.

A young man who will enroll at Duke University next fall is bound to receive considerable attention inasmuch as he is a pitcher and bears the name of Robert Moses Grove, jr. Yes, it's Lefty Grove's son, and Lefty's sending him down there at Duke because the Duke coach is old Jack Coombs, who has developed many a star for the big leagues. Another boy already under Coombs' wing at Duke is Thompson Prothro, jr., who happens to be the son of the manager of the Phillies.

The rigors of big league baseball may not be for them, but there is another trio of lads now in college—all sons of famous baseball-playing pappies—who could make it, according to major league scouts. Eddie Collins, jr., is the hardest hitting centerfielder in Yale's history. Rivaling young Collins as the best college outfielder in the Nation is Joe Wood, jr., whose daddy is Yale's coach. And the captain and star second baseman of the University of Michigan team is none other than Walter Peckinpaugh, 21-year-old son of the famed Roger. Sons of umpries, too, are horning into the baseball picture. Ziggy Sears, National League umpire, has a boy at Alabama who is already under contract to the Yankees and is headed for the Yanks farm at Norfolk, and Babe Pinelli, one of Sears umpiring colleagues, has two boys on the way up. Pinelli, a star infielder with the Reds before he turned umpire, is the father of two of Notre Dame's varsity ball players who have already been approached by several big league teams.

Pinelli Doesn't Want Sons in Same Loop

"They'll both sign contracts," says Pinelli, "probably with the Yankees. It will be with some American League club anyway. I don't want them in the same league that I'm umpiring in. It would be too embarrassing."

In the leagues at this writing are only four sons of big leaguers of any fame. They are Billy Sullivan, jr., of the Browns catching staff, whose daddy was a star with the Braves and White Sox; Johnny Cooney, 36-year-old outfielder of the Bees, whose pappy was a star with the old Cubs; Dixie Walker, whose daddy was considerable pitcher with Washington and other clubs, and young Jim Bagby of the Red Sox, whose father won 30 games for Cleveland the year the Indians won the pennant in 1920.

But Bagby is the only offspring of a big leaguer to make good in the majors during the past seven years.

Ed Walsh's boy, Ed, jr., was around the big leagues for a time several years ago, the first son of a big leaguer to make the grade, but that wouldn't have happened, save for the munificence of the late Charles Comiskey, according to Mr. Edwards.

"Mr. Comiskey tried to take care of the sons of his old ball players. It was he who sent young Ed Walsh and young Bob Walsh, too, through Notre Dame. And it was Mr. Comiskey who sent Billy Sullivan, the son of his old catcher, to Notre Dame, too. The old ball players didn't make the sort of money that would permit 'em to send their boys to college. That's why we've been a long time getting this fine young crop that's now beginning to show."

Johnstown 1-10 In Belmont Stakes Today

Gilded Knight and Challenge Complete Woodward's Entry

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—Johnstown, beaten out of a chance to join the select winners of America's triple crown by the muddy Preakness, goes postward tomorrow as the outstanding choice to capture the seventy-first $50,000 Belmont stakes, last of the turf's rich spring fixtures for 3-year-olds.

The big bay from William Woodward's Belair stud, galloping winner of the Kentucky Derby and an easier winner of last Saturday's Withers mile, is the 1 to 10 choice to win the mile and a half journey, coupled in the betting with Mrs. H. C. Phipps' Gilded Knight, second to Challedon in the Preakness, and Woodward's giant Challenge, but it is the presence of "Big John" himself that makes the odds prohibitive.

Given a fast track, Johnstown is expected to go to the front at the start and stay there all the way. That's the way Jimmy Stout has been riding him this season and it got results in everything except the Preakness, where he faltered in the drive and finished far back. Challedon is not eligible for the Belmont.

Gilded Knight failed to show anything in the Withers, but Trainer Sunny Jim Fitzsimmons is inclined to throw that one out as just a bad race. Unless it is muddy, Challenge probably will be scratched.

Of the others, only John Hay Whitney's Heather Broom has tangled with the Belair ace. Even the Earle Sande-trained colt could do no better than third in the Kentucky Derby. He figures to be in the second choice tomorrow at around 15 to 1.

Lombardi's Hit Climaxes Overtime Battle in Boston

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 2.—Ernie Lombardi's ninth homer of the season, driven into the leftfield stands with two mates aboard, today climaxed the Cincinnati's second straight overtime victory over the Boston Bees, by a 4-0 margin in 11 innings. The Reds exploded a five-run barrage in the thirteenth to win yesterday's game.

During most of the shutout, which enabled the Reds to gain a game on the second-place St. Louis Cardinals, Milburn Shoffner, the Boston southpaw, waged a keen duel with Whitey Moore.

Until the tenth, Shoffner limited the hard-hitting league leaders to five scattered hits, and their first scoring chance did not come until Bill Werber opened the eleventh with a single. After he was forced by Linus Frey, Shoffner issued his third base on balls to Ival Goodman.

Santa Claus Wins Jump Event at Washington Horse Show

Rain, Mud Fail to Mar Opening Day

Mrs. Perry Wins In Jump-Off; Five In Hot Competition Over Slippery Course

By Anne Hagner

Rain, mud and good jumping marked the opening day of the Washington Horse Show, which began a three-day stand yesterday at the Meadowbrook Saddle Club, in Chevy Chase.

A small crowd of hardened horse show fans braved a steady downpour to see a full card of hunter, jumper and saddle horse events that called out keen competition in spite of the sneer of the Weather Man.

Hardest fought class on the program, the three-day open jumping event, saw five horses go clean over a stiff course of eight fences, made worse by the slippery going. In a jump-off, Mr. and Mrs. W. Haggin Perry's gigantic bay gelding, Santa Claus, with Mrs. Perry up, went over the course with only one fault, thus defeating Mr. and Mrs. George P. Greenhalgh's well liked Billy Do, Capt. John Meade's Enterprise and Lisbeth Stieg's Hi-Ho, who won secnod, third and fourth places, respectively.

Hi-Ho Goes Well

Lisbeth Stieg, whose Hi-Ho fenced high, wide and handsome in the jumping event, had two excellent rides on Mrs. John Hay Whitney's grey gelding, Two Leggins, to win blue ribbons in the classes for hunters, shown by amateurs, and ladies' working hunters.

Second to the Llangollen entry in the amateur class was Alex Calvert on Mrs. George Watts Hill's Lucky Buck, and third went to Bon Diable, another Whitney representative, with Fred Hughes, jr., up. Miss Stieg mad it a 75 per cent Llangollen victory by taking fourth place on Spring Hope.

In the ladies' class, which had some tip-top performances from the 20 entrants, Two Leggins, again with Miss Stieg up, won over Bon Diable and Spring Hope, both ridden by Margaret Cotter, who took second and fourth places, and Susan Fuller on Mrs. Hill's Inky, who won third ribbon. Coupled with Bon Diable, Two Leggins also won the class for pairs of hunters.

Miss Moffett Wins

Only other horse to win two blue ribbons during the day was Eleanor Moffett, of Asheville, N. C., with a 5-year-old chestnut mare named Candolette. With Miss Moffett up, Candolette took the class for novice hunters and also the road hacks, defeating a sizable field in each.

In the morning classes, Mr. and Mrs. George P. Plummer, from Potomac, Md., won the yearling class with a good looking brown thoroughbred colt sired by the well-known race horse, Grey Coat.

Mr. and Mrs. Perry won the class for 2 and 3-year-olds, suitable to become hunters, with To Victory, which scored over Mr. and Mrs. U. S. Randle'e chestnut Randle's Agent.

In the 5-gaited saddle horse division, wherein entrants worked under the terrific handicap of deep going, Trillora Farm's oft-crowned champion, Five Star Final, took the blue in the class for stallions or geldings, over Col. Henry Armstead's Azan. Earl rode the winner.

Repulsion Wins

In the class for local hunters, in quest of the Peter Voorhees de Graw Memorial Trophy, Betty Couzens, on her chestnut gelding, Repulsion, won the blue over Capt. Meade's Dansoux. Miss Couzens' handsome hunter performed beautifully over the course to leave little doubt in the minds of the spectators as to who would annex the big trophy. Repulsion, a 7-year-old son of Repulse, has just returned from a successful tour of the Southern circuit, including Norfolk, Hampton and Deep Run, Va.

Sly Portia, 3-year-old mare from the Greenhalgh's Springsbury Farm, had a smooth performance in the handicap jumping class to win the blue, with Shirley Payne in the saddle. Second to the well-built brown mare was Charles Lang's steady fencer, Pat O'Malley, ridden by James Marsh.

This morning will be devoted to Junior classes, beginning at 9 o'clock, and this afternoon will continue the three-day jumping event and other hunter, jumper, bareback costume class and saddle classes.

3d Battalion Wins

In the District of Columbia Firemen's Softball League, the Third Battalion defeated the Sixth Battalion, 12-5, yesterday at the Sherwood Playground. Lieut. Grisso was the winning pitcher, allowing eight hits.

64 Men Start City Tennis Play Today

Absence of Welsh, Hunt Presages Wide-Open Fight at Edgemoor

Minus Barney Welsh, District champion, and Gil Hunt, Middle Atlantic titleholder, who are busy with final school examinations, the annual City of Washington men's tennis tournament will open at 10 o'clock at Edgemoor with a formidable field of 64 entries.

Among these are most of the old standbys as well as a pair of promising newcomers who might crash through to a championship in their first local tournament start. Alphonso Smith, former twelfth ranking player of the country, and Dick Murphy, 1933 winner of the Longwood Bowl and runner-up for the national intercollegiate championship, are conceded better than an even chance to reach the quarter-finals at least.

Because this is the first tournament of the season and little is known about the players, especially the new ones, the committee followed last year's rankings pretty closely in their seedings. Therefore, Hugh Lynch, defending champion, was seeded No. 1, and followed in order by Lieut. Jimmy Farrin, Ricky Willis, Allie Ritzenberg, Ray Stocklinski, Davie Johnsen, Joe Baker, and Frank Shore.

Because of crowded conditions at Edgemoor players are requested to come dressed for play. They are urged to report promptly on arrival to Coreferees Strand Johnsen or Mariano Erana.

1 o'clock—Bill Thompson vs. John Hutchinson, Ralph Adair vs. Capt. Tom Sherburne, Ricky Willis vs. Ken Dalby, DeWitt Armstrong vs. DeWitt Smith, Frank Clark vs. Howard Pratt.

2 o'clock—Hugh Lynch vs. Jack Hoyt, George Strombos vs. Timothy Fasma, Max Bost vs. J. B. Gillespie, Dick Murphy vs. Calvin Brazes, Austin Rice vs. Allie Ritzenberg.

3 o'clock—A. R. Speale vs. Ben Jaffee, Robert Burgess vs. Ray Stocklinski, David Johnsen vs. Almus Speare, Bill Wickham vs. Charles Sturtevant, Herb Shenkin vs. J. S. Echols.

5 o'clock—George Stoner vs. Lawrence St. Jean, John Curran vs. E. B. Brownell, Clay Johnson vs. James Wilson, Harry Brinkerhoff vs. Frank Shore, Joel Baker vs. Billy Contreras.

6 o'clock—George Herbert vs. Maurice Cowar, Ralph Dewsnup vs. Mariano Erana, Neil Lendjen vs. Pete Gartner, Alphonso Smith vs. M. Madden, Tom Mangan vs. Don Garber.

First-round matches between Ed Mather and Scott Pollock and Bill Rainey and Alan Staubly will be played Sunday morning.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, June 2.—What's wrong with Bob Pastor as Joe Louis' opponent in September, if Lou Nova decides, as he probably will, that it would be better to wait until next year before he exposes himself to the champion?

Runaway Robert's record isn't one to strike terror in the heart of the Bomber, but Louis' utter superiority in the heavyweight division calls for a new outlook on challengers. Records, in these times, don't mean as much as they once did in the division. Eligibility rules are made less stringent, for Louis is the first heavyweight who ever kept his campaign promise to be a fighting champion.

CONSIDINE

He uses up his challengers before they are legitimate foes. Pastor, because of these revised rules, and in view of Nova's probable renegging on a September fight against Louis, is all that's left.

Three fighters have made Joe Louis look bad—Schmeling, Farr and Pastor. Schmeling knocked him out. Farr mauled Joe's eyes closed and bullied him into twitches of timidity. Pastor out-thought Joe, out-footed him and made him look distinctly unlike the greatest fighter of his generation. Joe came back and knocked out Schmeling. He didn't have to refight Farr, for Tommy's chronic losing streak removed him as a serious contender.

Compiles Good Record on 'Biscuit Money'

Touring the provinces, fighting for biscuit money, Pastor has had a pretty good record for the past year—though, as we say, his chief recommendation for a title shot is that two years ago he stayed ten active rounds with a man who has used up only a little more than 6 minutes to knock out his last three opponents. Nobody seriously expects a heavyweight fight to prove anything, but a Louis-Pastor thing might at least serve to point out whether Louis—who has satisfied everybody that he is a truly immortal puncher—has learned how to tag a wraith.

Bounding Bob had the discretion to run like a man in an air raid in his Louis fight, and would have lapped his field if the turns had been banked. But every now and then he did put on the brakes, slapped the bewildered Louis' chops, or butted him in the nose, then skipped along.

Since dropping out of contention by losing to Nathan Mann, Pastor has added a little more fighting to his sprinting. He has beaten some pretty good boys, notably the crafty Maurice Strickland, lambasting Roscoe Toles and a few others of that general ilk. But he is still an artful boxer, maybe the best in the game today. And under the loose specifications now popular in the division he deserves to be sentenced to a Louis fight.

Comparing the American and British Poloists

These seem to be days of top-heavy favorites. The Yanks are phohibitive choices to win the pennant and series. Louis will be a 1-to-20 shot against Tony Galento. Johnstown will go to the post tomorrow in the $50,000 Belmont a 1-to-10 choice. But nobody has computed just how much of a favorite the Americans are over the British Sunday in the first of three gallops for the International Polo Cup. The world's only four 10-goal players—Tommy Hitchcock, Stewart Iglehart, Cecil Smith and Mike Phipps—are on the American side. It will be something like pitting a rejuvenated ball club out of the Hall of Fame against the Washington Senators.

My polo spy, who is disguised as a termite in Hitchcock's favorite mallet, informs me that the differences between an American and a British polo player are these:

When a British player makes a shot he pauses imperceptively to watch the flight of the ball and make up his mind what to do about it, while an American player hits the pill and instinctively races like mad to the point of the next play. The Briton will play for the ball, while the American first takes care of his opponent, with a bump, and then hits the ball. The English don't believe in fighting hard, when they're ahead and they still hit while seated, though the Americans showed them 30 years ago that by standing up in the stirrups they could hit the ball twice as hard and far.

Old Dominion, Potomac Hold Regatta June 18

Home-and-Home Event Scheduled; Many Races Slated

Alexandria, Va., June 2.—The Old Dominion and Potomac Boat Clubs will meet in the first match of their annual home-and-home regatta series here on June 18, it was announced today by officials of the local club. The date for the return meet, which will be held over the Potomac Club's course near Chain Bridge, has not been set.

In addition to the crew events between the two clubs, which have met annually since the early 1900's, the program will feature the Old Dominion Club's annual interclub regatta, and a day-long series of events will be presented. Efforts are also being made to have the Potomac River Sailing Association stage one of its summer races here on that date, as was the case last year when the most extensive aquatic program ever seen here was presented.

In addition to the dual meets scheduled, the Old Dominion and Potomac crews will have an opportunity to carry out their long-standing feud in two quadrangular regattas, in which both clubs have tentatively been entered. The Virginia Boat Club, in Richmond, will be the scene of the first meet, while the Arundel Boat Club, of Baltimore, will probably be host to the Richmonders, along with Old Dominion and Potomac, during the latter part of July.

Alton Benton, big Detroit right-hander, hurled until one man was out in the ninth and got credit for his first victory of the season. Tommy Bridges came in to quell a threatening Boston uprising.

Former G. U. Athletic Stars Return to Action Today

Gregory Mangin, Tom Mangan and Others to Play Tennis; Alumni Nine Will Meet Seniors

Liniment manufacturers rubbed their hands with glee this morning and ordered double shipments to all druggists in the area of Georgetown where about noon 35 or 40 aging but still athletically-inclined alumni are expected to be comparing muscular aches and pains.

The occasion is the special athletics events to be held at the Hilltop this morning in conjunction with the sesquitennial celebration. From all parts of the country great Georgetown athletes of other eras have come here to test their mellowed arms and limbs and stack up against members of the 1939 graduating class.

At 9 o'clock Gregory Mangin, for years one of the Nation's top-ranking tennis stars; Dooly Mitchell and Tom Mangan, top-notchers in the District for years, and Fred Mesmer and Paul Kunkel meet in exhibitions on the Hilltop courts, and at 10 a baseball team picked from among alumni will meet nine G. U. seniors on Varsity Field.

Among the alumni players will be some of Georgetown's best all-time athletes, including Tony Plansky and Jack Flavin, who were running mates in 1927; Dr. G. Harris, former Chisox pitcher and present baseball coach at Wilson Teachers College; Jack Hagerty, head football coach at the Hilltop, and Fred J. Rice, former basketball coach at Catholic University and now a local attorney.

The senior team, coached by Joe Judge, will be drafted from among Bill Burke, Pete Chumbris, Joe Corliss, Joe Dowd, Jim Durkin, Mike Fuardo, Jim Gallagher, Anthony Grapone, Leonard Krajenski, John Riofski, Mike Russo, Willie Wolf, Charles Wychunas and Tom Gildea. Durkin was an outfield star of the G. U. nine this spring; Riofski and Wychunas were football standouts, and Gildea is president of the yard.

Right and wrong in a canoe: Article III

In Rough Weather Paddle on Knees Amidship of Canoe

Only Safe Position During Heavy Blow Is in Center of Craft, Says D. C. Expert

By Al Hailey.

If you must venture out into rough water or a high wind in a canoe and wish to keep keel and gunwale intact, take up a position almost admidships and avoid the bow and stern as you would the measles.

Practically the only safe paddling position in a heavy wind is on both knees and sitting against a thwart, J. W. Burch, Potomac Boat Club canoe veteran, said yesterday.

'This thing of paddling in heavy weather almost unravels itself, but canoeists caught in a sudden squall seldom pause to consider this, Burch pointed out. Too many deploy into the bow and dig in furiously and often futilely for home, he added.

Enthusiasm Wins by 4 Lengths in Mud at Charles Town

Pays Backers $3.80 Ticket As Favorite

Royal Veil Second In Sloppy Going; Two Spills Mark Racing Before Only 4,000

By Walter Haight.

A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., June 2.—Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Enthusiasm, which ran fourth on May 17, third on May 24 and second on May 31, ran first on June 2. Those who stuck by the 7-year-old gelding collected at the rate of only $3.80 for the usual deuce. Showing a keen liking for the track that resembled the rear of a 1909 soda fountain, Enthusiasm forged to the finish line four lengths in front of Mrs. C. L. Payne's Royal Veil, with P. H. Faulconer's Lena Girl third an additional length and a half back. Five others were strung out through the stretch at the end of the 4½ furlongs.

Despite the muddy track, Enthusiasm turned in time of 0:51 4-5 and got Jockey A. Vesseli home without the boy getting one speck of mud on Mrs. Whitney's fuschia and purple colors.

The crowd of 4,000, remarkable for the poor conditions both overhead and on the track, installed Enthusiasm the favorite from the first moment that the ticket windows were opened and the son of Bubbling Over did not fail his backers. He ran like a 1 to 100 shot.

Jockey Vesseli took him out of the gate first and slowly but surely he opened the gap the rest of the way, winning with something in reserve. Royal Veil was urged along by Jockey Willie Nertney but the ancient gray gelding just couldn't match strides with the winner. As far as first money was concerned, it was a two-horse race.

Two spectacular falls marked the early races but both boys and horses escaped injury. In the first race, Crumwood slipped into the fence, tore out the railing, and tossed Jockey Sammy Palumbo into the mud. Palumbo was unhurt but plenty angry.

In the third race, Wild Day stumbled and went down, throwing Jockey J. A. Taylor over the infield fence. The boy was taken to the track hospital in the ambulance, had the mud removed from his eyes and was back in action in the fifth race.

Those who teamed Prince Jock, favorite in the second race, with Cautious Bo in the third race collected a $15.60 daily double.

At The Post

Charles Town, W. Va., June 2.

Dear Al:

F. E. James, of Washington, reports that Counter Pass came out of yesterday's race lame. With 16 days of the session here over, Buddy Root, Lou Machado and Sammy Palumbo were still deadlocked for the jockeys' leadership with 14 winners each. Mike Grant, of Baltimore, who in addition to owning and training horses has been timing the thoroughbreds for years, is ill in a Hot Springs, Ark., hospital. Unless fellow trainers step on the gas, R. F. Cook, of Washington, stands a royal chance of winding up the meeting as the leader of his division. Cook had saddled eight winners up until today. Forty-one horses backed into favoritism at this meeting have entered the winners' circle. Mrs. R. K. Yingling bought Quick Action from Cy Butler and Booze Card from J. Sullivan. They will be rested until the ten-day meeting opens July 26 at Belair, Md. Starter Johnny Morrissey, who has been very lenient with bad post actors, has started to crack down on the offenders. Morrissey added five to his list yesterday, bringing his total up to 18. Trainer Everett Brining announces that he will convert Lew Dunlin into a steeplechaser. Brining will campaign him during the forthcoming Belair and Cumberland sessions in Maryland. BILL.

First race—Lady Buck appears to be the right one in this opening sprint. Her best races have not been on off tracks, but she has class and probably will get home. Justa Canter will be a home in the off going and has plenty of footing. Canrock has been awaiting a spot and may be turned loose in this. Parking Ticket is on the reserve list.

Second race—Counora has been a winner at the meeting and comes from a barnful of fit ones. Appears ready to click in this company. Aster Princess showed lots of speed on the milers and the changed track may help her. Lucie Mowlee to take care of the others.

Third race—Schley Buck gets a better post position than in that recent outing. Palumbo is slated to ride and I'm going to string along. Pukka Heaven belongs in this company and is dangerous. Boulder Dam will like the off oval and is due to be prominent.

Fourth race—Lady Dunlin has been waiting for a soft track and promises to run her real race in this field. Freed Ride downed a good field earlier in the meeting and fits in well here. The bad track will be right up Flying Carpet's alley.

Fifth race—Sun Drops is another favored by the change in conditions. Has speed enough to get a good position at the first turn and I look for a winning effort. Miss Epe runs all good races and should be there or thereabouts. Game Chaser and Morvim get a better figure in mud.

Sixth race—Star Mint may take the measure of Air Win in the day's handicap and I'm going to name them that way. Star Mint moves up in the off going and gets seven pounds from her rival. Ivonia may be better than generally rated and deserves a high ranking.

Seventh race—Justa Jimmie will be at home on the track and may lead all the way. Boro Poker is good now as that suggests, but may not like the going. Flying Centaur comes from behind—the 7-furlong route makes this one a possibility.

Eighth race—Petee Lad gets a good position and may take command early and stay in front. Prince Khayyam won his last and mud moves him up. Pencader for the show end.

Substitute race—If this is used I'll take Blue Prelude, Fred

Rock Creek's Pre-Dawn Addicts—the 'Oily Boids'

The "Oily Boids," the group of 32 members of the early morning golfers at Rock Creek, wiped the sleep from their eyes and posed for the cameraman before trudging over the dew-laden fairways. This group of businessmen of varied occupations that are due on the job early and thus have little time for afternoon golf, play it the hard way, before most of us get up. They're of varied ability, and Arthur Seaton and Sam Del Vecchio will battle it out next week in the delayed May tournament finals. Johnny Welch, third from right in back row, is the clubhouse guardian that makes coffee and cakes for the boys at 4 a. m., while on the extreme right, kneeling, is public links champ Andy Oliver, a ringer, who was probably just getting home instead of getting up

Joe Silva Welcomed by Ambassador

Dr. Najera 'Confident' Joe Will Defeat Archibald Monday

Joe Silva, Mexican fighter who hopes to dethrone World's Featherweight Champion Joey Archibald, was welcomed to Washington yesterday by Dr. Don Castillo Francisco Najera, Mexican Ambassador, who informed the 21-year-old Los Angeles boxer he hopes to see the match Monday night at Griffith Stadium.

The Ambassador and members of the embassy staff are to be guests of Silva in a special box at the stadium when Joe meets Archibald in the 10-round nontitle bout.

Dr. Najera told Silva that Mexico is "confident you will beat Archibald and some day win the world's championship."

Members of the embassy staff who wished Silva luck yesterday and who will attend the fight Monday included Dr. Luis Quintanilla, minister of affairs; Dr. Rafael Fuentes, counsellor; Roberto Cordova, legal counsellor; Raimundo Cuervo, second secretary, and Gusto Cierra, third secretary.

Promoter Joe Turner, Matchmaker Goldie Ahearn, Jack Laken, Silva's manager, and Jack Stanley, his trainer, attended the recpetion.

"This is the most history-making fight we ever had in Washington," Ahearn exclaimed with gestures last night. "First we sign the fighters in the Senate Office Building, with Senators looking on, and now the Ambassador gives Silva his good wishes."

Silva went through a workout yesterday at the National Capital Sporting Club gymnasium; and will top off his training today at 2 p. m. with another public workout.

The supporting card was announced yesterday, with Sammy Chivas, Detroit Greek, meeting Carl Dell, Archibald's stablemate, in a six-round cofeature of the preliminaries.

Frankie Wills, local boy, who beat Chivas two weeks ago in an action-filled eight rounds, will meet Red Osborne, Washington, in another six. Jackie Carter, Silva's stablemate, meets Lee Rosen, Baltimore, and Al Hart, Washington colored heavyweight, will meet Panama Joe Walker in four-rounders.

6th Annual North-South Shoot Opens Today at Capital Club

Mrs. A. W. Walker, George Deyoe Defend Titles

Many of the greatest shots of the skeet world will start shattering clay targets this morning as the initial events of the sixth annual North-South skeet shoot get under way on the Bradley boulevard of the National Capital Skeet Club. Shooting starts 9 a. m.

Henry Joy, of Detroit, national all-gauge champion; Dick Shaughnessy, the Dedham (Mass.) schoolboy phenomenon; Dave Sklar, the Brooklyn ave; Mrs. A. W. Walker, the Washington member of the current all-American women's team and defending North-South champion; Mrs. M. L. Smythe, Aurora, Ohio, another all-American; Mrs. Leslie S. Webb, of Richmond, and Mrs. William C. Coe, of Washington, running mate of the all-American second team.

Women's Field Strong

The female contingent of scatter gun enthusiasts in always strong in the North-South championships. This year will be no exception. In fact, the women's event will more than likely be the feature of the shooting on Saturday with the strong opposition Mrs. Walker will have in defending her title.

George Deyoe, of the Washington Metropolitan Police, who made a perfect score of 100x100 to win the all-gauge North-South championship last year, will be defending his title against the best shooters in the country. This event, the feature, wil be shot on Sunday, concurrently with the five-man team championships. The latter title now rests with the National Capital Rebels, who garnered it last year with the excellent score of 486x500.

The vastly improved layout of the field this year will make it more comfortable for the large gallery of fans. For those who have never been out to the field, turn left at Bradley boulevard for 4½ miles and follow the signs.

Quinlan's 81 Is Low In Alumni Golfing

E. Quinlan's 81 was low gross in the Georgetown University alumni golf tournament at Congressional yesterday. Low net went to E. P. McCahill who had 93-22 for 73. E. H. Nunerdurg's 79 was drawn out for the blind bogey winner.

Rain postponed the scheduled exhibition match between Maurice McCarthy and Joseph Lynch, of the alumni, and Johnny Burke and Charles Pettijohn, of the Georgetown varsity.

Beaned Infielder Reported Critical After Injections

Buffalo, N. Y., June 2 (INS).—The condition of Gene Hasson, Montreal first baseman, who suffered grave brain injuries when he was struck by a pitched ball here Tuesday, was extremely critical tonight.

Dr. Elmer Milch, a brain surgeon, twice made spinal punctures on the athlete to releive increasing cerebral pressure.

Hasson is too weak to permit any operation on the brain or even to be removed to another part of the hospital for X-ray pictures, Dr. Milch said.

Giants Start Early, Wallop Cardinals, 8-2

First Inning Outburst Nets Victory; Davis Victim of Uprising

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—The New York Giants, who hadn't scored a run in their last 15 innings, grouped five in the first frame today to wallop the St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 2.

The uprising was staged against durable Curt Davis on two errors, a double, a sacrifice bunt, and three singles, one of them by Joe Demaree with the bases loaded.

Hank Danning homered to lead the Giants to their other three runs in the eighth.

Johnny Mize's ninth home run of the season followed by three singles brought the Cards two runs in the fifth and chased Cliff Melton. Bill Lohrman worked 4 2-3 hitless innings in relief to get credit for the victory.

Short-Wave Set Beat 'Bookies' Out of $5,000

St. Louis, June 2 (AP).—Two handbook operators told tonight a woeful tale of radio-equipped patrons who bet after the finish but before telegraphed race returns were in and won between $3,000 and $5,000 over a period of weeks.

The bookies and a man they claimed was one of a trio of "surething" bettors were arrested after a street battle in which a shortwave radio set, two transmitters, three speakers, an earphone set and a couple of aerials were ripped from the bettors' car.

Another man and a woman escaped during the fracas, the "bookies" declared. They said the two men apparently received the returns in the car and relayed them to the woman by shortwave, short-range radio. She then would make up her mind suddenly, bet, and win.

New York, June 2 (AP).—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced today that Melio Bettina of Beacon, N. Y., recognized in New York State as the light-heavyweight champion of the world, will fight Billy Conn of Pittsburgh on July 13 for the title. The fight will probably be held in Yankee Stadium.

Paddle on Knees In Rough Weather

wind resistance against the high riding stern, he said. Even when two are in the canoe, both paddlers should take up the thwart position.

The thwart, incidentally, is the cross piece in the canoe, Burch explained. With the weight evenly distributed against each side of the canoe on the knees, the paddler can keep his craft low in the water and at the same time get a deeper reach in his stroke.

If the paddler wishes to get a hearty portion of the Potomac—or of the body of water he happens to be on—in his lap, he can do so by digging in from a position in the stern, Burch indicated.

This apparently is a common error among the neophyte canoeists. In addition to weighting the stern down, thus making it a simple matter for waves to sweep in the canoe, the paddler has little or no control over the steering situation, tiring himself out changing from one side to the othe.

(Another article on canoeing will appear in tomorrow's Washington Post.)

Bensinger and Lee Meet for Net Title

Man of the Month

(Following each game by The Washington Club, Walter Johnson distributes among the Nats ten points of merit, based on their performances for the day. At the end of each month, the Washington player boasting the greatest number of points is designated as the Nats' "Man of the Month" and receives a trophy from The Washington Post.)

Joe Haynes, despite his defeat, was the outstanding performer for the Nats at Chicago yesterday, and receives the chief award of points in the Man of the Month contest on the basis of that game.

To Haynes, four points, because he pitched seven-hit ball for seven innings, and up to that point had allowed only two earned runs, and because he figured in the scoring of two of the Nats' runs.

To George Case, two points, because he made three hits and figured in two of the Nats' runs.

To Bobby Estalella, two points, because he made two hits and scored two runs.

To Taft Wright, two points, because he made two hits, drove in a run, and put the tying run on base in the ninth. The totals:

Estalella	5	George Case	2
Wright	5	Lewis	1
Joe Haynes	4	Ferrell	1

Golden Terror, Londos Try Again Tonight

Weather Man Promises Clear Skies for First Outdoor Mat Show

Postponed Thursday and again last night because of rain, the world's heavyweight championship wrestling bout between Jim Londos and the Golden Terror is expected to be held tonight at Griffith Stadium, for the weatherman has relented and promised clear skies for the first outdoor show.

Early yesterday Promoter Joe Turner was tempted to move the card indoors but, remembering the heavy advance ticket sale and the unusual amount of interest centering on this match, he decided to risk another postponement.

It will be the first wrestling show to be held on Saturday at the Stadium in many years.

The entire supporting card remains intact. In a special feminine feature Clara Mortensen, claimant of the world's lightweight title, will pull hair with Betty Bowman, of Chicago. Jack Hader will engage Dropkick Murphy, Najo Singh will meet Pete Managoff, Slammin' Hank Methany will face Jules Strongbow, and Jim Clonstock will tackle Roy Graham.

Tonight may mark Londos' final appearance in Washington. The aging Greek plans to leave soon for his native Greece and it would occasion little surprise should he retire from the mat game entirely and remain on the other side of the Atlantic.

They got the tying run in the seventh because after Bejma singled with one out, Gelbert dropped Ferrell's throw to second on Bejma's attempt to steal. Umpire Quinn called Bejma out but reversed his decision when he discovered Gelbert had dropped the ball after making a diving tag of the runner. A bit later Walker singled to left and the score was tied at 5-5.

Then came the dismal exhibition by Haynes and Appleton in the eighth, and the White Sox had the ball game.

Perhaps it should be recorded, however, that the Nats had the tying runs on base in the ninth. After Case grounded out, Estalella drew a walk, but after working the count to three and two, Lewis popped up. Wright singled to right to put the tying run on with two out, but Gelbert could produce only a tame fly to Kreevich.

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—The Detroit Baseball Co. announced today that a game scheduled between the Detroit Tigers and Washington in Detroit for Monday, June 12, had been advanced to Saturday, June 10, when it will be part of a doubleheader. The reason for the change is the baseball centennial celebration in Cooperstown, N. Y., on June 12.

Business Turn Up Is Believed To Be at Hand

Gain in Steel Orders And Steady Consumer Demand Are Signs

New York, June 2.—Evidence is accumulating that the recent slump in business is bottoming out and that a turn is at hand, the Standard Statistics Co. says today. Throughout the recent period of internal and external uncertainty, the movement of goods into hands of consumers has been maintained at a very steady pace. Adjusted for seasonal factors, department store sales have shown little change since the first of the year. Fluctuations in other retail trade indexes also have been barely perceptible. This steady rate of consumer demand is attributable to the fact that the national income of individuals has held level for four months, according to the monthly statistical summary of the Standard Statistics Co.

Another development of the recent past leading to expectations of improving business is the sharp increase in steel orders. Heavy tonnages were booked during the few days of price cutting in May, and the mills are beginning to roll steel against these orders.

Steel Activity 52.2 Per Cent

Operations this week are up to 52.2 per cent of capacity, which compares with the early May low of 45.4 per cent. Indications are that June operations will average a few points higher than the average for last month, reversing the downtrend which started two months ago.

Commodity prices as a whole have registered little change over the past month, with the Standard Statistics index moving over the narrow range of 72.2 and 72.8 (1926 equals 100).

Activity on the New York Stock Exchange in May was the lowest in nearly five years. Not since September, 1934, had sales fallen as low as the less than 13,000,000 shares of last month.

Excess reserves of Federal Reserve member banks ended the month at more than $4,000,000,000, up more than a billion and a half from the figure of a year earlier.

London, June 2.—The stock market regained its balance today following Thursday's setback, although trading remained slow. Transatlantics held firm and British funds slanted upward. Domestic rails edged fractionally forward while fair demand appeared for mining issues. The new £2,500,000 government of North Ireland 3¾ per cent issue, heavily oversubscribed, sold at a premium of £⅝ at one time. Investment demand sustained many industrials.

Paris—Bourse prices were well maintained today in a small turnover. Rentes gained 20 to 60 centimes, but Bank of France dipped 5 francs. Royal Dutch and Suez Canal were narrowly ahead.

Liverpool—Wheat futures dropped ½ to ¾ penny a bushel today, influenced by increased offerings of Australian wheat and Argentine hedging. Reports of rain in the American belt also spurred selling. The cotton market was closed for a holiday.

July Cotton Up 40 Cents on Heavy Buying

New York, June 2 (AP).—A fresh burst of strength in the July cotton contract failed to excite buyers of later deliveries today. The near month closed 8 points higher while others were unchanged to off 3.

Helping to boost July was persistent buying by a leading spot interest, which was credited with taking about 10,000 bales during the session. July closed only a notch below the 9-cent mark.

Trade was comparatively small as the market appeared to feel the lack of foreign leadership. (Liverpool was closed until Monday.) Liverpool brokers and ring professionals furnished the major share of forward support, which was not enough to withstand New Orleans selling and Southern hedging.

Worth Street activity slowed down a bit, but prices held firm at recent advances. Sales estimate for the last five business days were between 75,000,000 and 80,000,000 yards.

Grain Belt Rain Reduces Wheat Cent a Bushel

Private Crop Reports Of Larger Yield Also Encourage Selling

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 2.—Widespread rains over much of the North American grain belt and a forecast by private crop experts that the 1939 United States wheat harvest may exceed normal domestic requirements caused enough selling to lower wheat values about a cent today.

An early decline that carried July wheat down to 77¼ while September reached 76⅛ attracted scattered buying, some of which was credited to milling interests, and there was a partial recovery before the close. Final quotations were ¼@⅝ lower than yesterday, with July at 77½@77⅝, September 77⅝@77½.

Good rains fell in both the United States and Canadian belts, quieting drought talk for the time being, and there were official and private forecasts of continued unsettled weather over much of the area, particularly where spring wheat is grown.

Corn Prices Lower

The weather also encouraged selling of other grains. Corn closed ¼@½ lower, July 51⅛@51, September 52⅝@52½, oats ⅜@⅝ down, rye ⅜@⅝ off and lard 2 to 5 lower.

The June estimates of private crop authorities were about in line with trade expectations, although slightly less pessimistic than some recent reports. One expert, whose figures were released Wednesday, had forecast a winter wheat harvest of only 492,000,000 bushels, but the other five reports raised the average of the six to 516,000,000 bushels which compared with an average of 538,000,000 on May 1 and the first Government forecast of 544,000,000 bushels.

Spring wheat production was forecast at 184,000,000 bushels compared with 244,000,000 last season. Total indicated production of 700,000,000 bushels would be 231,000,000 less than last year's United States harvest.

Holiday and Strike Reduce Auto Output

Detroit, June 2 (AP).—Production of automobiles and trucks this week was estimated at 32,445 units today by Ward's Automotive Reports, which attributed the decrease from the previous week's production of 67,740 to the Memorial Day holiday and to the shutdown of Chrysler plants because of the strike in the Briggs Manufacturing Co. Output this week a year ago was 32,980 cars and trucks.

Ward's said the current week was the first this year in which production dropped below the comparative 1938 figures.

Steel and Power Shares Hold Market Firm Trading Highest for Nearly Three Weeks 15 Treasury Bonds at All-Time Highs

New York, June 2.—Political affairs at home and abroad, business and industrial indices and other market measuring sticks cut little or no figure in a day of desultory trading and irregular price changes today. Interest in securities was nominal due principally to the Bond Club's annual outing which lured operators, specialists and even some of the financial news sleuths from Wall Street to Sleepy Hollow. Quite positively, it was sleepier in the financial district than in the vicinity of Scarborough.

Volume on the stock exchange was under 400,000 shares, or the smallest total for a five-hour session in nearly three weeks, or since May 15. The 100-stock barometer closed 0.13 point higher with steels, utilities and manufacturing specialties the strongest. In the bond section where trading also slumped, Treasury issues provided a feature, 15 of them reaching new all-time highs in thin dealings. Strength in Swiss francs and further weakness in Dutch funds was remarked in foreign exchange transactions. In commodities, wheat declined ¼ to ⅝ cent despite private estimates of crop deterioration. Cotton was 8 point higher to 3 points lower.

Opening trades in shares reflected receipt of some overnight orders for the buying side. Steel common came out at an advance of half a point from Thursday's close on a 1,000-share lot. It finished for a net gain of ⅜. This experience applied to quite a few issues, notably the pivotals, early gains being shaded in later sales.

New Favorites Appear

While U. S. Rubber, General Motors, Chrysler and a number of others usually included in the most active list remained leaders, other pivotals were displaced by new favorites, including baking and chain store shares. The latter are being bought, according to brokers for two reasons. One is that legislation proposed in various States respecting the chains is currently meeting with small success, a number of bills having been defeated. Of probably more immediate interest, however, is that May sales for many of the stores are scheduled to be announced today. A year ago results were poor and the showing is expected to be favorable, partly too because May 1939 had one more business day than in the like 1938 months.

Automobile shares made fair progress considering the slump in U. S. and Canadian assemblies to 32,445 units, comparing with 67,740 in the preceding week and 32,980 a year ago. The decline was, of course, fully accounted for by the Briggs strike, effect of which has been communicated to the important motor car manufacturers' operations.

Treasury Bonds Climb

United States Treasury bonds of long and intermediate maturities took another jump forward into record territory today, as brokers and institutional investors pondered the implications of the latest developments in Federal finance. The gains were unusually large for these obligations, and they stimulated a little interest in high grade corporate bonds. Speculative issues likewise showed small gains, and the trading closed on a note of general optimism. Turnover was $5,400,000.

The advance on long Treasury bonds ranged to slightly more than a point, but most issues advanced only 3/32 to 15/32 point. Dealings were relatively quiet, as holders do not care to let go at a time when no fresh supplies are likely. The short-dated issues had more of their "rights" value squeezed out of them, with losses of 4/32 to 6/32 point recorded. Guaranteed bonds of the farm and home corporations were improved. Best grade utility bonds were up in the corporate department, and some of the leading rails and industrials also responded to the demand for investments.

Rail Issues Firm

Among medium-priced carrier bonds a modest uptrend was noted, apparently because these issues are being taken as investments in the absence of available high grade bonds. Borderline and default rails were quiet and firm. Holding company issues did not vary much, while industrial convertibles also were dull. Local tractions drifted lower, but communciations and other special groups did well.

Scandinavian bonds were in demand in the foreign division, while small gains appeared also in Canadian and Australian obligations. The Polish issues advanced despite the lag in anti-aggression negotiations. Italian and German bonds attracted no buyers. Argentine issues developed fresh strength, and the default bonds of Latin-American origin also advanced.

Brighter Outlook For Business Seen By Nat'l City Bank

New York, June 2 (AP).—A brighter industrial outlook with "evidence that the slackening in domestic activity is not going as far as some had feared," was reported today by National City Bank of New York in its monthly business review.

"The European situation has been less acute," said the bank, commenting on trends over the past month. "Businessmen have been able to look ahead without as much reference to the menace of an early war, and other developments have directed attention to supporting factors.

"The coal strike settlement removed the danger of forced shutdowns of factories and utilities. Arrival of warm weather brought improvement in department store and automobile sales, at least sufficient to show that the pessimism of early April was overdone; and the business of the mail order houses has been exceptionally good throughout.

"Steel mills have taken orders, at cut prices, which will support operations at a higher level than previously estimated.

"Moreover," the bank continued, "the action of the market has been stimulating. High grade bonds, which were scarcely affected during the stock market drop, have advanced further, and stocks have moved up."

Curb Bonds

Total bond sales yesterday, $1,700,000; year ago, $916,000.

Dr. Todd Dies; Astronomer And Author

Tried to Communicate With Mars by Radio; Headed Expeditions

Dr. David Todd, 84, astronomer who attempted to establish radio communication with Mars in 1924, died Thursday in Lynchburg, Va., it was learned here yesterday. He was chief assistant of the United States Transit of Venus Commission at the Naval Observatory here from 1875 to 1878, and subsequently for 40 years was on the faculty of Amherst College.

Dr. Todd began his field research on Mars in 1907, when he went to Chile to photograph the planet from the Andean mountain-tops. In 1922, after he left Amherst, he organized a Mars expedition in the Bahama Islands, where he recorded on a photographic apparatus what purported to be radio messages from the planet.

C. F. Jenkins, of this city, inventor of a motion picture camera, helped him in this work, but the origin of the messages was never established.

Born in Lake Ridge, N. Y., he was graduated from Amherst College in 1875. The author of "New Astronomy" and several other astronomical works, he was best known for his work on eclipses.

He headed eclipse expeditions between 1878 and 1932 in Texas, Japan, West Africa, Tripoli, Dutch East Indies, Russia, Florida, mid-Atlantic, Mitchell Field, and Casco, Maine. In South America he first attempted to photograph the total eclipse of the sun from an airplane.

His wife, the former Mabel Loomis, also an astronomer, was the author of "Corona and Coronet," the journal of an eclipse expedition aboard Commodore A. C. James' yacht Coronet to Japan in 1896.

10 Get Diplomas At Kendall School for Deaf

Kendall School for the Deaf graduated ten junior high school students yesterday at exercises in the chapel at Gallaudet College. Dr. Percival Hall presented the certificates, and the Rev. J. E. Malloy pronounced the invocation, repeating it in sign language.

American Legion School Award medals for Americanism went to Helen Catherine Brodkin and Vincent Joseph Rabbitt, who had been voted by their class outstanding in the qualities of honor, integrity, and leadership. The medals were presented by Junior Vice Commander Mary Anne Kennedy and Comrade Edmund D. Winstead.

Others in the graduating class were Sarah Eugenia Lauck, Harold Victor Lomonosoff, Orval Joseph Berrios, Joseph Catpola, Milton Corman, Bernard Grant Davidson, Joseph Stanley Jarboe, and Patrick Joseph Murphy.

New Anglo-French Treaty Proposals Awaited by Soviet

Moscow, June 2 (AP).—Soviet Russia looked to Britain and France for the next move tonight after replying to the western powers on the latest British proposals for a three-power mutual assistance pact.

Moscow's reply, delivered during the day to the British and French ambassadors, was understood to have left it up to Paris and London to submit new propsoals.

Observers here saw indications in Premier-Foreign Commissar Molotoff's speech Wednesday and subsequent editorials in the Soviet press to support a belief that Moscow would be willing to join the British-French front if the three-power collaboration was extended to include the Far East.

Church Peace Union Assails Rise Of Bigotry in U. S.

Atlantic City, N. J. June 2 (AP).—The executive committee of the Church Peace Union issued a statement today condemning anti-Semitism, and "the organized campaign of Hitler."

"We," the statement read, "protest the rise of anti-Semitism in the United States as contrary to our American institutions and spirit of freedom. It threatens the basic ideals of all religions and the very security of democracy and religious liberty. We condemn the organized campaign of Hitler.

"We particularly condemn the reckless and inflammatory statements that have been made before the Congressional committee in Washington and are being made constantly over the radio."

Street Car Company Honors Downey, Cashier 50 Years

He Remembers When Horses Drew Them; Given Watch, $50

The rolling of street-car wheels through half a century must have filled the ears of George P. Downey yesterday.

Downey, one of the men who counts the company's money at the Seventh street car house, was visited by the president, E. D. Merrill; J. H Hanna, chairman of the board of directors and other officials, and congratulated on his fiftieth anniversary in the transit company's service.

Downey first settled himself in a lounge chair, brought in by the men of his division; then accepted a watch and chain and a purse of $50 from the board of directors. The gifts were presented by J. H. Stephens, vice president and manager of transportation, and J. H. Hanna, chairman of the board.

Downey reflected that he never had worked on the cars, but remembered the evolution from the horse-drawn knockers to the present streamlined jobs. And he isn't retiring; he expects to be there to see the futuristic models skim the avenues.

He got his job when he was 17 (his father had put in 47 years with the company), as a timekeeper with a construction gang, working before and after school and earning $5 a week and transportation. This, Downey observed, was like picking up money from the street in those days. After a year, he became a part time starter on the Seventh street cable line; then was appointed assistant receiver and later receiver and depot clerk.

Downey has been married twice and is the father of 12 children, 10 of whom are living. He has 14 grandchildren and two great grandchildren.

Deafness to 'F' and 'S' Sounds Slows Child in Learning to Talk

Pediatric Institute Told Such Youngsters Are Usually Neither Right Nor Left Handed, And Need to Be Trained to Use One or Other

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 2.—High frequency deafness, which is inability to hear high pitched sounds like S and F, explains why some children are slow in learning to talk.

Another unusual cause of the same slowness is word "blindness." Both were explained to the American Academy of Pediatricians today by Dr. Samuel T. Orton, of New York City.

He said there was no definite diagnosis for the high frequency deafness until a child was old enough to take tests by the audiometer, an electrical apparatus to test the hearing of each tone separately.

Cure Is Use of Hands

Children with this trouble, he declared, usually could be taught to supply the missing sounds by study of spelling and by training in forming sounds they did not hear.

Word blindness afflicts an occasional child whose hearing is normal. Dr. Orton explained that probably the child failed to recall correctly the sounds of words. For this reason it failed to recognize the meaning of words.

This trouble, he added, was likely to be licked with failure to be either right or left handed, as it appeared in children showing no clear-cut preference for using one hand or one foot predominantly.

Such indecision of movement means one side of the child's brain has not taken control of movements in the normal way. Training in giving preference to one hand is a treatment for the condition.

For word blindness, he said, it also helped to diagram words. He held that slowness in learning to talk was not a cause of worry unless it persisted. Then training to induce talking is needed to avoid danger that the child unable to talk to playmates, will develop the habit of playing by himself and become bashful.

Sulfapyridine, medicine's new remedy for pneumonia, has changed the entire aspect of this disease in childhood, Dr. Charles Hendee Smith, of New York, told the academy.

100 Youngsters Saved

He and other physicians told of more than 100 child lives saved in the last winter by sulfapyridine, a drug which is yet not a year old in medical practice.

Since last fall its use has spread widely over the civilized world. Among children, Dr. Smith said, the death rate has been high in infants, low in older children. The sulfapyridine saves many infants and shortens the course of illness of the older children.

All four were found in their bloody bedrolls, their skulls crushed by savage blows from a heavy weapon—probably a chunk of iron.

Postlude

By Rav C. B. Brown.

Columbia Light Opera Company presents Sidney Jones' musical play, "The Geisha," in Roosevelt High School auditorium Friday night, under the direction of Ethyl Manning. Cast of principal characters:

Mimosa San...Edith Hoffman Jones
Lady Constance Wynne
Frances Jackson
Molly Seamore....Mildred Gleeson
Reginald Fairfax....Clarke Paulsen
Marquis Imari.....Austin Gattis
Wun Hi.....Florenz Hinz
Juliette.....Lella Stanley

Maintaining the reputation it has established for hearty co-operation among its members and bright and snappy performances on the stage, the Columbia Light Opera Company enlarged its repertoire last evening with the presentation in Roosevelt High School auditorium of one of the few quasi-Japanese operettas that has ever seriously threatened the popularity of "The Mikado," namely, "The Geisha," which was written more than 40 years ago by Sidney Jones to the libretto of Owen Hall and the lyrics of Henry Greenbank. Following the premiere in London in 1896, this amusing and tuneful musical play had a noteworthy run of 760 performances, surpassing the first run of "The Mikado" by 88.

The reason why it has not kept up that lead probably lies not in the music but in the text. Sidney Jones was almost as inventive a melodist as Arthur Sullivan, but the librettist and the author of the lyrics could not rival the satiric wit of William Gilbert. Nevertheless, "The Geisha" is a lively and entertaining piece with a credible plot, plenty of catchy tunes and a lively atmosphere. One can ask no more than that for an evening's diversion, and the auditors last night gave every evidence of having a good time. Tonight there will be a second performance, which deserves a packed house in appreciation of what the Columbians are doing.

The story upon which the pleasant music is embroidered has for its setting the Japan of romance, kaleidoscopic kimonas and cherry blossoms. Mimosa San, Geisha No. 1 in the Tea House of Ten Thousand Joys, is coveted by the rascally Marquis Imari, ruler of the province, formulator of th elaws and general nuisance. Angered by the refusal of Wun Hi, the Chinese proprietor of the tea house, to release the girl from her contract, he orders the place closed for a breach of regulations and the girls sold at auction.

His plan to buy Mimosa San is frustrated by Lady Constance Wynne, who outbids him because she wishes to remove the fascinating girl from the attentions of a young British naval officer, Reginald Fairfax. Molly Seamore, the fiancee of Fairfax, complicates matters by disguising herself as a geisha, and is sold to Imari. If you have never seen the play and want to know how she gets out of that fix, you will have to discover it for yourself.

Since the Columbians do not favor the star system in prdouction, there shall be here no comparisons and ratings of the singing of the principals. They all acquitted themselves creditably, and the well trained chorus was prompt in attack. Special commendation must be awarded to the excellent characterizations of Florenz Hinz as Wun Hi and Austin Gattis, as Marquis Imari.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

An extremely expensive bit of misbidding is shown in this hand submitted by G. R., who went set 1,000 points at a contract of three no trump. Here are the cards and the bidding:

North
♠ K J 6 3
♡ None
◇ A J 7
♣ A Q J 10 5 4
South
♠ 7 5 4 2
♡ 10 6 4
◇ K 8 5

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
Pass	1 NT.	Dbl.	2 ♡
Pass	Pass	3 ♡	Pass
3 NT.	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

G. R. says:

"I, South, went down four tricks for 1,100 points. My partner said I was wrong in bidding three no trump without a stopper in hearts. I reasoned that I was keeping the bidding open. That with a no-trump opening, a free two-heart bid and my two passes, my partner should have known I had a 'bust' and that he should have shown a suit. Was I wring? And what should I have done under the circumstances? Was my partner's bidding correct?

"I certainly would appreciate a reply because he claims that every one he has asked agrees with him and that mine was certainly a 'dumb' bid. Definitely, there is something wrong with the bidding."

South was wrong in replying with three no trump. He should have bid three spades, telling his partner of the suit of which he held four cards—the information his partner was seeking.

No trump should not be bid in response to a take-out double or its big brother, the overcall of the adversaries' suit, unless a stopper is held in that suit and a no-trump contract seems the most desirable.

Lured by the Pied Piper

Pity the poor player who allows a kibitzer's querulous words to influence his play, for he shall know destruction.

A grand slam, redoubled, was the price a friend of I. B. F. paid for following the trifling tune of this particular Pied Piper. Here is the hand and the bidding:

South
♠ 7 4 3
♡ 9 8 6
◇ 10 5 4 2
♣ A 6 3

East	South	West	North
2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇	Pass
4 ◇	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
5 ♡	Pass	6 ◇	Pass
6 ♡	Pass	6NT	Pass
7 ♡	Dbl	Pass	Pass
Redbl	Pass	Pass	Pass

"During the bid of six no trump," writes I. B. F., "a kibitzer was heard to say (after East had bid seven hearts and was doubled) that West should have bid seven diamonds. Here is the problem: should South have led his club ace or the diamond suit?

"South actually led his diamond, as he assumed from the bidding (and conversation), with the rebid of diamonds by West, that West held six diamonds, and with the support offered by East that North held no diamonds at all.

"Is this logic far-fetched? As it turned out, West only held five diamonds and his partner three. The original bidder also held club king and jack."

Inasmuch as South's double was based on his possession of the club ace, he must not lose courage when the time comes to lead it. His ruminations concerning the diamond suit seem to be more an effort to bolster the bystander's remark than a serious change of thought.

South should put the comment, which incidentally was highly out of order, from his mind and hold fast to his original intention.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

IT'S COMMENCEMENT time for more than 10,000 Government workers, possibly a tenth of whom are graduating—from high school, college, law, etc.

Many of the graduates will continue at their same old jobs—luckier than the average graduate of the country. Some, however, will "break loose" to put out shingles of their own, form business partnerships, and such like

Under the streamlined procedure supposedly getting under way in the Government, Uncle Sam will be giving these ambitious souls a better return on their money than has been the case previously. The new personnel directors are supposed to see to it.

SPACE in the House Office Building, both old and new, and the Senate Office Building—as near as can be ascertained—has been quotaed out to the last inch, in preparation for the parade of the King and Queen.

The old saying, "can't keep a fellow from looking," will be untrue in Washington during the royal visit. Invitations to an HOB window space are prized by some lookers just as much as the crested cards to the British Embassy are by others. They'll be less tiring, surely.

THE WIFE of a Federal Trade Commission official has thought up a grand scheme for those who would gaze on the royal countenances. Her home is on the route the pair will follow on their return from Mount Vernon through Alexandria. So she asked some friends in for an outdoor lunch and a look-see. A ringside seat and sandwiches, too!

IN ONE of those "little" press releases for which the NLRB is becoming justly famous (100 pages and up), Charles Fahy, general counsel for the board, was quoted this week as saying that when plant labor elections are held "collective bargaining almost invariably results."

JOBS: Open competitive examinations for positions at the Washington Navy Yard have been announced by the Civil Service Commission. The positions include:

Blacksmith, electric bridge crane operator, blacksmith, boilermaker, electrician, drop forger, painter, coach painter, pipefitter, furnaceman, locomotive engineman, hoisting engineman, railroad conductor, millman, senior fireman and press operator.

Information about salaries, age limits and other qualifications is available at 916 G street northwest. Applications have to be filed with the recorder, Labor Board, at the Navy Yard, by June 7.

OHIOANS of the Washington area will celebrate the fifth anniversary of the founding of the Ohio Voters League at the Nightingale Nite Club, two miles south of Alexandria, Va., at a supper dance beginning at 8 p. m. Thursday. Former Gov. and Mrs. Martin L. Davey are expected to attend.

The Virginia Democratic Club of Washington will hold a watermelon feast at 8 p. m. Monday at 2949 Macomb street northwest.

The regular monthly meeting of the Retired Federal Employes Association will be held at 2 p. m. today in the Natural History Building, National Museum, Constitution avenue and Tenth street northwest.

Baseball games, music and dancing and a show replete with stunts and clowns to amuse the youngsters will be the order of the day and night at the outing of Naval Gun Factory employes at Marshall Hall, June 10.

Wilson Line steamers will leave Washington four times during the day to accommodate everybody's schedule. The boats leave at 10 a. m. and 2, 5 and 8:30 p. m. Tickets are selling at 50 cents for adults, 25 cents for children.

Bob Burns Says—

Somebody sent me a nice present which I think should be in every home. It's called "The Power of Concentration" and has 500 pages. But I can't read over two pages at a time before my mind starts to wander. But it'd sure help this country if everybody could master that book.

Uncle Fud never was very good at catchin' on to things. He use'ta go down to the grocery every day for ten years, watching two fellas play checkers. One day one of the players didn't show up, so the other one said, "Fud, how about playin' me a game?"

Fud said, "Sorry, brother, but I don't know the game."

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

Chapter XXVII

Peg wanted to ease the weight of her thoughts by confessing that living in the same world with Anthony was, in a way, torture. That she lay awake nights thinking about him, wondering, being hopelessly miserable because she loved him and she would never love any one else as long as she lived.

She wanted to tell Joan that Hewitt was making things very difficult for her these days. Hewitt, who had never drunk a great deal, was drinking heavily now. That when he was completely drunk he always found his way to Aunt Mehalie's, forced his way in and made a scene.

Just as he had made one unforgettably horrible scene that night at a club when he had staggered in alone and had found her at a table with Paul Stranyan. There had been the humiliating business after that of the fight, of Hewitt climbing up from the floor, holding his jaw where Paul's fist had landed; on the orchestra playing a jam number faster than swing and seven times louder than it should have been, and of waiters running in a panic to pull, to half drag Hewitt down the wide marble stairs and out into the street.

Paul Wants Her

She wanted to tell Joan she had almost made up her mind to marry Paul. Simply because he did love her so much and because, in a way, he needed her. With an incentive, with the roots of his life firmly imbedded in a happy marriage, Paul had a brilliant career ahead of him in the diplomatic service. His ambassador believed this, too, and had said so. Not in so many words. But with a twinkle in his dark eyes he had told her that his country was one that did not forbid the marriage of its attaches to foreign women.

She wanted to explain to Joan that Paul had always had too much money, the glamour of a title and a certain recklessness of blood that had appealed to women—married and single—and therefore they had been his undoing in the past.

She wanted to tell Joan everything about last night when she and Paul had gone out on the porch at the Chevy Chase Club and had stood there looking at the rain that was like myriad tiny spears boring into the grass.

She had told Paul, frankly, "I can't play at love with you, Paul. And, even if I could, I doubt if you could take it. If I married you you would know always that there was some one else who meant more to me than you . . ."

Paul had understood. "But, Peg, maybe after a while . . . a very long while . . ."

And she had said, quickly: "It wouldn't be good enough, Paul. It wouldn't be anywhere near good enough for you. And it might be a ghastly mistake. For us both."

"But I'm willing to chance it, Peg. I'm willing to wait for you to love me . . . or even to be satisfied with your liking me best of every one."

They had left it at that, nothing settled. But Peg told herself now: "Why not." For Paul could bring beauty into her life, ease and comfort and companionship. She couldn't go on breaking her heart like this for the sight of a pair of gray eyes and sandy hair that curled just a little and a long, slim body.

She thought: "I do like Paul. I like him better than any man I know. And I could make him happy. I could be a little happy myself and never completely lonely again. Why lose all happiness because the very best is gone. I could spend the rest of my life grateful to Paul because he had saved me from loneliness. And gratitude is very kin to love."

Yes, she wanted to tell Joan all this. But always she had had a healthy contempt for people who dragged their personal problems out into the open, who shoved their indecisions off on some one else's shoulder. So she told Joan none of this.

Joan looked at Peg now and saw that there wasn't any glow in her eyes or on her lips. All the light seemed to have left her except the crowning brightness of her hair as it curled about her slender face. She believed firmly that Peg was grieving for Hewitt. That all the gossip she had heard about Hewitt and Thalia when Hewitt had been vacationing in Florida must have been perfectly true. That was why Peg had broken the engagement. She couldn't look at Peg without realizing that something precious and vital had gone out of her.

Changing the Subject

She said then, very quickly: "Peg, everything will come out all right. It has to. It wouldn't be a decent world at all if it did horrible things to you. I don't believe I'd want any part of it if it did." In less than 24 hours Peg would look back on Joan having said this and she would wonder, dully, if Joan had had a prescient warning of impending tragedy.

And then Joan was saying, because she wanted awfully to change the subject, and Anthony was certainly a safe enough one:

"Look, Peg, in Anthony's last letter he sent me this . . ." she dug in her purse and brought out a snapshot; a snapshot of a very tall young man standing in the Tuilleries with Napoleon's stallions like silhouettes in bronze against the Paris sky. A girl hung on his arm. A possessive young girl with fair hair and a lovely, radiant face tilted up so that her eyes might meet his.

Joan said, handing it over to Peg: "It's grand of Anthony, isn't it? It makes me so damned homesick for him. Pretty good of Evangeline, too. But you never met Evangeline, did you, darling?" And then, all at once, Joan was completely silent, hardly breathing, staring at Peg.

Her Soul Bared

It was, she thought, like looking at a naked soul. In that moment Peg was unconscious of her presence, perhaps of her very existence. Her head was bent a little, the eyes were turned downward so that her lashes lay like fans on her pale cheeks.

The sensitive lips were pressed together firmly, but not enough to withhold a slight quiver.

Sharply Joan remembered a child she had seen years ago, crying bitterly, terribly, without making a sound. For one instant the little tortured face and Peg's face were incredibly alike, and the more so because both seemed utterly unrelated to youth.

And then Joan knew. She knew without a shadow of doubt that Peg loved Anthony. That it was too late. She had never talked with Anthony about Evangeline. She had been quite surprised to read of Anthony's engagement to Evangeline. But she knew that Anthony would never have gotten himself engaged to Evangeline Martin if he hadn't been in love with her to the exclusion of everything—and of everyone—else.

All the way back to Chevy Chase that afternoon Joan worried about Peg. She didn't know when Peg had fallen in love with Anthony. Only that she had. It was all very clear. Peg had broken her engagement to Hewitt because of Anthony and she was clinging to Paul Stranyan as any girl, on the rebound, might.

Joan tried to make herself believe that this wasn't so. She didn't want Peg to be in love with Anthony when it was all so hopeless. But Peg's face, her tortured eyes when she had looked at Anthony's snapshot told the whole story, more plainly than any words ever could.

Joan rode along in the bus that afternoon wondering what to do about it. She thought she might write to Anthony and tell him what she knew. But Peg's pride was something to be protected, not to be trampled on. Peg had been too proud to mention how she felt about Anthony and if she, Joan, wrote and said a single thing to give that carefully concealed secret away—and if Peg ever found out—it would put a barrier between them that could never be spanned.

Anyway, thought Joan, it would be useless to write Anthony. Anthony had loved Peg last Autumn. But months had passed since then, Evangeline had come back into his life. He had been a little in love with her in Shanghai; he was wholly in love with her now or he would never have asked her to marry him. She knew Anthony well enough to be very sure of that.

Joan took a pencil out of her purse then and began to scribble a note to Anthony on the back of an envelope. I might say something like this, she thought. And wrote very carefully: "Peg broke her engagement to Hewitt. She's obviously in love with some one else. But it certainly isn't Paul Stranyan or else she would be married to him at this point. Every one knows how Paul is pursuing her. And since she sees no one but Paul, I can't imagine who the lucky guy might be. Can you?"

Joan changed the wording of that note several times in her thoughts before she climbed off the bus at Chevy Chase Circle and started walking down the street where Duncan's bungalow sat, white and prim and Dutch Colonial beneath a group of cedars.

Little Stranger Coming

Her light lightened at that sight and for those moments Peg and Anthony and anything that even closely resembled trouble receded into her thoughts until they were quite gone. She never walked toward this tiny little place without feeling as if she were walking toward and exquisite dream.

Chidren played in the yards and children's faces clustered like a nosegay at the windows. And the the chatter of their voices in play was the best music of all. Particularly now.

For very soon Joan Patterson was going to be a mother. Early this morning, knowing she was going in town to meet Peg for luncheon, she had left quite early so that she could keep an appointment with Doctor Marktone, before luncheon. She had sat in his office that morning waiting. Her heart had thumped painfully as she had waited. There were other women in the waiting room with her, in all stages of expectancy. They had looked—pretty awful. For one moment she had been terrifically frightened. Little chills had run up and down her spine and her hands, in her lap, had turned as cold and clammy as lard.

Miss Talley Wanted Daughter's Birth Secret, Eckstrom Says

'Frantically Objected' to Her Going Into Films, Teacher-Husband Testifies; Defended Her When Called 'Terrible Actress,' He Says

By the United Press.

New York, June 2.—Intimate details of the ups and downs that accompanied the marriage of a singing teacher to his star pupil were disclosed in Supreme Court again today.

Adolph G. Eckstrom, the teacher, related his version of various episodes which preceded his separation suit against Marion Talley and her suit for custody of their daughter whom he calls Betty Ruth and she calls Susan.

Testifying before Referee Richard P. Lydon against Miss Talley's custody suit, Eckstrom:

Said she told him in 1936 that her love for him was dead and that she wanted a divorce.

Quoted her as asking him to keep the birth a secret because she feared it would "ruin her career permanently."

Declared that a Hollywood movie director and friend of Miss Talley had told him, when neither knew who the other was, that her picture "Follow Your Heart" was "one of the worst he had ever seen" and that she was a "terrible actress."

Eckstrom said he met the director, Aubrey Scotto, who testified for Miss Talley, early this year. Introduced as "Bob Brennan," he got chummy over cocktails with Eckstrom and passed judgment on Miss Talley's talent.

"I told him I didn't think her acting was that bad and that her singing was lovely," he defended, adding that when Scotto finally got hep to his identity his apologies were profuse.

In previous testimony a hotel clerk had said that Scotto and Miss Talley occupied adjoining rooms on one occasion when she stopped here.

Of Miss Talley's ashes-of-love pronouncement and request for a divorce Eckstrom said, biting his lip and raising his hand as if to stem tears that didn't come:

"I tried to dissuade her, but it was no use. She said she wanted her freedom without delay."

And of the Hollywood ambitions when Miss Talley was an expectant mother:

Threshing out financial aspects of the marriage brought out Eckstrom's denial that he ever "demanded" $150,000 from Miss Talley in return for a settlement of their marital affairs. Asked whether she ever shared her earnings "equally" with him, he said:

"I don't think so."

Tries to Kill Self, 2 Children

Cincinnati, June 2 (INS).—Elsie Sullender, 24, an unmarried mother; her son, Harold, 3, and a 6-month-old daughter, Elsie, were in a serious condition tonight in General Hospital after the mother gave the children poison and then took a large dose herself, according to police.

Authorities said the woman, jobless for a year, "didn't want to live or leave children behind" when she attempted to take her own life.

Bruises on the children's heads also revealed the mother had struck them with the blunt end of a hatchet in a desire to make death certain.

Forest Hills Citizens To Meet Monday Night

The Forest Hills Citizens Association will meet at the Ben W. Murch School at 8 p. m. Monday, and on June 12 at 6 p. m. will go to Pierce Mill picnic grove for a "family picnic supper," Leslie Boudinot Wright, president, announced yesterday.
